"Doctor," he asked, "do you think there is anything in the theory that alcohol is bad for the brain? A man was telling me the other day that the constant use of whisky resulted in time in the destruction of the tisues between the brain cells.

"There is no doubt about the correctness of the theory."

"I can prove that there isn't anything in it. I've been taking from two to three or four drinks a day for years."

"Well, bring on the proof you spoke of."

A MARVELOUS RECOVERY.

How a Chronic Invalid Regained Perfect Health.

Mrs. Ray Trusner, 30 West Third St., New Albany, Ind., says: "Kidney disease had rendered me a chronic invalid. I lay in bed unable to move hand or foot. My right limb was swollen to twice normal size. I looked the picture of death and my case puzzled the doctors. The kidney secretions were highly colored and scalded terribly. Marked improvement followed the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. In six weeks I was a well woman. My friends and relatives marvel at my recovery."

Remember the name—Doan's.

Talking to the Child.

"Mrs. X—— talks to little Madge just as Mr. X—— talks to their dog," said a little girl of a neighboring family. And it was indeed true. Mrs. X—— is a very well-meaning woman and would be greatly surprised if she should hear the foregoing statement. She has simply unconsciously acquired a harsh tone of voice in dealing with her children. This is altogether unnecessary and is not, as many mothers seem to think, a mark of good discipline. The mother whose manner is quiet but firm is generally a much more successful disciplinarian than the harsh-voiced mother who issues her commands in a dictatorial manner. Kindness never spoils children. It is flabby indecision, sometimes mistaken for kindness, which spoils them.

HOW A DOCTOR CURED SCALP DISEASE

"When I was ten or twelve years old I had a scalp disease, something like scald head, though it wasn't that. I suffered for several months, and most of my hair came out. Finally they had a doctor to see me and he recommended the Cuticura Remedies. They cured me in a few weeks. I have used the Cuticura Remedies, also, for a breaking out on my hands and was benefited a great deal. I haven't had any more trouble with the scalp disease. Miss Jessie F. Buchanan, R. F. D. 3, Hamilton, Ga., Jan. 7, 1909."

Kept with Barnum's Circus.

P. T. Barnum, the famous circus man, once wrote: "I have had the Cuticura Remedies among the contents of my medicine chest with my shows for the last three seasons, and I can cheerfully certify that they were very effective in every case which called for their use."

Even the Children.

Ex-Governor Pennypacker, condemning in his witty way the American divorce evil, told, at a Philadelphia luncheon, an appropriate story.

"Even our children," he said, "are becoming infected. A Kensington school teacher, examining a little girl in grammar, said:

"'What is the future of "I love?"'

"'A divorce,' the child answered promptly."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Partly Made Over.

"Weren't we engaged last summer?" inquired the girl.

"Your face is familiar," faltered the man.

"Well, I'll forgive you for not recognizing me. My hair and figure are new."

George McNeish Jr. and the editor and families accepted an invitation to spend a day with Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Mayne at their Maple Hill farm in Twin Lakes township. A LETTER FROM MISSOURI

Tarkio, Mo., Sept. 5, 1910.

Editor Klemme Times:

Dear Sir: If I remember right, my subscription expired about September 1st so you will find order enclosed for same. At the same time I will write a little about Northwest Missouri.

Tarkio is a town of about 2 560 inhabitants, located in the center of Atchison county, the northwestern county of the state. The town has a first class electric light plant, two telephone exchanges, water works, and an artificial ice factory, auto factory, the Midland Manufacturing Co. manufactures two-row cultivators and farm implements and machines. The town has six churches and no saloons. Two of the churches have pipe organs. The U. P. is now putting down 600 yards of carpet at $1.00 per yard. Tarkio College is located on a rise of ground to the west of the city, a beautiful campus overlooks the town. Marshall Hall is the college home for women, and a $25,000 Dormitory for men is now under construction, at which I put in a good share of my time at present, doing the finishing work.

Well, as to the farming conditions here, it's hard to beat. Some of the ground had nothing but corn for 40 years without change of crops. The first yield was 125 bu. per acre and the 40th was 90 bu. per acre. I suppose the Doctor from Canada has to be shown. Well I can do it. How does that compare with Hancock county, Doctor? There is no waste ground here, it is a rolling, well-drained slope to the west—the old Missouri River. The price of land is from $125 to $200 per acre. One farm 13 miles from town sold for $140; no buildings on it. As to fruit, it looks mighty good to me to see a wagon load of peaches stop at the door. Melons and apples are brought in the same way. My cousin brought some peaches from his farm last week; one measured 9½ inches in circumference. That's good enough for me, and they say it is not a fruit year on account of the late frost. I guess you felt it some up in Iowa too.

Come to Missouri.

Marion Harland and Dame Curtsey

For more than half a century Marion Harland has been writing on housewifely themes and answering the questions of women in a clear and kindly way that has made her name beloved from one end of the land to the other. Many who read her cheery and helpful page every week in the Sunday Chicago Record-Herald have no idea that she is 77 years old, for she still writes with all the vigor and discernment of a woman of half her years. Huge as the task may seem, she gives her personal attention to the vast correspondence that her position of expert adviser on household topics involves, and every question is answered directly by her. No other department of the Sunday Record Herald is more universally popular than hers.

Another department that pushes it closely, however, is Dame Curtsey's "Novelties in Entertainment," which has been hailed with joy by thousands of hostesses who feel the need of new ideas. Dame Curtsey, whose real name is Ellye Howell Glover, seems to have a genius for inventing fresh schemes for decorations, menus, games and all the details that lend zest to dinners and entertainments. She also answers questions pertaining to etiquette and good taste, and otherwise furnishes just the information often sought vainly by women.

When it is added that the Sunday Magazine of the Record-Herald is full of good stories and articles as interesting to women as to men, it is easy to see why that paper is the favorite among women.

Following a stormy session of the Illinois delegation to the national conservation congress at St. Paul the delegation adopted a resolution by a vote of 28 to 5 asking President Baker to name another member in place of Edward Hines, the Chicago lumberman, as chairman of the committee on credentials of the congress. It is practically a certainty that United States Senator Burrows was defeated for renomination at the Michigan Republican primaries by Congressman Charles E. Townsend of Jackson. Chase S. Osborn was nominated for governor by a large majority.

The Republicans won the state election in Vermont but the customary plurality of 30,000 is cut almost in half. The Democratic vote shows a substantial gain, while that of the Republicans has shrunk some twenty per cent. Rainy weather, the absence of local issues and absence of unanimity regarding the Republican candidate for governor are given as the causes.

BURNED TO DEATH

Explosion Causes Death of Three Children of Chas. Curry

ONLY A LITTLE BABE IS LEFT

Mother Poured Oil on Smouldering Charcoal While Ironing and Explosion Set Fire to Children's Clothing.

Perry, Ia., Sept. 10.—Three small sons of Charles Curry, a miner, were burned to death by the explosion of a kerosene can at their home in Scandia, a mining town near here.

The boys—Clayton, aged 8; Charles, aged 4, and Raymond, aged 2—were playing near the back porch of their house. In attempting to fill a charcoal burner Miss Carrie Coleman, an aunt, touched the fire with the kerosene can and the oil ignited instantly.

The burning oil enveloped the clothes of the children. The mother ran to the rescue. Despite her efforts the flames spread over the garments until there were three human torches. The two youngest died two hours later and the oldest expired in four hours.

Dr. Shaw and Dr. Farr were called but they could do little to relieve the agony of the tortured boys.

Mrs. Curry, the mother, was just inside the door when the explosion occurred. She rushed to help her children, letting her baby drop to the kitchen floor. In attempting to save the lives of her three sons she was badly burned and is now under a physician's care.

Charles Curry, the father, was at work in the Standard coal mine, where he is regularly employed. Mrs. Curry, Miss Coleman and the three boys were at the home, which is located east of the mining camp, near the banks of the Des Moines river.

Pythians Elect Officers.

Mrs. Grace Eichelberger of Fairbank was elected grand chief of the grand temple of the Pythian Sisters of Iowa.

Mrs. Eichelberger won in a close race with Mrs. Laura Skinner of Winterset. Mrs. Stella Harris of Fairfield was elected grand senior chief and Mrs. Effie Anderson of Dayton was elected to the position of grand junior chief. The roster of officers is as follows: Grand matron, Mrs. Ora D. Rogers, Boone; grand matron of records and correspondence, Mrs. Nellie E. Corlis, Independence; grand matron of finances, Miss Margaret France, Tipton; grand protecter, Miss Belle Latham, Des Moines; grand guard, Mrs. Ida Hamlin of Maquoketa.

Dedicate New $50,000 Church.

Marshalltown.—The new Central Church of Christ, now being completed at a cost of $50,000, will be dedicated on Sunday, Sept. 18. Rev. Dr. I. N. McCash of Cincinnati, O., formerly pastor of the University Place Church of Christ, Des Moines, will deliver the dedicatory sermon. It is expected that the church will be dedicated free from debt, as only $15,000 of the cost is now unpledged. The new pipe organ will be dedicated with a recital on Sept. 16.

Waterloo Man a Flaming Torch.

Waterloo.—While repairing a locomotive at the Illinois Central shops, a torch ignited the greasy clothing worn by J. Lyons. He ran from the round house a human torch, with the other employes after him. After running a block they overtook him and threw him into a cinder pit, where the flames were smothered. He was badly burned, but will survive.

New Officers Are Elected.

Indianola.—At the convention of the O. Y. P. C. U. here, officers were chosen for the ensuing years as follows: President, Dean McKee, Winterset; vice president, Cecil Taylor, Newton; secretary, Agnes Brown, Indianola; treasurer, Sara H. McIlrath, Grinnell; corresponding secretary, Rev. S. F. Sharpe, Monroe.

Municipal League Convention.

Fort Dodge, Ia., Sept. 10.—Mayor S. J. Bennett, president of the Iowa League of Municipalities, has announced the following committee appointments for the present year, the state convention being held at Waterloo, Sept. 20, 21 and 22:

Another Wreck Suit Filed.

George W. Garretson, administrator of the estates of Rose Brown, Leonore Brown and Eva Brown, has sued the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad for $5,000 for each of the lives of the persons named, who were among the fifty-two persons killed in the wreck near Green Mountain last March. The first named was the wife and the last two the daughters of Alfred X. Brown, proprietor of the Pure Food Candy kitchen, who also lost his life in the same wreck, but was not killed outright as the others were. The disaster wiped out this entire family except two daughters—Miss Vera and Miss Dora Brown, who recently went to Kansas City to live with relatives.

New Disease Among Cattle.

Logan.—A disease has made its appearance affecting one or more in the herds of cattle scattered over the western parts of the state. In the majority of cases the disease in the beginning yields readily to treatment. The beginning of the disease is marked by a fever, disinclination to eat and the animal loses flesh rapidly. In the advanced stage there is ulceration of the mouth and the tongue becomes swollen and protrudes. In some instances the feet appear affected. Observations indicate that the disease may be contagious and that the outbreak may be stamped out by isolating the affected animal.

W. C. T. U. Elects Officers.

Mount Vernon.—The thirteenth district of the Woman's Christian Temperance union of Iowa closed a very successful convention here. The officers elected for the ensuing year were: Mrs. Minnie L. Skinne, Cedar Rapids, president; Mrs. George H. Thompson, Waterloo, vice president; Miss Inez McKenzie, Hazelton, recording secretary; Mrs. Sarah Cotton, Cedar Falls, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Edith Bergen, Shellsburg, treasurer.

Old Settlers at Clinton.

Clinton.—The report of President Virtus Lund, given at the annual picnic of the Clinton County State and Territorial Pioneers, shows that about 100 people who were eligible to membership in the association, by reason of age and duration of residence in the county, passed away during the past twelve months.

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

...ain the hidden head shot forth from its concealment. A sudden turn and Captain Plum would certainly have been startled. For it was a weird object, this spying head; its face dead-white against the dense green of the verdure, with shocks of long white hair hanging down on each side, framing between them a pair of eyes that gleamed from cavernous sockets, like black glowing beads. There was unmistakable fear, a tense anxiety in those glittering eyes as Captain Plum walked toward the paper, but when he paused and stretched himself, the sole of his boot carelessly trampling the discarded letter, the head disappeared again and there came another satisfied bird-like chuckle from the gloom of the thicket.

Captain Plum now put on his coat, buttoned it close to conceal the weapons in his belt, and walked along the narrow water-run that crept like a white ribbon between the lake and the island wilderness. No sooner had he disappeared than the bushes and vines behind the rock were torn asunder and a man wormed his way through them. For an instant he paused, listening for returning footsteps, and then with startling agility darted to the beach and seized the crumpled letter.

The person who for the greater part of the afternoon had been spying upon Captain Plum from the security of the thicket was to all appearances a very small and a very old man, though there was something about him that seemed to belie a first guess at his age. His face was emaciated; his hair was white and hung in straggling masses on his shoulders; his hooked nose bore apparently the infallible stamp of extreme age. Yet there was a strange and uncanny strength and quickness in his movements. There was no stoop to his shoulders. His head was set squarely. His eyes were as keen as steel. It would have been impossible to have told whether he was fifty or seventy. Eagerly he smoothed out the abused missive and evidently succeeded even in the failing light in deciphering much of it, for the glimmer of a smile flashed over his thin features as he thrust the paper into his pocket.

Without a moment's hesitation he set out on the trial of Captain Plum. A quarter of a mile down the path he overtook the object of his pursuit.

"Ah, how do you do, sir?" he greeted as the younger man turned about upon hearing his approach. "A mighty fast pace you're setting for an old man, sir!" He broke into a laugh that was not altogether unpleasant, and boldly held out a hand. "We've been expecting you, but—not in this way. I hope there's nothing wrong?"

Captain Plum had accepted the proffered hand. Its coldness and the singular appearance of the old man who had come like an apparition chilled him. In a moment, however, it occurred to him that he was a victim of mistaken identity. As far as he knew there was no one on Beaver island who was expecting him. To the best of his knowledge he was a fool for being there. His crew aboard the sloop had agreed upon that point with extreme vehemence and to a man had attempted to dissuade him from the mad project upon which he was launching himself among the Mormons in their island stronghold. All this came to him while the little old man was looking up into his face, chuckling, and shaking his hand as if he were one of the most important and most greatly to be desired personages in the world.

"Hope there's nothing wrong, Cap'n?" he repeated.

"Right as a trivet here, dad," replied the young man, dropping the cold hand that still persisted in clinging to his own. "But I guess you've got the wrong party. Who's expecting me?"

The old man's face wrinkled itself in a grimace and one gleaming eye opened and closed in an understanding wink.

"Ho ho, ho!—of course you're not expected. Anyway, you're not expected to be expected! Cautious—a born general!—mighty clever thing to do. Strang should appreciate it." The old man gave vent to his own approbation in a series of inimitable chuckles. "Is that your sloop out there?" he inquired interestedly.

Something in the strangeness of the situation began to interest Captain Plum. He had planned a little adventure of his own, but here was one that promised to develop into something more exciting. He nodded his head.

"That's her."

"Splendid cargo," went on the old man. "Splendid cargo, eh?"

"Pretty fair."

"Powder in good shape, eh?"

"Dry as tinder."

It Was a Dirty, Much-Worn Letter.

"And balls—lots of balls, and a few guns, eh?"

"Yes, we have a few guns," said Captain Plum. The old man noted the emphasis, but the darkness that had fast settled about them hid the added meaning that passed in a curious look over the other's face.

"Odd way to come in, though—very odd!" continued the old man, gurgling and shaking as if the thought of it occasioned him great merriment. "Very cautious. Level business head. Want to know that things are on the square, eh?"

"That's it!" exclaimed Captain Plum, catching at the proffered straw. Inwardly he was wondering when his feet would touch bottom. Thus far he had succeeded in getting but a single grip on the situation. Somebody was expected at Beaver island with powder and balls and guns. Well, he had a certain quantity of these materials aboard his sloop, and if he could make an agreeable bargain—

The old man interrupted the plan that was slowly forming itself in Captain Plum's puzzled brain.

"It's the price, eh?" He laughed shrewdly. "You want to see the color of the gold before you land the goods. I'll show it to you. I'll pay you the whole sum tonight. Then you'll take the stuff where I tell you to. Eh? Isn't that so?" He darted ahead of Captain Plum with a quick alert movement. "Will you please follow me, sir?"

For an instant Captain Plum's impulse was to hold back. In that instant it suddenly occurred to him that he was lending himself to a rank imposition. At the same time he was filled with a desire to go deeper into the adventure, and his blood thrilled with the thought of what it might hold for him.

"Are you coming, sir?"

The little old man had stopped a dozen paces away and turned expectantly.

"I tell you again that you've got the wrong man, dad!"

"Will you follow me, sir?"

"Well, if you'll have it so—damned if I won't!" cried Captain Plum. He felt that he had relieved his conscience, anyway. If things should develop badly for him during the next few hours no one could say that he had lied. So he followed light-heartedly after the old man, his eyes and ears alert, and his right hand, by force of habit, reaching under his coat to the butt of his pistol. His guide said not another word until they had traveled for half an hour along a twisting path and stood at last on the bald summit of a knoll from which they could look down upon a number of lights twinkling dimly a quarter of a mile away. One of these lights gleamed above all the others, like a beacon set among fireflies.

"That's St. James," said the old man. His voice had changed. It was low and soft, as though he feared to speak above a whisper.

"St. James!"

The young man at his side gazed down silently upon the scattered lights, his heart throbbing in a sudden tumult of excitement. He had set out that day with the idea of resting his eyes on St. James. In its silent mystery the town now lay at his feet.

"And that light—" spoke the old man. He pointed a trembling arm toward the glare that shone more powerfully than the others. "That light marks the sacred home of the king!" His voice had again changed. A metallic hardness came into it, his words were vibrant with a strange excitement which he strove hard to conceal. It was still light enough for Captain Plum to see that the old man's black, beady eyes were startlingly alive with newly aroused emotion.

"You mean—"

"Strang!"

He started rapidly down the knoll and there floated back to Captain Plum the soft notes of his meaningless chuckle. A dozen rods farther on his mysterious guide turned into a bypath which led them to another knoll, capped by a good-sized building made of logs. There sounded the grating of a key in a lock, the shooting of a bolt, and a door opened to admit them.

"You will pardon me if I don't light up," apologized the old man as he led the way in. "A candle will be sufficient. You know there must be privacy in these matters—always. Eh? Isn't that so?"

Captain Plum followed without reply. He guessed that the cabin was made up of one large room, and that at the present time, at least, it possessed no other occupant than the singular creature who had guided him to it.

"It is just as well, on this particular night, that no light is seen at the window," continued the old man as he rummaged about a table for a match and a candle. "I have a little corner back here that a candle will brighten up nicely and no one in the world will know it. Ho, ho, ho!—how nice it is to have a quiet little corner sometimes! Eh, Captain Plum?"

At the sound of his name Captain Plum started as though an unexpected hand had suddenly been laid upon him. So he was expected, after all, and his name was known! For a moment his surprise robbed him of the power of speech. The little old man had lighted his candle, and, grinning back over his shoulder, passed through a narrow cut in the wall that could hardly be called a door and planted his light on a table that stood in the center of a small room, or closet, not more than five feet square. Then he coolly pulled Captain Plum's old letter from his pocket and smoothed it out in the dim light.

Concrete Facts.

Pulverized wood is sometimes mixed with cement for making what is known as wood concrete. This is lighter than concrete that is made with sand. Straw, seaweed and hay are also pulverized for use instead of wood. The pulverized product is very much like sawdust. The chief advantage of wood concrete over ordinary concrete is that it is soft enough to permit of nails being driven into it.

NOT THE TIME FOR THAT

Scotsmen Objected to Mixture of Good Whisky and Religious Conversation.

Owen Seaman, editor of Punch, was the principal guest at a dinner of the London Authors' club recently, which was followed by a discuasion on "Humor." Mr. Seaman began with a story deprecating the spoiling of a good dinner by any discussion at all.

There were three characters in the story—a bluebottle and two Scotsmen. The story at once struck a note of probability by showing the Scotsmen drinking whisky. The bluebottle buzzed on the pane; otherwise silence reigned.

This was broken by one of the Scotsmen trying to locate the bluebottle with zoological exactitude. Said the Scotsman:

"Sandy, I'm thinking if yon fly is a birdie or a beastie."

The other replied: "Man, don't spoil good whisky with religious conversation."

Outlining Treatment.

"I want you to take care of my practise while I am away."

"But, doctor, I have just graduated. Have had little experience."

"You don't need it with my fashionable patients. Find out what they have been eating and stop it. Find out where they have been summering and send 'em somewhere else."

PRESSED HARD.
Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in a Southern state says: "My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum. I was so pleased with it that, after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal; the whole family liked it so well that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but in a more marked degree in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

SOME SURPRISE

Hereafter, if anyone tells you that a woman can't keep a secret, or a man either for that matter, you tell them you know better. It now transpires that a young man and a young lady of Klemme have kept a secret for nearly three months at least, and an important one, too, for them.

It has come to our ears that Mr. S. H. Day and Miss Esther Lau were married on the 29th of last June at Osage, Iowa. They went to Clear Lake and Mason City and from there on up to Osage where they were quietly married, then they came back to Klemme and resumed the even tenor of their separate ways and no one was the wiser, until last week when they concluded to let the relatives in on the news. These young people are well and favorably known here where they have both been reared, and both are very deserving and popular among their acquaintances. We understand that they expect to leave soon for the state of Washington to make their home. The Times joins the many friends of this worthy couple in wishing them abundant happiness and prosperity.

A Good Position

Can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway Telegraphy. Since the 8-hour law became effective, and since the Wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of R. R. and Wireless officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Davenport, Ia., Cincinnati, O., Portland, Ore., or Memphis, Tenn. 7-

Six automobiles filled with Britt boosters were in Klemme a short time last Monday afternoon advertising the Hancock County Fair to be held at Britt on September 20, 21, 22 and 23. The famous Bailey drum corps was with the bunch and favored our people with a few choice operatic selections.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stille have again been called upon to mourn the loss of their only child, a son, aged 10 months and 13 days who was called home to its Heavenly Father last Sunday, September 11th. Funeral services were held from the home on Monday afternoon and a large number of sympathizing friends and neighbors followed the remains of the little one to its last resting place in Klemme cemetery. This is the third time these parents have had to part with an only child and the bereavement to them is sad indeed The sympathy of the whole community is with them in their affliction.

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her

Knoxville, Iowa. — "I suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more and was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and am glad to say that your medicines and kind letters of directions have done more for me than anything else and I had the best physicians here. I can do my work and rest well at night. I believe there is nothing like the Pinkham remedies." — Mrs. CLARA FRANKS, R. F. D., No. 3, Knoxville, Iowa.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and suffering women owe it to themselves to at least give this medicine a trial Proof is abundant that it has cured thousands of others, and why should it not cure you?

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

Red Cross Christmas Seals.

Arrangements for the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals for 1910 have been announced by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and the American Red Cross. "A Million for Tuberculosis" will be the slogan of the 1910 campaign. Two features of the sale this year are unique and will bring considerable capital to the tuberculosis fighters. The American National Red Cross is to issue the stamps as in former years, but this organization will work in close co-operation with the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which body will share in the proceeds of the sales. The charge to local associations for the use of the national stamps has been reduced also from 20 per cent. to 12½ per cent., which will mean at least $50,000 more for tuberculosis work in all parts of the United States. The stamps are to be designated as "Red Cross Seals" this year and are to be placed on the back of letter instead of on the front.

Speaking of Fires.

Roy Bone, a brother of United States District Attorney Harry Bone, several years ago was a reporter on the Wichita Beacon. In going to a fire one of the members of the fire department was thrown from a hose cart and killed. Bone wrote a head, with this as the first deck: "Gone to His Last Fire."

The piece got into the paper and Bone was promptly "fired."—Kansas City Journal.

According to Iowa Labor Commissioner's Biennial Report

POORER WAGES BEING PAID

Average Day's Work Over Ten Hours, and Average Salary Last Two Years Was $1,062 for Men and $457 for Women.

Des Moines, Sept. 10.—During the years 1906-7 fewer men were employed in the workshops and factories of Iowa shorter hours were worked and better wages were paid on the average than during the years 1908-9.

This is shown by figures compiled by State Labor Commissioner Van Duyn for use in his biennial report on labor conditions in Iowa to Governor Carroll. The report is due Oct. 1 and is rapidly nearing completion.

In 1906-7, 1,100 employers made reports to the state labor commissioner, showing that there were 49,037 persons employed in the factories and mills of Iowa, of which number 41,135 worked for wages and 7,902 were on salary.

For this report covering the years 1908-9, employers of men to the number of 1,442 made reports, showing that 75,864 workmen were employed, of which 66,927 were wage workers and 8,937 salaried employes.

During the past two years the average day's work of the workmen of Iowa was a little over ten hours, while during the two years prior the average working day was a fraction over nine hours. During 1906-7 the workmen labored on an average of 298 days in the year and in the past two years they have worked an average of 301 days.

During 1906-7 the average salary of men was $1,101.36 and of women $468.49, while during 1908-9 the average salary of the men was $1,062.52 and of the women, $457.84.

In the past four years the per cent of the money earned by men and women, comparatively, has been about the same, the men earning about 91 per cent of all the money paid employes and the women getting the other 9 per cent.

In the past two years the wage earners of Iowa have been paid a total of $40,547,604.91 and the salaried people a total of $8,527,054.92.

During the two years prior the wage earners received $22,180,542.68.

Government Official Praises Fair.

According to George M. Rommel, chief of the animal husbandry division of the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture, Iowa had the best state fair this year of any fair that he has ever seen. Mr. Rommel has been in attendance at the fair as a judge of live stock, being known as an expert in all lines of stock. For several years he has been at the head of the animal husbandry division and has been sent by the United States to different foreign countries to study the conditions of stock raising.

"I have been to fairs in many parts of the United States," said Mr. Rommel, "and I think that the Iowa fair this fall is far ahead of anything that ever I have seen in every way. I wish especially to praise the live stock which is shown. Some of the animals were without equal."

Mr. Rommel is a former Iowa boy, and a son of Dr. Arthur Rommel, dean of the Iowa Wesleyan conservatory of music. Mr. Rommel is a graduate of Iowa Wesleyan, and later took his agricultural course at Iowa State college at Ames.

King's Daughters to Meet.

Members of the state organization of King's Daughters will assemble in Des Moines for their state convention on Oct. 12, 13 and 14. Among the speakers will be Miss L. Libby of New York, vice president of the national organization. Mrs. Beatrice Whitney of Detroit, Mich., a noted philanthropist, is expected also. The convention will be held at the Central Presbyterian church and the three Des Moines circles of the organization will entertain the visitors.

Road Accedes to Demand.

According to word received at the state house, the Milwaukee railroad has acceded to the demands of the railway commission in the matter of the Davenport coal rates and accommodation for coal shipments. By this action the order given by Judge Brennan which was later suspended by an order of Supreme Judge Evans will be obeyed without further litigation.

CARPENTERS' MEET PROGRAM.

Elaborate Entertainment During Convention, Sept. 19 to Oct. 10.

Des Moines, Sept. 10.—So elaborate a program of entertainment has been arranged for the delegates who attend the carpenters' national convention in Des Moines from Sept. 19 to Oct. 10, that Frank Duffy of Indianapolis, general secretary, has declared that he fears they will have little time to transact the business of the meeting.

The program for the convention has been announced by the local committee which has the affair in charge. "Something Doing All the Time," seems to have been the slogan of the committee when the schedule was made. An endless round of entertainment has been arranged for the first two weeks of the convention.

The souvenir program is a model of the printers' art. It contains a history of the city of Des Moines written by Tacitus Hussey, a history of the Iowa labor bureau written by State Labor Commissioner E. W. Van Duyn and a historical sketch of the labor movement in Des Moines by A. L. Urick, president of the Iowa federation of Labor.

Following is the program for Monday, Sept. 19, the opening day of the convention:

9:30—Monster parade starts from in front of the Savery hotel.

10:30—Opening ceremonies at the Auditorium.

Convention called to order by J. C. Walker, chairman of the local convention committee.

Devotion, the Rev. Orien Fifer of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church.

Address of welcome by Gov. B. F. Carroll in behalf of the state of Iowa.

Address of welcome by Mayor J. R. Hanna in behalf of the city of Des Moines.

Address of welcome by B. F. Kauffman in behalf of the commercial organizations of Des Moines.

Address of welcome by A. L. Urick, president of the Iowa Federation of Labor.

Address of welcome by E. W. Van Duyn, commissioner of the Iowa bureau of labor statistics.

Response by Frank Duffy, international secretary.

8 p. m.—Get acquainted program at the Auditorium.

Business sessions will be held each week day at the Auditorium with the exception of Saturday, Sept. 24, when the delegates and their wives will go to Ames as the guests of the local union to spend the day at the agricultural college.

On Tuesday, Sept. 20, at 8 o'clock, an entertainment will be given by Local union No. 106 at the Auditorium. The next evening the Trades and Labor assembly will entertain. On Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock the women will be the guests of the local committee at a theater party. In the evening all the visitors will be the guests of I. Ruben at his theaters, the Star and the Lyric.

On Friday, Sept. 23, the Building Trades council entertains at the Auditorium at 8 o'clock. Special services will be held in all churches on Sunday. On Monday they again will be the guests of Mr. Ruben at his theaters. On Wednesday the delegates and their wives at the invitation of the Commercial club, will spend the afternoon at the army tournament. On Thursday the biennial banquet will be held at the Coliseum.

Big Oats Field at Eldora.

"At Eldora we will have the largest yield of oats in the history of the institution," said Judge G. S. Robinson of the state board of control, who visited the reform school on his last trip of inspection to the state hospitals, "There will be between fifty-five and sixty bushels to the acre and there are nearly one hundred acres."

Judge Robinson described the corn prospects as fine at the state schools. "The potatoes will be comparatively small this season, however, because of the drouth," he said. "The pastures are dried out, but on the whole the oats and corn will be at least average."

New Armory in Clarinda.

Members of the Clarinda National guard have opened a new $25,000 armory the event being under the auspices of the citizens of the town. About Oct. 1 the military house warming will be given, Governor Carroll and the officers of the regimental staff having received invitations to be present.

Fairfield has started the erection of an armory. The building when completed will cost $25,000. The two new buildings will be about the best in the state

George Hahn, C. & N. W. conductor, Arbor Ave., West Chicago, Ill., says: "I was thrown from a car down a 25-foot embankment and my kidneys were badly bruised. Kidney trouble developed and for a whole year, I was unable to work. I suffered agonizing pains in my back and the kidney secretions were in terrible condition. My vitality gradually diminished and the doctor's treatment failed to help. When in despair I began with Doan's Kidney Pills and soon improved. Continued use cured me and at present my health is excellent."

Vermont Thrift.

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, editor of the Boston Transcript, is a great admirer of the thrift of the Vermonters, but thinks sometimes they carry it too far.

O'Brien was up in Vermont last summer and went to dinner with a friend who had some political aspirations. As they came to the door he heard the lady of the house say to the hired girl: "I see Mr. Jones has somebody with him for dinner. Take those two big potatoes down to the cellar and bring up three small ones."

We have done away with this wholesale waste of money. We sell direct to dealers by letter and make 2-cent stamps do the work of salesmen. The thousands of dollars saved has been spent on high grade foreign leathers and other quality materials that others can't afford. That's why "Six Months" shoes CAN be guaranteed.

...RIES TO KILL SELF

...N SHOT HIMSELF IN DENVER

...ell Hess' Death In Denver Was ... Cause of Father's Action at Os... kaloosa—Other Members of Family Prostrated

Des Moines, Sept. 12.—O. G. Hess, a wealthy retired farmer of Oskaloosa, attempted to kill himself by cutting his throat Friday night when the news arrived from Denver that his son, Cecil Hess, aged 24 years, of Des Moines, had committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. Other members of the Hess family, according to telegrams received in Des Moines, are prostrated with grief. It is said that the elder Hess was kept under guard by friendly neighbors all night after surgeons had dressed his wounds.

Cecil Hess was formerly a student in the medical department of Drake university. He was a football player and prominent in all athletics. A year ago he took up his studies in Denver. A telegram from Denver said that on Friday he had killed himself in the presence of his landlady, Mrs. Denny, giving as his reason for the deed, his failure in his examinations. In the young man's pocket was found a telegram from Miss Mildred Stults of 1353 West Twenty-sixth street, one of Hess' friends when he was in school here. The telegram reads, "Come at once. Wire me when you arrive."

Miss Stults' father, Dr. Mallard Stults, was formerly a practicing physician of Des Moines. He is now in Wiota, Ia. Mrs. Stults refused to allow her daughter to see anyone Saturday.

CONFERENCE TO FAIRFIELD

Place for Next Meeting Chosen by Methodists at Pella—Six Candidates for Ministry.

Pella, Ia., Sept. 12.—The Iowa Methodist Episcopal conference has fixed the place of the annual meeting for next year at Fairfield. Invitations were received also from Oskaloosa and Newton. President E. A. Schell of Iowa Wesleyan university read his annual report to the conference, which then raised $2,750 for a new heating plant for the college to replace the sixty stoves now in use. In his report Dr. Schell vigorously condemned the proposal of the state educational board to classify the colleges of the state on the basis of the amount of endowment in hand.

At the Iowa conference the following young men were received on trial as candidates for the ministry: Edward Stodghill, C. L. Rabaugh, Alfred Barker, Jacob Vissinger, Gordon B. Cox, Alvah Huff and James A. Wilson.

The bishop and his cabinet held a meeting Saturday afternoon at which it is thought final arrangements concerning the appointments were made.

MILL GRANGE HOLDS REUNION

Pioneer Delaware County Organization, Formed in 1872, Holds Annual Field Day Meet.

Manchester, Ia., Sept. 12.—Gathering in the beautiful grove of oaks at the fair grounds north of the city, 100 members of Jones Mill grange, the pioneer Delaware county organization formed here in 1872, spent Saturday in the enjoyment of the pleasant social features and instructive discussion of agricultural topics which characterize the annual field day granger gatherings. Ideal autumnal weather permitted the participation of the grangers in a genuine, old-time picnic dinner.

The meeting was addressed by Oliver Wilson, national lecturer of the grange, Dr. E. E. Red, president of Lenox college, at Hopkinton, Ia., and by Senator R. W. Tirrill of Manchester.

The 1910 officers of Jones Mill grange are: H. Sabin, master; Mrs. Fred Munson, overseer; H. B. Brown, secretary and treasurer; M. E. Blair, steward; A. E Meads, assistant steward; Mrs. Susan Mead, ladies' assistant steward, and Seth Brown, lecturer.

Lad Falls to His Death.

Webster City, Ia., Sept. 12.—While playing in the second story of the Blairsburg school building Arthur Walrath, the 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Walrath fell from the open window and was instantly killed. The boy's neck was broken.

BREAD MADE WITHOUT FLOUR

French Idea That Is Not Likely to Become Popular With American Housewives.

We have horseless carriages and fireless cookers, but the latest innovation is "flourless bread." In the new process the necessity of milling the grain is eliminated, the wheat being used as it comes from the thrashing machine.

The idea is that of a concern in Paris, and the machine developed by it transforms the wheat into dough by the following means:

"The machine consists mainly of a large screw turning loosely in a case on whose inner surface is a screw thread running in the opposite direction. Between the main threads on the cylinder are smaller threads and the depth of the groove between the main threads grows progressivly smaller from one end to the other, so that it will hold the entire wheat grain as it enters the machine and will accommodate only the pulverized wheat at the exit.

"The wheat must first be prepared for breadmaking by a thorough washing, after which about a pint of tepid water to a pound of grain is added, and the whole is allowed to stand about six hours. At the end of this time the grains of wheat have swollen to double their ordinary size.

"It is then mixed with the necessary quantity of yeast and salt and poured into the machine. It falls between the threads of the moving screw, which crush the envelope and body of the grain, making of them a homogeneous mixture which just before leaving the screws forms a smooth paste.

"The work of kneading is terminated by the operation of a glider, formed of two parallel surfaces. One of these surfaces is the extremity of the movable screw, while the other is fixed to the contrary screw and has a central hole through which the dough escapes in the form of a continuous roll.

"The dough, on issuing from the machine, is put into baskets, where it remains until it begins to rise. It is then divided into long loaves and placed on a table until the moment when it is to be placed in the ovens."

Commenting on the new process, the writer says that while it seems to be new, and really is when used on a large scale, it yet is a step backward to the crude break-making methods of the ancients. Neither will the idea become popular, the writer thinks, for he says:

"In 100 years civilized man has struggled up from the brown and black bread of the peasant to the white bread of the rich. He is not going back to the bread of the eighteenth century."

The Home

Stuffed potatoes are made by mixing cheese and bread crumbs in with the contents.

When boiling fresh potatoes try putting a sprig of mint in the water to give a delicious flavor to the vegetables.

Plaster figures in hard or alabaster finish are easily cleaned by dipping a stiff toothbrush in gasoline and scrubbing into all the crevices.

After the weekly washing rub a little vinegar and spirits of camphor over the hands. This will keep the hands in good condition summer and winter.

Rainy Day Hints.

When there is danger of a wet carpet from the overflow of dripping umbrellas on rainy days put a large sponge in the bottom of the umbrella stand to absorb moisture.

If you have a stand of china which is broken easily put in the bottom of it a rubber mat or rubber tubing coiled into a flat the desired size.

Never put an umbrella carelessly into a stand or you may thrust it through the silk of one already there. Many a good umbrella is ruined in this way.

Rice Jelly.

One cup of boiled rice, one-half cup of gelatine, dissolved in one-half cup of cold water.

Whip one pint of cream, add two-thirds cup of powdered sugar, one teaspoon of vanilla, rice and gelatine, stirring carefully from bottom and sides of dish. Pour into dish to be served in, placing tumbler in center. Set aside to cool and when needed, remove tumbler and fill the cavity with any kind of fruit desired. May have sauce or whipped cream if desired. A nice dessert at any time.

STRANGE.

"Is the proprietor in? I want to get some screen doors."

"He's in, but he's out o' doors."

TINY BABY'S PITIFUL CASE

"Our baby when two months old was suffering with terrible eczema from head to foot, all over her body. The baby looked just like a skinned rabbit. We were unable to put clothes on her. At first it seemed to be a few mattered pimples. They would break the skin and peel off leaving the underneath skin red as though it were scalds. Then a few more pimples would appear and spread all over the body, leaving the baby all raw without skin from head to foot. On top of her head there appeared a heavy scab a quarter of an inch thick. It was awful to see so small a baby look as she did. Imagine! The doctor was afraid to put his hands to the child. We tried several doctors' remedies but all failed.

"Then we decided to try Cuticura. By using the Cuticura Ointment we softened the scab and it came off. Under this, where the real matter was, by washing with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment, a new skin soon appeared. We also gave baby four drops of the Cuticura Resolvent three times daily. After three days you could see the baby gaining a little skin which would peel off and heal underneath. Now the baby is four months old. She is a fine picture of a fat little baby and all is well. We only used one cake of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. If people would know what Cuticura is there would be few suffering with eczema. Mrs. Joseph Kossmann, 7 St. John's Place, Ridgewood Heights, N. Y., Apr. 30 and May 4, '09."

Unfair.

Senator John H. Bankhead, discussing a political move, said, with a smile:

"Oh, it's too coldly calculated. It's almost unfair. In fact, it's like Mrs. Blank.

"Mrs. Blank is a leader of Bar Harbor society. Her husband said to her, one afternoon, as she made a very elaborate toilet for a garden party that she was giving to some members of the British legation:

"'Why did you write to all our guests that this party was to be absolutely informal?'

Mrs. Blank laughed.

"'So as to be the best-dressed woman present, of course,' she said."

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. WESTERN CANADA'S 1910 CROPS

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Wheat Yield in Many Districts Will Be From 25 to 35 Bushels Per Acre

Land sales and homestead entries increasing. No cessation in numbers going from United States. Wonderful opportunities remain for those who intend making Canada their home. New districts being opened up for settlement. Many farmers will net, this year, $10 to $15 per acre from their wheat crop. All the advantages of old settled countries are there. Good schools, churches, splendid markets, excellent railway facilities. See the grain exhibit at the different State and some of the County fairs.

Letters similar to the following are received every day, testifying to satisfactory conditions; other districts are as favorably spoken of:

THEY SENT FOR THEIR SON.

Maidstone, Sask., Canada, Aug. 5th, 1910.
"My parents came here from Cedar Falls, Iowa, four years ago, and were so well pleased with this country they sent to Coeur d'Alene for me. I have taken up a homestead near them, and am perfectly satisfied to stop here." Leonard Douglas.

WANTS SETTLER'S RATE FOR HIS STOCK.

Stettler, Alberta, July 31st, 1910.
"Well I got up here from Forest City, Iowa, last Spring in good shape with the stock and everything. Now, I have got two boys back in Iowa yet, and I am going back there now soon to get them and another car up here this fall. What I would like to know is, if there is any chance to get a cheap rate back again, and when we return to Canada I will call at your office for our certificates."
Yours truly, H. A. Wik.

WILL MAKE HIS HOME IN CANADA.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 1st, 1910.
"I am going to Canada a week from today and intend to make my home there. My husband has been there six weeks and is well pleased with the country; so he wants me to come as soon as possible. He filed on a claim near Landis, Sask., and by his description of it it must be a pretty place. My brother-in-law, Mr. Frank J. Zimmer, lives there and it was through him that we decided to locate in Canada."
Yours truly,
Mrs. Richard Henry Ebinger.

TAKES HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW'S WORD FOR IT.

Taylors Falls, Minn., Aug. 7, 1910.
"I shall go to Camrose this Fall with my cattle and household goods. I got a poor crop here this year and my brother-in-law, Axel Nordstrom in Camrose, wants me to come there. He formerly lived in Wilton, North Dakota. I am going to buy or take homestead when I get there, but I do not want to travel two times there, for I take my brother-in-law's word about the country, and want to get your low rate."
Yours truly
Peter A. Nelson.

WANTS TO RETURN TO CANADA.

Vesta, Minn., July 24th, 1910
"I went to Canada nine years ago and took up a quarter section of railroad land and a homestead, but my boys have never taken up any land yet. I still hold the railroad land. I had to come back to the states on account of my health. Please let me know at once if I can get the cheap rates to Ponoka, Alberta."
Yours truly,
Geo. Paskewitz,
Vesta, Minn.

GOV. CARROLL TRIAL

Three Phases to Be Brought Out According to Knowing Ones

WAS THE LETTER PRIVILEGED?

If Court Decides That Governor Had Right to Write Letter Concerning Cownie, Then It Is Stated Case Will Be Dismissed.

Des Moines, Sept. 19.—There are just three phases to be brought out in the case of Governor Carroll, indicted on the charge of criminally libeling John Cownie, according to those who have closely followed the case. The governor is to be placed on trial this morning in the Polk county district court before Judge James A. Howe.

The temporary illness of Judge Howe caused all parties interested in the case to fear that the trial would have to be postponed, but the judge was better last night and declared that he would be ready for work this morning.

The three paramount questions in the case, it is said by persons who have followed it closely are:

Was the letter of Governor Carroll relative to John Cownie a privileged communication, or did he in his official capacity have the authority to write such a letter?

Or was it written and sent out under a qualified privilege?

Or was it not privileged under any legal construction?

It is anticipated that as soon as the jury has been secured in the case—which it is estimated will take two days at least—attorneys for Governor Carroll will move for a directed verdict on the ground that the letter upon which the governor was indicted was strictly privileged. It is rumored, also, that the defense will contest every step and will make the state prove that Carroll either wrote or authorized the letter in question.

If the court rules that the letter is privileged, then a directed verdict will follow and the trial will be over.

If, however, it is ruled that the letter was sent under a qualified privilege, then the bars are let down for the introduction of a great mass of evidence on both sides, to prove or disprove claims of malice on the part of the chief executive.

JURY HOLDS AUTO DRIVER

Charge of Criminal Negligence Placed Against C. B. Wright, Who Ran Down Woman.

Des Moines, Sept. 19.—C. B. Wright, an insurance solicitor of 1136 West Twenty-second street, was held for manslaughter by a coroner's jury called to investigate the death of Mrs. J. L. Purinton of 4105 Cottage Grove avenue on Wednesday of last week. The jury found that criminal negligence on the part of Mr. Wright was responsible for the death of Mrs. Purinton.

Coroner Iver Newlen immediately notified Sheriff Ben Ness of the verdict and a warrant was sworn out for Mr. Wright's arrest. The warrant was served by Sheriff Ness and County Attorney Thomas Guthrie.

Mr. Wright returned Friday night from Kansas City, where he went immediately following the accident in which Mrs. Purinton sustained injuries which later resulted in her death. He readily consented to go with Mr. Ness and Mr. Guthrie. Accompanied by W. L. Warnshuis, a business associate, and by W. E. Ward, a close friend, Mr. Wright was taken to the office of Justice of the Peace Fred Cope and arraigned on a charge of manslaughter.

When arraigned Mr. Wright seemed to be visibly affected. He pleaded not guilty and was released on bonds of $2,500, furnished by Mr. Ward. His preliminary hearing was set for Oct. 4.

Busy Week at Des Moines.

Des Moines, Sept. 19.—With the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America in biennial session in the Auditorium, Gov. B. F. Carroll on trial on a charge of criminal libel in district court, and the United States army preparing for its tournament and show beginning Sept. 26, this week will be a busy one for Des Moines.

Shearer Held for Luckus Murder.

Mason City, Ia., Sept. 19.—Justice Rankin held J. A. Shearer, alleged murderer of Henry Luckus, a baker here, July 16th last, to the grand jury without bail. The decision was made on the confession of Harry Parsons, who said he was with the defendant when the act was committed.

NAVAL VETERANS CONVENE

Sons of Veterans and Ex-Prisoners of War Also Begin Their Sessions in Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 20.—First of the organizations allied to the Grand Army to get into action, the Naval Veterans' association opened its annual convention at 9 o'clock this morning on the Steel Pier. William G. McEwan of Philadelphia, the commodore commanding, presided and announced the arrangements for parade tomorrow. An hour later the encampment of the Sons of Veterans was formally opened with Commander-in-Chief George W. Pollitt of Patterson, N. J., in the chair. The third body to convene was the National Association of Union Ex-Prisoners of War, which went into session at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. All through the day there have been sessions of the national and advisory councils of the several organizations.

On Young's Million Dollar Pier this evening will be held the first semi-official session of the Grand Army. Governor Fort and Mayor Stoy will make addresses of welcome, Henry Reuch will read an original poem, Commander-in-Chief Van Sant will speak and there will be addresses of greeting from all the allied organizations. An interesting feature will be the presentation to the United States government of the Andersonville prison ground by National President Jennie I. Berry on behalf of the Woman's Relief corps. The program will be varied with much music.

Bennett of Fort Dodge was in the chair and responded to the welcome of Mayor J. R. Rector of Waterloo and then delivered his presidential address. Dr. A. J. Sweezey of Decorah, president of the Iowa State Health Officers' association, also made an address, and the rest of the morning was devoted to routine business.

In the afternoon there were numerous sectional meetings, among the speakers being City Attorney S. H. Crosby of Grinnell; Mayor M. E. Penquite of Colfax; C. E. Kimball of Council Bluffs; E. L. Hirsch of Burlington; R. C. Thompson of Waterloo; Dr. Percy R. Wood of Marshalltown; Commissioner John MacVicar of Des Moines and Mayor Elder of Keokuk. FOREIGN SERVICE VETERANS

Americans Who Fought in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Orient Open Convention in Jersey City.

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 19.—The tenth annual convention of the American Veterans of Foreign Service opened today in the Fourth regiment armory under the auspices of Lieut. Walter H. Lee post, No. 4. The association is a patriotic order and includes men who have seen foreign service in either Cuba, Porto Rico, China or the Philippines between 1898 and 1902. Some two thousand delegates and visitors have come to attend the convention, among the number being many men well known in military and civil life. The arrangements for the sessions have been in the hands of a committee headed by Adjutant-General Rudy Bornemann of this city. The convention lasts five days, and among the entertainments planned are a trip to Coney Island, visit to West Point, a military ball and drills by the American Boy Scouts.

Hospital Experts Convene.

St. Louis, Sept. 20.—Scores of officers and trustees of hospitals and others actively interested in the conduct of those institutions were present in the Planters hotel this morning when the twelfth annual conference of the American Hospital association was called to order. After an invocation by Rev. C. M. Davis, Mayor Kriesmann spoke some words of greeting, and the president's address was delivered by Mr. H. B. Howard of Boston. The sessions will continue through Friday. An interesting feature of the meeting is a non-commercial exhibit of hospital appliances invented, improved, or arranged by hospital workers.

Will Meet in Cedar Rapids.

Cedar Rapids, Sept. 19.—Notifications were received here that the boilermakers of the Rock Island system will meet here in September 1911.

MEET IN CONGRESS AT ROME

International Gathering of Foes of Tuberculosis to Be Held Late In September.

Official announcement of the Seventh International Congress on Tuberculosis, which will include representatives from every civilized country in the world, has been made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The congress will be held in Rome from September 24 to 30, 1911, and will be similar in many respects to that held in Washington in the fall of 1908. The congress, which meets every three years, will be under the direct patronage of the king and queen of Italy.

An American committee of 100 will be appointed as the official representatives of the United States. Meanwhile the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis is acting in that capacity and its office in New York will be the headquarters for the United States delegation. The secretary general of the congress is Prof. Vittorio Ascoli of Rome.

As a direct result of the stimulus of the last international congress held in this country, the American committee will be able to report that the number of tuberculosis agencies in this country have been tripled in the three years. More than twice as much money is being spent in the fight against tuberculosis by private societies and institutions, and the appropriations of federal, state, municipal and county have increased nearly fourfold. It is estimated that nearly $15,000,000 will be spent in anti-tuberculosis work in 1910.

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good." It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. Ask Your Neighbors. They probably know of some of its many cures.

If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R.V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

BEAUTIFUL IOWA

There is nothing the matter with Iowa. The state is the wholesomest commonwealth in the American Union. From the point of view of the general happiness and welfare, of the moral and mental well-being of the people, you come up on an elevator into Iowa from any other state in the republic.

I say this after having sojourned in and studied several other United states, and after having lived a long time in some of the most highly favored communities of the East.

Iowa is as fair outwardly as it is inwardly. It is about the only place into which a man could come from any other state and feel at home. Do you love the mountains? These green hills, undulating back from countless rivers, will make you think of them, and yet will gladden you with a sense of something tenderer, something more feminine than the shaggy giants you have known.

Are the plains and prairies dear to you? Here are fair prairies not but dimpled, wherever you gaze, with a loving smile that wins your heart.

Clean little cities; steady, quiet little cities, with happy-faced children bubbling out of innumerable schoolhouses; endless little cities, all so much alike that they recall to me Solomon's flock of newly shorn ewes just coming up from the washing, whereof every one hath twins.

And between the cities long miles of fat farms, with white or brown buildings, grouped amiably on the tops of undulations; such is Iowa—happy, incomparable Iowa, without a Pittsburg, or Jersey City within its limits, with not one festering slum in all its length and breadth, content amid its bursting corn cribs, agriculture and sure sound.—J. Chamberlain in New York Mail.

Fire Destroys Barn.

wa City.—Fire, due to lightning royed the huge barn of Reynold rs, near Mt. Vernon, during a e electrical storm, and several usands of dollars' worth of horses, n and machinery were burned. rby, in a field, nine of Frank Wat- s cows were killed by lightning.

Ames Man and His Crop.

Mason City.—The biggest yield of oats known in the county this year was raised by T. E. Wagner, a farmer of Owen township, who has threshed, machine measure, seventy bushels per acre from a ten-acre field of oats which has weighed out 93.5 bushels. Another field of seventy-five acres averaged, machine measure, forty four bushels per acre. A twenty-five acre field of barley yielded thirty eight bushels per acre. The grain was raised on land in part owned by Professor Marston of Ames. It has been perfectly tiled under the personal direction of Professor Marston and in every way is a first-class farm.

Hydrophobia in Cattle.

Preston.—Hydrophobia has appeared in the herd of cattle belonging to Ed Grant. Four have died and each was bitten by a dog July 4. Two died thirty-two days after they were bitten, while the last two lived fifty days. A peculiar thing noticed about it, as told by Mr. Grant, was that a few hours before the death of each one of these cows the others of the herd would gather around and look intently upon the sick one. He thinks none of the rest of his herd were bitten.

Nineteenth Infantry Reunion.

Fairfield.—Only 250 members of the Nineteenth Iowa infantry are now living, according to the roster kept by the present secretary of the association formed by the old soldiers J. M. Lytle of Washington, but these quarter of a thousand are going to hold a reunion at Farmington on Sept. 29 and 30. An old-fashioned campfiire will be held on the evening of the first day and the business sessions will be held on the following morning.

Ousts Postal Telegraph.

Webster City.—E. H. Martin has given the Postal Telegraph company ninety days to remove its instruments from the office of the Martin Telephone company and its wires from the Martin poles. After the expiration of that time Webster City will have but one telegraph company, the Western Union. Martin's reason for cutting out the Postal is that he has been obliged to operate it at great inconvenience for a very small profit.

Much Poultry Exhibited.

Marshalltown.—If there was ever any doubt as to the interest in and the amount of poultry raised in central Iowa, such doubts were dispelled by the display of fanciers made at the county fair here. Over 1,000 birds, which rivaled in number most state fairs of the country, were on exhibition. Over 100 different varieties were on display, and judges who were in attendance claim that the show eclipsed anything they ever witnessed at a county fair.

Fewer Hunting Licenses.

Marshalltown.—A slight falling off of gun licenses for the opening of the season on duck and other kinds of water fowl, prairie chickens and squirrels, is noticeable in this county. The county auditor issued up to Sept. 1, 183 licenses, as against 149 at the same time last year. This county issued over 1,600 licenses last year, but the rush did not set in until October.

Linn County Veterans Meet.

Springville.—The Linn County Veterans' association met at Walker. The meeting was a highly successful one. About 100 of the "old boys" were present. The next meeting of the association is to be held in Springfield in September, 1911. The following officers were chosen: President, Capt. C. Bowman; vice president, D. A. W. Hughes; secretary, Capt. W. H. Pherrin.

She Took No Chances.

A happily wedded matron is the principal of an odd incident, which one of her "dear" friends relates.

Before the matron's engagement to her present husband was announced, she met her "dear" friend on the street. The new matron was hurrying toward one of the large jewelry stores of the city.

"John gave me an engagement ring," she explained, without a shadow of embarrassment, "and I am going down to see how much it cost. You see, I got the jeweler's name off the box," and she hurried on.

The same friend said that another bit of information the matron got was the commercial standing of the prospective husband, which she secured by paying for a special report from a commercial agency.

Saucy Soldier Shut Her Up.

Col. Robert C. Carter at a Nashville banquet was talking about campaign comrades.

"Then there was Dash of Company A," he said. "Dash had the reputation of being the nastiest tongued man in the regiment.

"It was Private Dash, you know, who, out foraging one evening on a rich estate, came accidentally upon the owner's wife, a grande dame in evening dress.

"Dash asked her for food. She refused him. He asked again. But, still refusing, she walked away.

"'No,' she said, 'I'll give you nothing, trespassing like this; I'll give you nothing. My mind is made up.'

"'Made up, is it?' said Dash. 'Like the rest of you, eh?'"

Pierp's Appetite.

J. P. Morgan, Sr., was always a good trencherman in his youth and he has as good an appetite today as he ever had, not only for corned beef and cabbage—his favorite dish—but for other foods. If the Morgan, who dazzled the Teutons with his mathematics when he was a German university post-graduate student, had accepted the chair of mathematics offered to him by Heidelberg, instead of his Yankee corned beef and cabbage it might have been frankfurters and sauerkraut.—New York Press.

PUZZLED

Hard Work, Sometimes, to Raise Children.

Children's taste is ofttimes more accurate, in selecting the right kind of food to fit the body, than that of adults. Nature works more accurately through the children.

A Brooklyn lady says: "Our little boy had long been troubled with weak digestion. We could never persuade him to take more than one taste of any kind of cereal food. He was a weak little chap and we were puzzled to know what to feed him on.

"One lucky day we tried Grape-Nuts. Well, you never saw a child eat with such a relish, and it did me good to see him. From that day on it seemed as though we could almost see him grow. He would eat Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper, and I think he would have liked the food for dinner.

"The difference in his appearance is something wonderful.

"My husband had never fancied cereal foods of any kind, but he became very fond of Grape-Nuts and has been much improved in health since using it.

"We are now a healthy family, and naturally believe in Grape-Nuts.

"A friend has two children who were formerly afflicted with rickets. I was satisfied that the disease was caused by lack of proper nourishment. They showed it. So I urged her to use Grape-Nuts as an experiment and the result was almost magical.

"They continued the food and today both children are well and strong as any children in this city, and, of course, my friend is a firm believer in Grape-Nuts for she has the evidence before her eyes every day."

Remembering Each Other.

He sat on the sand at Atlantic City in a bathing suit. About ten feet away she was drawing pictures in the sand with a small brown forefinger. He noticed her complexion, her curves and the glint of gold in her hair. He wanted to speak, and yet— Finally he summoned courage and walked over to her.

"Didn't I talk with you for about five minutes two summers ago?" he asked.

"Two years ago," she said dreamily. "Two years ago—let me see—did I wear blue silk stockings?"

Attention Sick Women

If you had positive proof that a certain remedy for female ills had made many remarkable cures, would you not feel like trying it?

If during the last thirty years we have not succeeded in convincing every fair-minded woman that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands and thousands of women of the ills peculiar to their sex, then we long for an opportunity to do so by direct correspondence. Meanwhile read the following letters which we guarantee to be genuine and truthful.

Hudson, Ohio.—"I suffered for a long time from a weakness, inflammation, dreadful pains each month and suppression. I had been doctoring and receiving only temporary relief, when a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and wrote to you for advice. I have faithfully followed your directions and now, after taking only five bottles of the Vegetable Compound, I have every reason to believe I am a well woman. I give you full permission to use my testimonial." —Mrs. Lena Carmocino, Hudson, Ohio. R. F. D. No. 7.

St. Regis Falls, N. Y.—"Two years ago I was so bad that I had to take to my bed every month, and it would last from two to three weeks. I wrote to you for advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in dry form. I am happy to say that I am cured, thanks to your medicine and good advice. You may use my letter for the good of others." —Mrs. J. H. Breyere, St. Regis Falls, N. Y.

There is absolutely no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from the roots and herbs of our fields, to cure female diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

GATHERING SEED CORN

The trouble and anxiety of farmers concerning their seed corn during the latter part of the winter and the spring up to corn planting is a matter of vivid and painful remembrance. Many farmers then resolved that they would never be caught again with seed corn on which they could not depend. We are all likely to forget good resolutions, however, and so we "stir up your sincere minds by putting you in remembrance," and asking you, whatever else you do, to pick your seed corn early this year.

We may not have any frost such as we had on the 11th of October last. We may have a season in which corn will dry out on the stalk and seed corn can be taken out of the crib; but you can not depend on that. There is always a chance of an untimely frost that will injure the corn for seed purposes. There is an even greater chance of untimely frost after it is gathered than before, just at the time when your corn that has been gathered is drying out.

We cannot fix the time of the year when the farmer should gather his seed corn; that varies with the latitude, and varies to some extent with longitude; but seed corn can be safely gathered as soon as it is well glazed. It takes but a little time to pick twenty or thirty times as many ears as you intend to plant acres next year. You can well afford to go through the field with a sack on your shoulder, study each hill and each stalk, and determine whether you want seed from that stalk or not: for the stalk should be considered as well as the ear, or its position on the stalk.

Don't go at it with the idea of picking show ears of corn, but pick the medium sized ear, or a little larger, from a stalk that shows every evidence of strong vitality, an ear well formed. If the ear is not filled out perfectly to the end, it does not matter so much. Pull these ears off with the husks on them. Hang them up by the husks to the limb of a tree or to a clothesline, or in the driveway of the corn crib—any place where they will be away from the rats and mice and will be exposed to the air. Hang them so that no ear touches another.

It will very soon be time for gathering the seed corn in the northern part of our territory. Corn experts recommend about the middle of September for that latitude, for the latitude of Iowa the first week in October. Those in Iowa and Illinois who gathered last year in September, and had their corn fairly well dried out before the October freeze, had corn that tested 96 to 100 per cent; while corn gathered a few days before the freeze and not dried out did not test over 60 per cent. It is better to err on the side of earliness than of lateness. This corn gathered so early may not make show corn; it may shrink a great deal, but its germinating power will not be impaired. Hence, better pick too early than too late. Pick early enough so that you can have it dried out before there is any danger of a freeze such as we had last October. Then you are safe.—Wallace Farmer.

UNITED FOR LIFE

At the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Fred Knoke, on Wednesday afternoon, September 21st, 1910, at two-thirty o'clock, was solemnized the marriage of Miss Annie Knoke to Mr. Charles G. Schmidt. Rev. Wessel officiating.

After the ceremony a very pleasant social time was enjoyed by the large number of invited guests The wedding feast was very elaborate and the happy couple was presented with many beautiful and useful gifts. The young people are both well and favorably known to most of our readers and each is well adapted to make an ideal help-mate for the other. We hope that their married life may be filled with happiness and that their sorrows may be few and a long way between.

In the evening a reception was held at the Knoke home to which the young friends of the contracting parties were invited and a most pleasant time was had by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt will make their home on a farm near Kanawha, and will take there with them the best wishes of a host of admiring friends.

COUNTRY ALL RIGHT

A STRIKINGLY STRONG ARTICLE BY COL. HARVEY.

THE WRITER SEES NO CLOUD

"A Plea for the Conservation of Common Sense" That Is Meeting With Cordial Approval.

A strikingly strong article by Colonel George Harvey in the North American Review, for September, is written in a view of such hopefulness for the American future that it has attracted wide attention. The article is entitled, "A Plea for the Conservation of Common Sense" and it is meeting with the cordial approval of business men of all shades of political opinion throughout the entire country. In part Colonel Harvey says:

"Unquestionably a spirit of unrest dominates the land. But, if it be true that fundamentally the condition of the country is sound, must we necessarily succumb to despondency, abandon effort looking to retrieval and cringe like cravens before clouds that only threaten? Rather ought we not to analyze conditions, search for causes, find the root of the distress, which even now exists only in men's minds, and then, after the American fashion, apply such remedies as seems most likely to produce beneficent results?

Capital and Labor Not Antagonistic.

"The Link that connects labor with capital is not broken but we may not deny that it is less cohesive than it should be or than conditions warrant. Financially, the country is stronger than ever before in its history. Recovery from a panic so severe as that of three years ago was never before so prompt and comparatively complete. The masses are practically free from debt. Money is held by the banks in abundance and rates are low.

"Why, then, does capital pause upon the threshold of investment? The answer, we believe, to be plain. It awaits adjustment of the relations of government to business. * * * The sole problem consists of determining how government can maintain an even balance between aggregations of interests, on the one hand, and the whole people, on the other, protecting the latter against extortion and saving the former from mad assaults.

"The solution is not easy to find for the simple reason that the situation is without precedent. But is not progress being made along sane and cautious lines? * * *

Conserve Common Sense.

"Is not the present, as we have seen, exceptionally secure? What, then, of preparations for the future? Patriotism is the basis of our institutions. And patriotism in the minds of our youth is no longer linked solely with fireworks and deeds of daring. It is taught in our schools. A new course has been added—a course in loyalty. Methodically, our children learn how to vote, how to conduct primaries, conventions and elections, how to discriminate between qualifications of candidates and, finally, how to govern as well as serve. They are taught to despise bribery and all forms of corruption and fraud as treason. Their creed, which they are made to know by heart, is not complex. It is simple, but comprehensive, no less beautiful in diction than lofty in aspiration. These are the pledges which are graven upon their memories:

"As it is cowardly for a soldier to run away from battle, so it is cowardly for any citizen not to contribute his share to the well-being of his country. America is my own dear land; she nourishes me, and I will love her and do my duty to her, whose child, servant and civil soldier I am.

"As the health and happiness of my body depend upon each muscle and nerve and drop of blood doing its work in its place, so the health and happiness of my country depend upon each citizen doing his work in his place.

"These young citizens are our hostages to fortune. Can we not safely assume that the principles animating their lives augur well for the permanency of the Republic? When before have the foundation stones of continuance been laid with such care and promise of durability?

"The future, then, is bright. And the present? But one thing is needful. No present movement is more laudable than that which looks to conservation of natural resources. But let us never forget that the greatest inherent resource of the American people is Common Sense. Let that be conserved and applied without cessation, and soon it will be found that all the ills of which we complain but know not of are only such as attend upon the growing pains of a great and blessed country.

INSURANCE MEN TO PITTSBURG

Texas Man Heads American Life Association—T. W. Blackburn Re-elected Secretary.

Des Moines.—Uniform state laws for the benefit of insurance companies, regulating taxation of companies, licensing of insurance agents and protecting companies from slanderous statements of opposition agents will be sought by the American Life convention, which closed its annual convention after it had referred the uniform legislation matter to the executive committee.

T. W. Vardell head of the Southwestern Life Insurance company of Dallas, Tex., was elected president after a spirited contest with Felix G. Cross, of Chicago, representing the men who did not think the office should go to the south. Hon. Frank D. Jackson was elected vice-president for Iowa. T. W. Blackburn, of Omaha, was re-elected secretary.

Isaac M. Hamilton, Chicago; M. A. Woolen, Indianapolis; J. B. Reynolds, Kansas City, Mo.; W. A. Lindly, Lincoln, Nebr.; P. D. Gold, Jr., Raleigh, S. C., and Thomas L. Miller, San Francisco, were elected members of the executive committee.

Pittsburg won over St. Paul and Washington, D. C., for the site of the next meeting, the invitation of St. Louis having been withdrawn.

Experiment Farm Popular.

Correctionville.—Much interest being shown in the county experiment farm here. A delegation of about twenty-five farmers were here recently and had Prof. G. H. Bliss of the state college at Ames take them over the several hundred plots of corn there. Hundreds of farmers nearby are getting valuable information there. An instance of the value of the experiment farm is this, one Woodbury county farmer who has prided himself on his knowledge of corn, was here to see the three plots planted from his corn. While the stalks stood ten to fifteen feet high the ears were short, immature and pointed. On either side was corn with shorter stalks but larger and more mature ears. He saw that in the same soil, exactly the same planting and cultivation, his neighbor's corn was far ahead of his. He saw the point and announced: "I guess I'll have to change my variety."

There are more than 100 samples planted from over the county, from corn breeders and seed houses. The varieties best adapted to this section are therefore plainly shown, the value of such demonstrations being manifold, if the farmers will heed the lesson. Many are doing so.

"That's for You, Captain Plum."

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

SYNOPSIS.

Captain Nathaniel Plum of the sloop ...hoon, lands secretly on Beaver island, ... Lake Michigan, stronghold of the ...mons. Obadiah Price, an eccentric ... man and councilor of the Mormons, ... has been spying on him, suddenly ...onts him and tells him he is expect... Plum insists he has got the wrong ...

...e seated, Captain Plum; right ...r there—opposite me. So!"

...e continued for a moment to ...ooth out the creases in the letter ...d then proceeded to read it with as ...ch assurance as though its owner ...re a thousand miles away instead ...within arm's reach of him. Cap... Plum was dumbfounded. He felt ... hot blood rushing to his face and ... first impulse was to recover the ...mpled paper and demand some...g more than an explanation. In ... next instant it occurred to him ...t this action would probably spoil ...atever possibilities his night's ad...ture might have for him. So he ...d his peace. The old man was so ...ent in his perusal of the letter that ... end of his hooked nose almost ...aped the table. He went over the ..., partly obliterated words line by ..., chuckling now and then, and ap...ently utterly oblivious of the oth... presence. When he had come to ...end he looked up, his eyes glitter... with unbounded satisfaction, care...y folded the letter, and handed it ... Captain Plum.

"That's the best introduction in the ...rld, Captain Plum—the very best! ...ho!—it couldn't be better. I'm ...d I found it." He chuckled gleeful... and rested his ogreish head in the ...ms of his skeleton-like hands, his ...ows on the table. "So you're going ...k home—soon?"

"I haven't made up my mind yet," responded Captain Plum, pulling ... his pipe and tobacco. "You've read ... letter pretty carefully, I guess. ...at would you do?"

"Vermont?" questioned the old man ...rtly.

"That's it."

"Well, I'd go, and very soon, Cap... Plum, very soon, indeed. Yes, I'd ...ry!" The old man jumped up with ... quickness of a cat. So sudden ... his movement that it startled Cap... Plum, and he dropped his tobac... pouch. By the time he had recov... this article his strange compan... was back in his seat again holding ...eather bag in his hand. Quickly ... untied the knot at its top and ...red a torrent of glittering gold ...es out upon the table.

"Business—business and gold," he ...gled happily, rubbing his thin ...ds and twisting his fingers until ... cracked. "A pretty sight, eh, Cap... Plum? Now, to our account! A ...dred carbines, eh? And a thousand of powder and a ton of balls. Or is it in lead? It doesn't make any difference—not a bit. It's three thousand, that's the account, eh?" He fell to counting rapidly.

For a full minute Captain Plum remained in stupefied bewilderment, silenced by the sudden and unexpected turn his adventure had taken. Fascinated, he watched the skeleton fingers as they clinked the gold pieces. What was the mysterious plot into which he had allowed himself to be drawn? Why were a hundred guns and a ton and a half of powder and balls wanted by the Mormons of Beaver island? Instinctively he reached out and closed his hand over the counting fingers of the old man. Their eyes met. And there was a shrewd, half-understanding gleam in the black orbs that fixed Captain Plum in an unflinching challenge. For a little space there was silence. It was Captain Plum who broke it.

"Dad, I'm going to tell you for the third and last time that you've made a mistake. I've got eight of the best rifles in America aboard my sloop out there. But there's a man for every gun. And I've got something hidden away underdeck that would blow up St. James in half an hour. And there is powder and ball for the whole outfit. But that's all. I'll sell you what I've got—for a good price. Beyond that you've got the wrong man!"

He settled back and blew a volume of smoke from his pipe. For another half minute the old man continued to look at him, his eyes twinkling, and then he fell to counting again.

Captain Plum was not given over to the habit of cursing. But now he jumped to his feet with an oath that jarred the table. The old man chuckled. The gold pieces clinked between his fingers. Coolly he shoved two glittering piles alongside the candle stick, tumbled the rest back into the leather bag, deliberately tied the end, and smiled up into the face of the exasperated captain.

"To be sure you're not the man," he said, nodding his head until his elf-locks danced around his face. "Of course you're not the man. I know it—ho, ho! you can wager that I know it! A little ruse of mine, Captain Plum. Pardonable—excusable, eh? I wanted to know if you were a liar. I wanted to see if you were honest."

With a gasp of astonishment Captain Plum sank back into his chair. His jaw dropped and his pipe was held fireless in his hand.

"The devil you say!"

"Oh, certainly, certainly, if you wish it," chuckled the little man, in high humor. "I would have visited your sloop today, Captain Plum, if you hadn't come ashore so opportunely this morning. Ho, ho, ho! a good joke, eh? A mighty good joke!"

Captain Plum regained his composure by relighting his pipe. He heard the chink of gold pieces and when he looked again the two piles of money were close to the edge of his side of the table.

"That's for you, Captain Plum. There's a just $1,000 in those two piles." There was tense earnestness now in the old man's face and voice. "I've imposed on you," he continued, speaking as one who had suddenly thrown off a disguise. "If it had been any other man it would have been the same. I want help. I want an honest man. I want a man whom I can trust. I will give you a thousand dollars if you will take a package back to your vessel with you and will promise to deliver it as quickly as you can."

"I'll do it!" cried Captain Plum. He jumped to his feet and held out his hand. But the old man slipped from his chair and darted swiftly out into the blackness of the adjoining room. As he came back Captain Plum could hear his insane chuckling.

"Business — business — business —" he gurgled. "Eh, Captain Plum? Did you ever take an oath?" He tossed a book on the table. It was the Bible.

Captain Plum understood. He reached for the book and held it under his left hand. His right he lifted above his head, while a smile played about his lips.

"I suppose you want to place me under oath to deliver that package," he said.

The old man nodded. His eyes gleamed with a feverish glare. A sudden hectic flush had gathered in his death-like cheeks. He trembled. His voice rose barely above a whisper.

"Repeat," he commanded. "I, Captain Nathaniel Plum, do solemnly swear before God—"

A thrilling inspiration shot into Captain Plum's brain.

"Hold!" he cried. He lowered his hand. With something that was almost a snarl the old man sprang back, his hands clenched. "I will take this oath upon one other consideration," continued Captain Plum. "I came to Beaver Island to see something of the life and something of the people of St. James. If you, in turn, will swear to show me as much as you can tonight I will take the oath."

The old man was beside the table again in an instant.

"I will show it to you—all—all—" he exclaimed excitedly. 'I will show it to you—yes, and swear to it upon the body of Christ!'"

Captain Plum lifted his hand again and word by word repeated the oath. When it was done the other took his place.

"Your name?" asked Captain Plum.

A change scarcely perceptible swept over the old man's face.

"Obadiah Price."

"But you are a Mormon. You have the Bible there?"

Again the old man disappeared into the adjoining room. When he returned he placed two books side by side and stood them on edge so that he might clasp both between his bony fingers. One was the Bible, the other the Book of the Mormons. In a cracked, excited voice he repeated the strenuous oath improvised by Captain Plum.

"Now," said Captain Plum, distributing the gold pieces among his pockets, "I'll take that package."

This time the old man was gone for several minutes. When he returned he placed a small package tightly bound and sealed into his companion's hand.

"More precious than your life, more priceless than gold," he whispered tensely, "yet worthless to all but the one to whom it is to be delivered."

There were no marks on the package.

"And who is that?" asked Captain Plum.

The old man came so close that his breath fell hot upon the young man's cheek. He lifted a hand as though to ward sound from the very walls that closed them in.

"Franklin Pierce, president of the United States of America!"

CHAPTER II.

The Seven Wives.

Hardly had the words fallen from the lips of Obadiah Price than the old man straightened himself and stood as rigid as a gargoyle, his gaze penetrating into the darkness of the room beyond Captain Plum, his head inclined slightly, every nerve in him strained to a tension of expectancy. His companion involuntarily gripped the butt of his pistol and faced the narrow entrance through which they had come. In the moment of absolute silence that followed there came to him, faintly, a sound, unintelligible at first, but growing in volume until he knew that it was the last echo of a tolling bell. There was no movement, no sound of breath or whisper from the old man at his back. But when it came again, floating to him as if from a vast distance, he turned quickly to find Obadiah Price with his face lifted, his thin arms flung wide above his head and his lips moving as if in prayer. His eyes burned with a dull glow as though he had been suddenly thrown into a trance. He seemed not to breathe, no vibration of life stirred him except in the movement of his lips. With the third toll of the distant bell he spoke, and to Captain Plum it was as if the passion and fire in his voice came from another being.

"Our Christ, Master of hosts, we call upon thy chosen people the three blessings of the universe—peace, prosperity and plenty, and upon Sta..., priest, king and prophet, the bounty of thy power!"

Three times more the distant bell tolled forth its mysterious message and when the last echoes had died away the old man's arms dropped beside him and he turned again to Captain Plum.

"Franklin Pierce, president of the United States of America," he repeated, as though there had been no interruption since his companion's question. "The package is to be delivered to him. Now you must excuse me. An important matter calls me out for a short time. But I will be back soon—oh, yes, very soon. And you will wait for me. You will wait for me here, and then I will take you to St. James."

He was gone in a quick hopping way, like a cricket, and the last that Captain Plum saw of him was his ghostly face turned back for an instant in the darkness of the next room, and after that the soft patter of his feet and the strange chuckle in his throat traveled to the outer door and died away as he passed out into the night. Nathaniel Plum was not a man to be easily startled, but there was something so unusual about the proceedings in which he was as yet playing a blind part that he forgot to smoke, which was saying much. Who was the old man? Was he mad? His eyes scanned the little room and an exclamation of astonishment fell from his lips when he saw the leather bag, partly filled with gold, lying where his mysterious acquaintance had dropped it. Surely this was madness or else another ruse to test his honesty. The discovery thrilled him. It was wonderfully quiet out in that next room and very dark. Were hidden eyes guarding that bag? Well, if so, he would give their owner to understand that he was not a thief. He rose from his chair and moved toward the bag, lifted it in his hand, and tossed it back again so that the gold in it chinked loudly. Then he went to the narrow aperture and blocked it with his body and listened until he knew that if there had been human life in the room he would have heard it.

The outer door was opened and through it there came to him the soft breath of the night air and the sweetness of balsam and wild flowers. It struck him that it would be pleasanter waiting outside than in, and it would undoubtedly make no difference to Obadiah Price. In front of the cabin he found the stump of a log and seating himself on it where the clear light of the stars fell full upon him he once more began his interrupted smoke. It seemed to him that he had waited a long time when he heard the sound of footsteps. They came rapidly as if the person was half running. Hardly had he located the direction of the sound when a figure appeared in the opening and hurried toward the door of the cabin. A dozen yards from him it paused for a moment and turned partly about, as if inspecting the path over which it had come. With a greeting whistle Captain Plum jumped to his feet. He heard a little throat note, which was not the chuckling of Obadiah Price, and the figure ran almost into his arms. A sudden knowledge of having made a mistake drew Captain Plum a pace backward. For scarcely more than five seconds he found himself staring into the white terrified face of a girl. Eyes wide and glowing with sudden fright met his own. Instinctively he lifted his hand to his hat, but before he could speak the girl sprang back with a low cry and ran swiftly down the path that led into the gloom of the woods.

She Teaches Correct Speech.

A woman of culture and travel has made a glorious success teaching correct speech. It is surprising how much incorrect speech there is among our educated people. They cling to provincialisms, incorrect pronunciations, wrong use of words and unmusical intonations. The southerner holds to the soft, r-less utterance of his "mammy" days; the middle westerner flattens all his vowels; the Bostonian throws his r's completely out of joint.

This woman undertook to correct such errors and teach a pure, perfect, English speech to a few young women. She became so successful that she was compelled to start a school of correct English which has grown to great proportions. This particularly promising field is open to every town in America. —Delineator.

Good Advice.

"And now, son," said the old rabbit, "here's a bit of advice. Always keep on the good side of a dog."

"But, pop," queried the youngster, who was about to go forth into the big world, "which is the good side of a dog?"

"The outside, son," answered the o. r., as he bit off another hunk of cabbage.

REV. BAKER JOINS BENEDICTS

One of the most happy events that has occurred in this city for a long time was the marriage this afternoon of Miss Grace Terrill to Rev. Earl A. Baker. Some two hundred and fifty invitations had been extended to friends throughout the city and at the announced hour of 4:30 had assembled at the First Methodist Episcopal church where the ceremony was performed.—Mason City Herald, 20th.

Rev. Baker, it will be remembered, was pastor of the Klemme Eng. M. E. church a short time last summer, and he has many friends here who will be interested in the above news.

Fraternal Societies Have 262,539 Policies in Iowa

WM. KOCH ELECTED PRESIDENT

Iowa People Have Reputation of Being Most Law-Abiding and Most Prosperous—Best All-Around State in the Union.

Des Moines, Sept. 24.—"The exact number of policy holders in Iowa who are enrolled on the books of fraternal societies amounts to 262,539. This great army of men and women are a power in the affairs of our state, a power for the advancement of fraternalism, a power in whatever direction their energies and efforts may be expended."

Thus President William Koch of the Iowa Fraternal congress defined the extent of fraternal insurance in Iowa in his annual report made before the opening session.

Fifty delegates representing twenty-five organizations were in attendance.

High praise was given by President Koch in his report. "Already does Iowa have the reputation as the best educated, the most law abiding, the most prosperous, the best all-around state in the union," he said.

The growth of the fraternal insurance was shown in the following statement: "During the year 1909 there were fifty societies licensed to do business in the state of Iowa. The total membership of these societies on Jan. 1, 1910, aggregated 4,442,354. In Iowa 34,618 new policy holders were secured during the year 1909."

Fraternal insurance societies are the strongest financially of any insurance concerns in the United States, according to experts who talked before the Iowa fraternal congress but there was an opinion generally expressed that the rates of fraternal insurance should be raised in order to provide a larger reserve fund.

It is the belief of many of the delegates that members of fraternal organizations are opposed to an increase in rates and that it will be necessary to legislate to that end.

Officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows: William Kock of Des Moines, president; Emma B. Manchester of Omaha, Neb., vice president; John W Geiger of Cedar Rapids, secretary. The executive committee includes the officers and two others who were elected as follows: Mrs. Ann M. Bair, Webster City; V. A. Young, Waterloo.

Des Moines was selected as the next annual meeting place for the Iowa Fraternal congress. A resolution to that effect was adopted unanimously by the delegates of the convention.

Ask Freight Rate Increase.

Telegraph operators and employes of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway company have filed a long petition with the state railway commission, asking that the freight rates in Iowa be increased.

They declare that it is for their interest to see that the railway companies are treated justly in the matter of rates in order that the companies may prosper and that there may be no reduction of wages.

In addition the telegraphers claim that the public of today is demanding better service, better accommodations, better everything in the railway line than in the past, and that this demand makes it more expensive for the railroads to operate than formerly.

The commission in reply to the telegraphers stated that their petition would be taken up at the same time as the petition of the Greater Des Moines committee for a reduction of freight rates.

Big Sum For Premiums.

More than $50,000 has been paid out by the state agricultural association for premiums this year. The total amount is $51,600. This is an increase of $8,000 over the payments of last year and more than two and a half times the payments of 1901 when the total reached $19,000.

The sums paid in the different departments were: Horses, $10,381; cattle, $11,778; hogs, $4,135; sheep, $2,146; poultry, $1,036; agriculture, $5,074; fruit, $892; pantry and kitchen, $798; dairy, $602; horticulture, $841; fine arts, $1,752; schools, $417; scholarships, $1,000; speed, $10,735.

Half Million Fees Collected.

Secretary of State Hayward has made his biennial report on fee collections for the period ended June 30 last, which shows a total of fees collected through his office and turned over to the state treasury of $455,927.89. Of this amount over $84,000 was paid by owners of motor vehicles and over $126,000 came from oil inspection under his direction.

SUMNER ON HEALTH RULES.

Board of Health Secretary Urges Cleanliness in All Places.

Des Moines, Sept. 24.—Apropos of the unsettled health conditions in Iowa at the present time Dr. G. H. Sumner, secretary of the Iowa state board of health, has written to a citizen of Madrid concerning the dangers to health which arise from permitting horses to stand hitched in the streets longer than thirty minutes. He calls attention to the rule enforced in some of the cities and towns of the state and suggests that it be adopted in all communities in Iowa. A portion of his letter is as follows:

"In writing my instructions regarding this matter I had in mind the health of your community, as it is being demonstrated daily that a large percentage of sickness in any community is due to sources of filth and uncleanliness. Many cities in Iowa will not permit horses to be hitched longer than thirty minutes in their streets. People coming to town to do trading are compelled to put their horses in stables and care for them, where their filth can be taken care of, instead of allowing it to be dropped on the streets to dry and be blown in dust into stores and homes to be breathed and to be deposited upon the food products to be consumed by the innocent.

"Iowa is just now passing through a serious epidemic, which is extending from one border of our state to the other, and it behooves every citizen to do all in his power to keep all streets, alleys, backyards, stables, dairies, homes and every other place in a clean and sanitary condition, thus preventing the spread of disease.

"Let it be remembered that the making of money and the piling up of wealth should not be done to the detriment of the health of the people, which should in all instances be paramount.

"In this connection let it also be remembered that no amount of money or wealth can fill the vacant chair."

Road to Run "Hog Special."

H. W. Cottrell, agricultural commissioner for the Rock Island railroad, has been commissioned by the road management to secure the cooperation of agricultural colleges in the middle western states in a movement to increase the hog supply by conducting a "hog special" similar to the "corn special" train bearing lecturerers and literature on hog raising. The company contemplates the employment of two expert chefs to prepare pork in its most appetizing forms to illustrate its adaptability for the table. The Iowa State Agricultural college already has agreed to co-operate by sending skilled and experienced "hog lecturers" with the train. It will start Oct. 3, and will visit 130 towns in Iowa, finishing at Council Bluffs after which the train will continue into Nebraska.

Epilepsy Causes Deaths of Many.

That one-fourth of all the deaths in the state school for feeble-minded at Glenwood are caused by epilepsy was the statement made by Dr. Roy Moon, assistant medical director, speaking before the state superintendents at a meeting at the state house. Dr. Moon also stated that the physicians at the state schools had the double duty of attending children in which both youth and senility are present. According to Dr. Moon, there are few of the inmates of the school who grow to advanced age on account of the fact that some part of the body of a feeble-minded person ages long before the other parts.

Kasson Memorial House Opens.

The John A. Kasson memorial neighborhood house at East Thirteenth and Des Moines streets was formally opened to the public under the most auspicious circumstances. The house is under the supervision and control of the St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal church. Over a thousand members of the church and friends were in attendance at the opening exercises. Senator A. B. Cummins was the principal speaker of the evening.

Hold Presbyterian Synod.

The Iowa synod of the United Presbyterian church will be held at Goldfield on Oct. 4, 5 and 6. All of the pastors of local churches of this denomination will attend this synodical meeting.

The synod of Iowa for the Presbyterian church will be held at Iowa City in October, the dates to be determined later.

Club Women Prepare for Winter.

The city federation of Women's clubs comprising nearly all the club women in the city, will hold their first meeting of the club year on the first Tuesday in October. At that time plans for the years' work will be made.

BEGIN TOURNAMENT

Opens with Reveille at Camp J. A. T. Hull, State Fair Grounds

BRIG. GEN. SMITH IN CHARGE

Commanding Officer Declares United States Army Never Presented Such a Spectacle in Times of Peace.

Des Moines, Sept. 26.—With reveille at 6 o'clock this morning, the greatest of all the United States army's tournaments opened at Camp J. A. T. Hull on the state fair grounds.

Brig. Gen. Fred A. Smith, commander of the department of the Missouri, arrived in Des Moines Saturday night and immediately assumed charge of the 5,000 troops camped in East Des Moines.

"A larger military tournament was never planned by the army," said Brigadier General Smith. "Madison Square garden's military manuevers have never been as large as the tournament about to begin in Des Moines. The event at Chicago was attended by millions of people, but this tournament has 2,000 more troops than that in Chicago.

"The military tournament in Des Moines a year ago—by the way, Des Moines is the only city in the United States to have such an event in two consecutive years—was conducted on a larger scale than any other given by the war department, and the one this year is expected to eclipse it."

Des Moines and thousands of people from all sections of the state flocked to the scene of the military tournament—Camp J. A. T. Hull, which has been named in honor of the man who has represented this district of Iowa in congress for many years. Captain Hull is chairman of the committee on military affairs in the lower house of congress.

All branches of the United States army are represented at the tournament except the aerial navigation department. This, the officers say, has proven a failure in tournaments. They point out that such was the case in the Des Moines maneuvers a year ago.

The tournament opened this morning with a parade of all troops through the business streets of the city. This afternoon the maneuvers proper began in the arena at the state fair ground. The inner fence around the race track has been removed and the center put on a level with the track.

Admission to the arena is 50 cents, amphitheater seats 75 cents and box seats $1.

REFUSES DIRECTED VERDICT

Judge Howe Decided to Send Carroll Case to Jury on Showing by State and Defense.

Des Moines, Sept. 26.—When Judge Howe in the Polk county district court Saturday refused to direct a verdict declaring Governor Carroll not guilty of the charge of criminally libeling John Cownie, he made it necessary for the governor to go on the witness stand in his own defense.

Persons in a position to know, state that Governor Carroll's attorneys will make no effort to prove by the governor's testimony, that any of the charges against John Cownie as to alleged improper conduct with girls at Mitchellville were true. His testimony will be solely to show that in all his procedure against Cownie he acted in good faith and without malice.

In the indictment it is charged that Governor Carroll made the claim that John Cownie was guilty of making illegal purchases of goods for state institutions while a member of the state board of control, but the defense is of the opinion that the truth of this charge has already been sufficiently proved, so it is said, and that this feature of the case will not be opened up through any testimony of the governor.

It is stated that in addition to the governor there will be but few witnesses for the defense and that the governor's testimony will be short. He has an engagement at the military tournament Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and it is said that he will have left the stand long before that time, so that it will be possible for him to fill his engagement.

United States Attorney M. L. Temple of Osceola yesterday verified the report that the federal authorities will investigate the claim of Governor Carroll that John Cownie, former member of the state board of control, sold diseased cattle to packers at Omaha, thereby violating the federal quarantine law.

A Generous Gift.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

An Ordinary Stove Wasting Half the Fuel

is composed principally of very small particles of unburned coal. The ordinary stove lets this smoke pass out the chimney.

If your stove does, it is wasting half your fuel, for it has been proved by scientists that HALF the heat of the coal is in this gas and smoke.

The Air Blast Acorn burns all the gas and carbon in the smoke. Nothing is wasted. The result is, you have the same heat with half the fuel.

But there's more to this heater than its fuel-saving feature.

It is heavy and well built. With ordinary care it will last for years. The firepot and grate are made on principles that promote perfect combustion and radiation of heat.

As a fire-keeper it cannot be equaled. Will your stove hold fire 48 hours? The Air Blast Acorn does. It is machine-fitted and the fire can be controlled perfectly—always.

If there is no Acorn Agent in your town write us direct for booklet describing fully this remarkable stove. The very best soft coal heater ever made.

ODITY IN STYLES

AT IS THE KEYNOTE OF THE PRESENT SEASON.

May Well Be Described as a "Fascinating Ugliness" Is Predominant—Ideas, However, Still Have a Charm.

What may be described as a "fascinating ugliness" is the dominant displayed by present fashions, stamping a world of things that ld seem hideous were they not so ractingly smart. In truth, the superior nature is scarcely proof inst the wiles of the odd tight ts, the quaint draperies and snug bodices, though a change of may come when you try on, for these modern follies of ion are only for the nymphs of human race. Skirts express the le influence in a hundred and one

ys, the jupe short enough to show kles in the smartest cases and freently with a wide, plain bottom atched to a gathered top. But there o set model which must take precence over others. It is only necessry for the walking skirt to be brief length and width, and if it puts 's neck in danger with the long , that is only a side issue.

Alongside the short skirt there are e longer ones for house or carge wear that display overskirt effects as quaint as any seen in the ghties." These fall low on the bot- skirt, and they are put all round, only about the front and sides; which case the skirt itself may be ished with a wide double box plait the back, the sides of the front pery going under this. The polose is another revival from ancient ys, and it must be admitted that h over-draperies may be made to press a good deal of attractiveness, pecially when they are in gauzy tex- , as they most often are, and are over a tightly pulled back silk .

As yet these styles appear in the terials of summer, veiling, marisette and silk, fair woman conting herself with a change of headr and a top-coat of some sort for autumn note in her costuming. soon fall materials will be emyed, and such as are now shown eal some change in standard mate- s and a subtle softening of the al autumn colors. Some odd colwhich have been influenced by mmer styles are a shade of yellow rdering on the nicotine shade, this led tabac indro, and some violets ich recall the darker shades of teria. These are superb in cashre, for which there is to be a rewed vogue, and for the woman who es to wear wash materials till the t moment there are also superb ns in the same colors.

The little drapery shown in the iltration is pictured in a patterned terial, but the rear cut shows the n veiling that would give a smartffect. The material is a blue and y veiling, black ribbon, velvet being d for all the banding. The skirt a short, plaited model, and a guimpe bodice with lace yoke and undersleeves is worn under the polonaise. A polonaise of black chiffon in this style, put over a princess slip in a lusterless black silk, would offer a beautiful evening effect for a young woman in mourning; for a bias of the silk, or else chiffon folds, could make the banding, and the simplicity of the drapery commends itself for black. In this event the guimpe could be collarless, and of chiffon gathered over cords at the throat line, the same treatment to be used at the bottom of the undersleeves.

PRESERVING THE HAIR SHADE

Girl Whose Hair Is Decidedly Blond May Keep It So by Constant Care.

It is a difficult thing to do, but I believe a girl whose hair is decidedly blond may keep it so if she takes endless pains in its care. Her efforts should be directed first to keeping the scalp in a healthy condition, for I know of no tonic which will not be very apt to darken the color. This is because all contain oils; some more than others, it is true. But grease is extremely likely to affect the color, and it is the tendency of light hair to become dark as years go by.

Agents which are decidedly bleaching in effect are not good for a natural blond, because they dry the scalp oils, and taking away this nourishment from the tresses causes them to fall or to become dull in appearance. Yet it is true that soda, or even peroxide, if applied with something else in the very smallest quantities, may be beneficial as to the color effect and not harmful to the head.

The only shampoo for a golden-haired girl is the whites of raw eggs, I think. These are cleansing, and, containing no coloring matter, will not change the shade. To each white might be put a piece of bicarbonate of soda the size of a small green pea and five drops of ammonia or peroxide. A tablespoonful of soft water is put to each white. For an ordinary amount of hair four whites should be required. These, when well mixed, are rubbed over the scalp and in the hair, this part of the work taking at least five and preferably ten minutes. Not until all is wet with it is any water put on, and then the head is washed in clear warm water, putting a pinch of soda in the final rinse. If the scalp is inclined to dry neither soda, ammonia nor peroxide should be used at all.

There is a rhubarb shampoo highly commended for blondes. It is made by putting an ounce each of rhubarb and strained honey into three ounces of white wine, letting the mixture stand, tightly corked, for 24 hours, when it is strained. This is rubbed over the scalp and hair, drying in before being washed out in clear water.

MADE FROM A WICKER BASKET

Dainty Handkerchief Box That May Easily Be Fashioned by Skillful Fingers.

Fancy wicker baskets in a variety of designs and of a suitable size for holding nandkerchiefs may be bought for very little, and treated in the manner shown in our sketch make handy little articles for use at home, or for a small present, or for sale in a bazar.

In the first instance, the lid and interior of the basket is lined with pink batiste, sewn in its place with thread drawn through the spaces in the wicker work. The thread should be chosen of a color to match the wicker as nearly as possible, as then it will be scarcely visible.

Next, it should be padded with cotton wool, plentifully sprinkled with satchet powder, and then covered with some prettily colored piece of satin. Four ribbons of a color to match the satin are sewn inside and tie across the handkerchiefs in the manner illustrated.

Ribbons decorate the handles on either side, and ribbon strings are attached in front by which the lid may be secured when the basket is closed.

STATE CONTROL IS THE CHIEF ISSUE

National Irrigation Congress at Pueblo Will Be Lively

RIGHT TO WATERS CONTESTED

New Mexico, Texas and Kansas Delegations Opposed to That of Colorado—Bryan and Others Address Opening Session.

Pueblo, Col., Sept. 26.—Second only in importance to the subject of irrigation itself, the question of state versus federal control of waters and natural resources looms large before the eighteenth National Irrigation congress which opened here today.

The fact that the meeting place is this year in Colorado, which state has several important interstate streams rising within its borders, gives the local people an unusual interest in this phase of the meeting. The Colorado delegates, both from the San Luis valley and from Denver, are prepared to attack the government's position in refusing reservoir sites in the San Luis valley while the water of the Rio Grande is flowing out of the state because it is claimed it may be needed for the Eagle dam project.

New Mexico and Texas have sent unusually strong delegations to resist any attempted action on the part of Colorado looking to state control of water. The Kansas delegation will work with New Mexico and Texas on this question, as the use of the Arkansas waters in Colorado is preventing Kansas from filling her irrigation ditches, and within the last few weeks Kansas interests have entered suit, as a sequel of the famous Kansas-Colorado case, to secure some of the Arkansas waters.

In connection with the congress is held this year a splendid National Irrigation exposition where delegates and visitors see the practical results of the irrigation work. This exposition was opened this morning.

Bryan Talks at First Session.

The congress proper opened this afternoon, with addresses of welcome from Governor Shafroth and others, and response by the officers of the session were made by William Jennings Bryan and former Gov. Alva Adams of Colorado.

Tomorrow morning will be considered "Private Irrigation" with addresses by Frank C. Goudy of Colorado, Dr. George C. Pardee of California, and George N. Barstow of Texas. R. W. Young of Salt Lake City, J. M. Webster of Wyoming and Norman E. Webster also will speak.

Public irrigation will be discussed in the afternoon by the director of the reclamation service, Senator Carey of Wyoming, John Fairweather of California and Judge Hutton of Los Angeles, William R. Smythe, the "Father of the National Irrigation Congress," will address the evening meeting, on which occasion C. J. Blanchard, statistician of the reclamation service, will give an illustrated lecture.

Wednesday morning will be devoted to "Water Equities" with addresses by Judge Frank H. Short of Fresno, Joseph H. Kibbey, former governor of Arizona, and W. K. Kavanaugh, president of the Lakes-to-the Gulf deep waterway association. The afternoon session on "Irrigation Agriculture" will be addressed by Associate Forester A. F. Potter, Thomas H. Means of California, Dr. W. J. McGee of the department of Agriculture, Col. E. J. Watson, commissioner of agriculture, commerce and industries of South Carolina; Aaron Cove of Colorado, and F. H. Webster of Washington.

Foreigners to Be Heard.

The foreign representatives session on Thursday morning, will be one of the interesting sessions of the congress, with addresses by John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union; Elwood Mead and Hugh McKenzie of Australia; Dr. H. Kaumanns of Germany; E. Skorniakoff of Russia, and other foreign representatives.

General policies will be considered Thursday afternoon with addresses by Gifford Pinchot, former forester; Mrs. H. L. Hollister, president of the Colorado Federation of Women's clubs; Congressman Martin of Colorado and others. Prof. Samuel Fortier and representatives of the department of agriculture will give illustrated lectures Thursday evening. Friday is "Governor's Day," and after selecting a meeting place and officers, the congress adjourns Friday afternoon.

WHO OWNS THE STATE FAIR?

There seems to be some misapprehension both as to the law and the fact, concerning the Iowa state fair, according to Kendall Cameron, of New Market, Iowa, who discusses the question at length in the Register and Leader of September 20th. It seems to be the opinion of many that the fair is a state institution. Such is not a fact, however. In the words of Mr Cameron:

"The fair does not belong to the state any more than the street railways in Des Moines belong to the city of Des Moines, or the county fairs belong to the counties in which they are held. It is owned and controlled by a corporation known as the Iowa Agricultural Association incorporated under the laws of Iowa for a specified number of years."

So, you see, when the state legislature makes an appropriation for the state fair, it just hands a package of the taxpayers' money to a corporation. Ever look at it that way?

No one denies the benefits from the state fair, but if the state is going to support it financially, the fair should be a state institution. At least, so it looks to yours truly.

WILL FREE LAKE FROM CARP

Clear Lake is to be freed from its rough fish, principally the carp, which have for years been such a menace to the game fish. H. E. Wiedner and T. F. McCaffrey were in Clear Lake last week and arrangements were completed for the work which will begin at once. These men have been working in the Mississippi river and its tributaries and are well equipped for the big job they will undertake. The state pays nothing for the work, giving the men all the fish they secure other than those classed as game. There will be six thousand feet of sein in service at one time and this is handled by windlasses on the shore. They will hold from one to six carloads of fish.

NINETEENTH IOWA

Will Hold Annual Reunion at Farmington, Sept. 29-30

MUSTERED IN AT KEOKUK, 1862

Was Sent to Front at Once and Participated in Battle at Prairie Grove, Ark., Where Half of Regiment Was Killed or Wounded

Farmington, Ia., Sept. 24.—On Sept. 29 and 30 the annual reunion of the Nineteenth Iowa infantry volunteers will be held at Farmington. This regiment was mustered in in August, 1862, at Keokuk, Ia., and was sent to the front at once. Its first battle was at Prairie Grove, Ark., December 7, where one-half of the regiment was killed or wounded, but won a victory over four times their number. From there it went to Vicksburg, Miss., and helped to win another victory. From there it was sent to Ft Hudson, but before it arrived there the fort surrendered. It next went to New Orleans and from there to Morganzia, La., where it was sent out seven miles to a plantation with the Twenty-sixth Indiana, and on the morning of September 12, 1863, it fought the battle of Sterling Farm and was captured. This battle was against ten times its number and after two hours' battle it and the Twenty-sixth Indiana were taken prisoners, not by surrender, but personally. The forces charged several times against these two regiments, who numbered all told, not over 500 men. The battle was fierce and for two hours raged in its fury. About 200 of the Nineteenth were captured, and as many escaped through the cane fields and brush. The prisoners were marched to Alexandria and up the Red river to Shreveport and then to Camp Ford, near Tyler, Tex., where they were camped under guard until sent back to Shreveport for exchange, but it was not effected and they remained in camp during the winter and until Gen. N. P. Banks fought and won the battle and then retreated. They were again taken back to Camp Ford and remained there until July, 1864, when they were exchanged at the mouth of the Red river, being prisoners of war ten months. Sept. 29 was the day of the battle and it will be the date for this reunion.

Big Williamsburg Reunion.

Williamsburg.—The sons and daughters of William Evans, who came here in 1844, held a reunion at the old home. They came in the morning with their children and grandchildren and spent the day. Well-filled baskets furnished a bountiful picnic dinner and supper. Forty-five people, representing seventeen different families, were present and the children romped over the lawn and through the orchard as their elders had done years before.

Corn in Fine Shape.

De Witt—The last week has been a favorable one for king corn and ten more days will put 90 per cent of the great crop, we have in this part of the state, out of the way of frost. The small grain crop, yielded large and excellent quality. Pastures at the present time are simply elegant. The only thing we seem to be short of is potatoes.

Picking Strawberries.

Creston.—William Krissinger of this city is harvesting the second crop of strawberries from vines grown in his yard. The vines bore abundantly during the regular season and after the bearing period was over Mr. Krissinger trimmed the plants close to the ground. They have now matured the second time, blossomed and are full of ripe luscious berries.

Boy Caught in Shafting.

Johnson County Couple Indicted.

Iowa City.—The Johnson county grand jury has indicted Jed Hall and Mrs. Cora Mechler, charged with "loving not wisely, but too well." Hall left a wife and children behind, when he fled, and his companion abandoned her children.

Accused Girl Freed.

Burlington.—Miss Cora Hanes, 16, of Creston, accused of passing several bad checks was released after her mother had made good the losses said to have been sustained by local merchant

Charles Barrett Slain at Oskaloosa.

Oskaloosa, Ia.—Charles Barrett, 58 years of age, a well-known farmer, was shot and killed by an unknown assassin while he was prowling about the residence of his divorced wife in this city. Mrs. Barrett and other members of the family had been to a musical entertainment and returned home about 11 o'clock. They claim they were all in the house when three shots were heard outside. Mrs. Barrett and her son, Sam, rushed to the porch and saw a man run by the side of the house and fall dead in the street. Investigating later young Barrett found that the body was that of his father.

Immediately following the shooting a woman of the neighborhood saw a stranger run from an alley and disappear in the shadows down the street.

The police have no positive evidence, but are holding Mrs. Barrett and her son Sam, being convinced that they know more about the shooting than they have told. Grant Brown, a brother of Mrs. Barrett, also is being held on suspicion as it is said he has on numerous occasions made threats that he would kill Barrett.

The Barretts were divorced about three years ago, since which time Mrs. Barrett has been living in her own property here in town. Her friends say she has been subjected to constant annoyance by her former husband, whom she divorced on the grounds of brutality and drunkenness.

Barret spent a good deal of his time in town, but made his home with his parents in the country. The parents are wealthy and Barrett was heir to a large share of the estate.

"Dead" Husband Very Much Alive.

Fort Dodge.—Rivaling the story of Enoch Arden is the story told Judge Lee in district court by Mrs. Henry Searles, who June 7, married Fred Rahn, believing Searles had been killed in Montana. Rahn petitioned the court to annul the marriage as Searles is still alive. The petition was granted.

Mrs. Searles married her first husband at Miles City, Mont., Oct. 25, 1908. In September, 1909, she returned for a visit with relatives here. In December she received word from her mother that Searles had been killed by a broncho he was trying to break. Mrs. Searles will go to South Dakota to join her husband who has been homesteading a claim.

Desperado Pleads Guilty In Nevada.

Nevada. — Richard Daniels, the young man who held up a store in this city early in May and afterwards stood off a posse of a couple of hundred for an hour or so, during which time he shot an officer and another member of the posse, was indicted by the grand jury upon two charges, that of assault with intent to commit manslaughter and larceny, was arraigned and pleaded guilty to the first charge. He received an intermediate sentence. His sole concern has been to keep the matter from his people who are well-to-do and respectable. He acknowledged in court when he entered his plea, that Daniels was an assumed name.

Harrington Family Reunion.

Williamsburg.—The fourth annual reunion of the Harrington family was held at the residence of F. O. Harrington. Seventy-seven relatives were present, coming from Williamsburg, Wyoming, North English and Iowa City and the States of Colorado and Pennsylvania. Millard Harrington was elected president and Mrs. Walter Harrington, secretary-treasurer for the ensuing year. A bountiful picnic dinner and supper was served on the spacious lawn.

Big Crop of Flax.

Fort Dodge.—John A. Johnson, a farmer of this vicinity, has a crop of flax that is as unusually fine this year as are the more common Iowa crops. He is harvesting twenty-five bushels to the acre which, at the present market price, will bring him $55 an acre. Red clover also is unusually fine in this vicinity and one farmer's second crop, it is estimated, will bring him $30 an acre for seed.

Farm House Burned.

Boone.—A farm house owned by P. M. Samberg of this city, located on his farm in Marcy township, about five miles south of Boone, was burned to the ground with all of its contents. The house was occupied by Charles Ericson and family. Mrs. Ericson with her three small children were alone at the time when the house caught fire. There was an insurance of only $1,000 on the house.

Canning Factory Busy.

Hampton.—The Hampton canning factory is doing an immense business these days, getting out an average of 100,000 cans per day. The factory is running days and most of the nights in order to take care of the corn brought in by the farmers.

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD
ILLUSTRATIONS BY MAGNUS G. KETTNER

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Nathaniel Plum of the sloop lands secretly on Beaver Island, Lake Michigan, stronghold of the Mormons. Obadiah Price, an eccentric leader and councilor of the Mormons, has been spying on him, suddenly meets him and tells him he is expected. Plum insists he has got the wrong man. Price ignores his protestations and asks for the ammunition on board the sloop. He binds Nat by a solemn oath to deliver a package to Franklin Pierce, President of the United States. He agrees to. Plum the Mormon town, St. James. Plum sees the frightened face of a young woman in the darkness near Obadiah's cabin. She disappears, leaving an odor of lilacs.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

For several minutes Captain Plum stood as if the sudden apparition had hypnotized him. He listened long after the sound of retreating footsteps had died away. There remained behind them the sweet odor of lilac which had filled his soul and set his blood tingling. It was a beautiful face that he had seen. He was sure of that and yet he could have given no good verification or proof of it. Only the eyes and the odor of lilac remained with him clearly, for after a little the lilac drifted away. Then he went back to the log and sat down. He smiled as he thought of the joke that he had unwittingly played on Obadiah. From his knowledge of the Beaver Island Mormons he was satisfied that the man who displayed gold in such reckless profusion was anything but a bachelor. In all probability this favorite one of his wives and the cabin sheltered him, he concluded, was for some reason isolated from the harem. Evidently that little saintess is not there," he concluded, "or she would have given me time to speak to her."

The continued absence of Obadiah began to fill Captain Plum with impatience. After an hour's wait he entered the cabin and made his way into the little room, where the candle was still burning dimly. To his astonishment he beheld the old man sitting beside the table. His thin face was propped between his hands and his eyes were closed as if he was asleep. They shot open instantly on Captain Plum's appearance.

"I've been waiting for you, Nat," he said, straightening himself with cat-like quickness. "Waiting for you a long time, Nat!" He rubbed his hands and chuckled at his own cleverness. "I saw you out there engaging yourself. What did you think of her, Nat?" He winked with such mischievous glee that, despite his own astonishment, Captain Plum burst into a laugh. Obadiah Price held up his warning hand. "Tut, tut, not so loud!" he admonished. His face was a map of wrinkles. His little black eyes shone with silent laughter. There was no doubt but that he was immensely pleased over something. Tell me, Nat—why did you come to St. James?"

He leaned forward over the table, his old white head almost resting on it, and twiddled his thumbs with wonderful rapidity. "Eh, Nat?" he urged. "Why did you come?"

"Because it was too hot and uninteresting lying out there in a calm," replied the master of the Typhoon. "We've been roasting for 36 hours without a breath to fill our sails. Came over to see what you people were like. Any harm done?"

"Not a bit, not a bit—yet," chuckled the old man. "And what's your business, Nat?"

"Sailing—mostly."

"Ho, ho, ho! of course, I might have known it! Sailing—mostly. And certainly you sail! And why do you carry a pistol on one side of you and a knife on the other, Nat?"

"Troublous times, Dad. Some of the fisherfolk along the Northern End are very scrupulous. They took a ton of canned stuffs from me a week back."

"And what use do you make of the pounder that's wrapped up in sailin under your deck, Nat? And what in the world are you going to do with five barrels of gunpowder?"

"Blow in blazes—" began Captain Nat.

"Ah, to be sure, to be sure—they're after the fisher-folk," interrupted Obadiah Price. "Blow 'em up, eh, Nat? But you seem to be a young man of education, Nat. How did you happen to make a mistake in your count? Weren't you 12 men aboard your sloop instead of eight, Nat? Aren't there instead of eight? Eh, Nat?"

"The devil take you!" cried Captain Plum, leaping suddenly to his feet, his face flaming red. "Yes, I have 12 men and I've got a gun in sailin and I've got five barrels of powder! But how in the name of kingdom-come did you find it out?"

Obadiah Price came around the end of the table and stood so close to Captain Plum that a person ten feet away could not have heard him when he spoke.

"I know more than that, Nat," he whispered. "Listen! A little while ago—say two weeks back—you were becalmed off the head of Beaver Island, and one dark night you were boarded by two boat-loads of men who made you and your crew prisoners, robbed you of everything you had—and the next day you went back to Chicago. Eh?"

Nathaniel stood speechless.

"And you made up your mind the pirates were Mormons, enlisted some of your friends, armed your ship—and you're back here to make us settle. Isn't it so, Nat?"

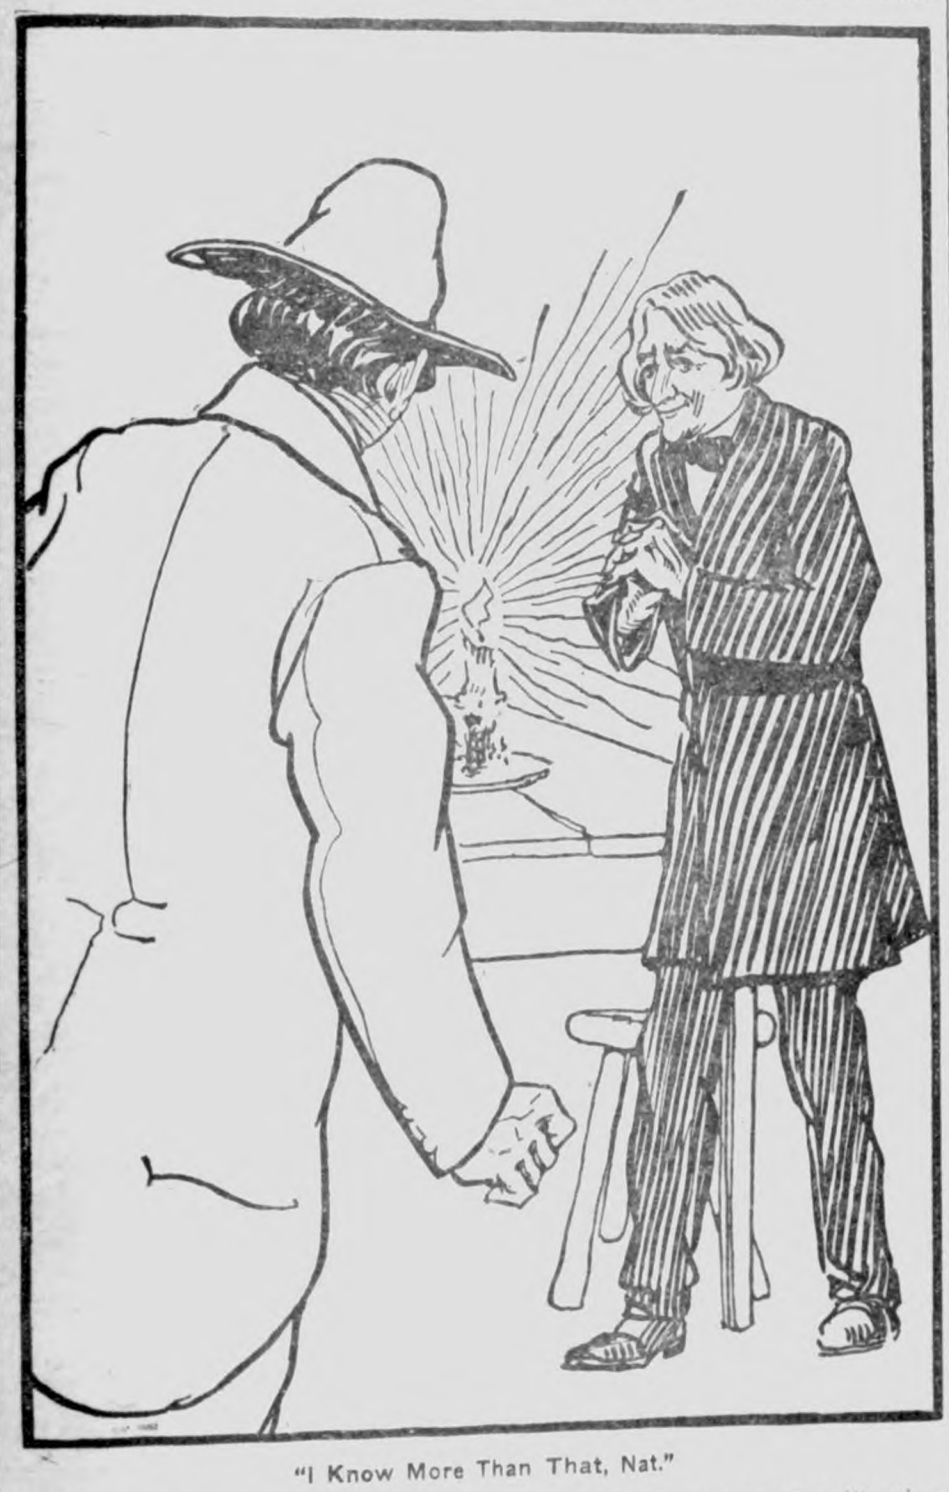
The little old man was rubbing his hands eagerly, excitedly.

"You tried to get the revenue cutter Michigan to come down with you, but they wouldn't—ho, ho, they wouldn't! One of our friends in Chicago sent quick word ahead of you to tell me all about it, and—Strang, the king, doesn't know!"

He spoke the last words in intense earnestness.

Then, suddenly, he held out his hand.

"Young man, will you shake hands with me? Will you shake hands?—and then we will go to St. James!"



"I Know More Than That, Nat."

Captain Plum thrust out a hand and the old man gripped it. The thin fingers tightened like cold clamps of steel. For a moment the face of Obadiah Price underwent a strange change. The hardness and glitter went out of his eyes and in place there came a questioning, almost an appealing, look. His tense mouth relaxed. It was as if he was on the point of surrendering to some emotion which he was struggling to stifle. And Nathaniel, meeting those eyes, felt that somewhere within him had been struck a strange chord of sympathy, something that made this little old man more than a halfmad stranger to him, and involuntarily the grip of his fingers tightened around those of his companion.

"Now we will go to St. James, Captain Plum!"

He attempted to withdraw his hand but Captain Plum held to it.

"Not yet!" he exclaimed. "There are two or three things which your friend didn't tell you, Obadiah Price!"

Nathaniel's eyes glittered dangerously.

"When I left ship this morning I gave explicit orders to Casey, my mate."

He gazed steadily into the old man's unflinching eyes.

"I said something like this: 'Casey, I'm going to see Strang before I come back. If he's willing to settle for five thousand, we'll call it off. And if he isn't—why, we'll stand out there a mile and blow St. James into hell! And if I don't come back by to-morrow at sundown, Casey, you take command and blow it to hell without me!' So, Obadiah Price, if there's treachery—"

The old man clutched at his hands with insane fierceness.

"There will be no treachery, Nat, I swear to God there will be no treachery! Come, we will go—"

Still Captain Plum hesitated.

"Who are you? Whom am I to follow?"

"A member of our holy Council of Twelve, Nat, and lord high treasurer of his majesty, King Strang!"

Before Captain Plum could recover from the surprise of this whispered announcement the little old man had freed himself and was pattering awfully through the darkness of the next room. The master of the Typhoon followed close behind him. Outside the councilor hesitated for a moment, as if debating which route to take, and then with a prodigious wink at Captain Plum and a throatful of his inimitable chuckles, chose the path down which his startled visitor of a short time before had fled. For 15 minutes this path led between thick black walls of forest verdure. Obadiah Price kept always a few paces ahead of his companion and spoke not a word. At the end of perhaps half a mile the path entered into a large clearing on the farther side of which Nathaniel caught the glimmer of a light. They passed close to this light, which came from the window of a large square house built of logs, and Captain Plum became suddenly conscious that the air was filled with the redolent perfume of lilac. With half a dozen quick strides he overtook the councilor and caught him by the arm.

"I smell lilac!" he exclaimed.

"Certainly, so do I," replied Obadiah Price. "We have very fine lilacs on the island."

"And I smelled lilac back there," continued Nathaniel, still holding to the old man's arm, and pointing a thumb over his shoulder. "I smelled 'em back there, when—"

"Ho, ho, ho!" chuckled the councilor softly. "I don't doubt it, Nat, I don't doubt it. She is very fond of lilacs. She wears the flowers very often."

He pulled himself away and Captain Plum could hear his queer chuckling for some time after. Soon they entered the gloom of the woods again and a little later came out into another clearing and Nathaniel knew that it was St. James that lay at his feet. The lights of a few fishing boats were twinkling in the harbor, but for the most part the town was dark. Here and there a window shone like a spot of phosphorescent yellow in the dismal gloom and the great beacon still burned steadily over the home of the prophet.

"Ah, it is not time," whispered Obadiah. "It is still too early." He drew his companion out of the path which they had followed and sat himself down on a hummock a dozen yards away from it, inviting Nathaniel by a pull of the sleeve to do the same. There were three of these hummocks, side by side, and Captain Plum chose the one nearest the old man and waited for him to speak. But the councilor did not open his lips. Doubled over until his chin rested almost upon the sharp points of his knees, he gazed steadily at the beacon, and as he looked it shuddered and grew dark, like a firefly that suddenly closes its wings. With a quick spring the councilor straightened himself and turned to the master of the Typhoon.

"You have a good nose, Nat," he said, "but your ears are not so good. Sh-h-h-h!" He lifted a hand warningly and nodded sidewise toward the path. Captain Plum listened. He heard low voices and then footsteps—voices that were approaching rapidly, and were those of women, and footsteps that were almost running. The old man caught him by the arm and as the sounds came nearer his grip tightened.

"Don't frighten them, Nat. Get down!"

He crouched until he was only a part of the shadows of the ground and following his example Nathaniel slipped between two of the knolls. A few yards away the sound of the voices ceased and there was a hesitancy in the soft tread of the approaching steps. Slowly, and now in awesome silence, two figures came down the path and when they reached a point opposite the hummocks Nathaniel could see that they turned their faces toward them and that for a brief space there was something of terror in the gleam he caught of their eyes. In a moment they had passed. Then he heard them running.

"They saw not!" Captain Plum exclaimed.

Obadiah hopped to his feet and rubbed his hands with great glee. "What a temptation, Nat!" he whispered. "What a temptation to frighten them out of their wits! No, they didn't see us, Nat—they didn't see us. The girls are always frightened when they pass these graves. Some day—"

"Graves!" almost shouted the master of the Typhoon. "Graves—and we sitting on 'em!"

"That's all right, Nat—that's all right. They're my graves, so we're welcome to sit on them. I often come here and sit for hours at a time. They like to have me, especially little Jean—the middle one. Perhaps I'll tell you about Jean before you go away."

If Captain Plum had been watching him he would have seen that soft mysterious light again shining in the old councilor's eyes. But now Nathaniel stood erect, his nostrils sniffing the air, catching once more the sweet scent of lilac. He hurried out into the opening, with the old man close behind him, and peered down into the starlit gloom into which the two girls had disappeared. The lovely face that had appeared to him for an instant at Obadiah's cabin began to haunt him. He was sure now that his sudden appearance had not been the only cause of its terror, and he felt that he should have called out to her or followed until he had overtaken her. He could easily have excused his boldness, even if the councilor had been watching him from the cabin door. He was certain that she had passed very near to him again and that the fright which Obadiah had attempted to explain was not because of the graves. He swung about upon his companion, determined to ask for an explanation. The latter seemed to divine his thought.

"Don't let a little scent of lilac disturb you so, young man," he said with singular coldness. "It may cause you great unpleasantness." He went ahead and Nathaniel followed him, assured that the old man's words and the way in which he had spoken them no longer left a doubt as to the identity of his night visitor. She was one of the councilor's wives, so he thought, and his own interest in her was beginning to have an irritating effect. In other words Obadiah was becoming jealous.

For some time there was silence between the two. Obadiah Price now walked with extreme slowness and along paths which seemed to bring him no nearer to the town below. Nathaniel could see that he was absorbed in thoughts of his own, and held his peace. Was it possible that he had spoiled his chances with the councilor because of a pretty face and a bunch of lilacs? The thought tickled Captain Plum despite the delicacy of his situation and he broke into an involuntary laugh. The laugh brought Obadiah to a halt as suddenly as though some one had thrust a bayonet against his breast.

Cataclysmic Geology.

"Cataclysmic" geology no longer exists. It was once the accepted opinion that the great changes on the earth's surface had been mainly brought about by sudden and violent (cataclysmic) agencies; but Sir Charles Lyell, as far back as 1838, demolished the old theory of cataclysm at once and forever. Sir Charles proved by facts which were indisputable that the great geological changes have been produced slowly by gradual processes of subsidence and elevation, and not by earthquakes, volcanic action, etc. Lyell may be said to be the father of modern geology, or, to put it more correctly, of real, scientific geology.

OBSTINATE SPREADING ECZEMA QUICKLY CURED

Mrs. Wm. C. Wood, Newark, N. J., writes:

"Resinol Ointment cured an obstinate case of spreading Eczema on my little ten year old boy's leg, after various other salves had signally failed. The trouble had existed for six months, and nothing seemed to do any good until we procured a jar of Resinol, which quickly cured him. It has now become a household remedy with us. We also have Resinol Soap in daily use by the children, and their skin, health and complexion are perfect."

Resinol Ointment can be positively relied on to give instant relief and quickly cure the torturing skin diseases of infancy and childhood. For eczema, nettle rash, chafing, disfiguring pimples and itching eruptions of all kinds, it is a prompt and sure remedy.

Every family should be safe-guarded with Resinol preparations—Resinol Ointment to cure the skin troubles that now and then occur; Resinol Soap to use regularly for the toilet and bath, to keep the skin pure and healthy and preserve the complexion. Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick is also the best and safest to use, because it keeps the face free from eruptions and prevents infection.

These preparations are sold at all drug stores.

We send free on application a valuable little booklet on Care of the Skin and Complexion. Send for it. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

NO HEALTHY SKIN LEFT

"My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rash. Three doctors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not dress him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medical college, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Ointment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mass of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it used to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heartbreaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced to dry up. His skin peeled off twenty times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day, twelve years or more since the cure was effected. Robert Wattam, 1148 Forty-eighth St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 9, 1909."

USED HYPODERMICS.

Only Relief From Terrible Suffering.

Thomas E. Vest, 1505 S. 12th St., Terre Haute, Ind., says: "I had no control over the urine and the pain when voiding it was so great I often screamed. I grew worse and lay in bed for weeks, the only relief being from hypodermics. I was treated by three physicians without help and the last one said an operation was necessary. At this time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and passed a gravel stone as large as a pea. The next day I passed two more and from then on improved rapidly until cured."

Fountain of Youth Found in Louisiana

In boring for oil at Monroe, Louisiana, recently, the accidental discovery of a wonderful well of salt water was made which is said to possess marvelous properties. From the same well with the immense volume of water, is a flow of natural gas approximating 30,000 feet daily.

To utilize the water a concrete Natatorium has been erected and the gas flowing from the same pipe is used for illumination. Aside from the novelty, the mixture of the gas and water seems to produce particularly beneficial effects, and many persons variously afflicted claim results little short of miraculous.

Whether the emanations of radium which the water seems to contain or the invigoration of the salt which is held in solution in large quantities are alone responsible, is not known, but that those who drink the water and bathe in the pool are affected beneficially cannot be doubted. Elderly persons of the utmost dignity disport themselves like youngsters and absorb a youthful mien which is the source of amazement to onlookers.

Careful analyses are being made by scientists and it seems possible that the little city of Monroe will soon enjoy a world wide reputation as a health resort.

Procure season tickets and get the benefit of all four numbers for $1 50

Following are the entertainers and the dates of their appearance in Klemme:

October 13 — Ned Woodman, Cartoonist.

December 8— Prof. Walden in magic and mystery and Heverly, the handcuff king.

January 26—Thomas McClary, lecturer.

February 4— Albert Edward Wiggam, iecturer.

THE FIRST NUMBER

On next Thursday evening, October 13th, the first number will be given— Ned Woodman, the cartoonist. Mr. Woodman is a humorist who is unusually gifted with a means of expression. He is funny to look at— says funny things in prose, verse and dialect — composes music and, perhaps best of all, draws pictures; for it is with his work as a cartoonist that his widest reputation has been made.

For three years he was on the art staff of the Chicago Inter-Ocean. He has also been associated with The Journal, The Record-Herald, The Ram's Horn and other Chicago publications. During the autumn of 1903 he was engaged by the Chicago Record-Herald to invent and draw a remarkably ingenious and amusing series of puzzles and games. His entertainments are interspersed with readings from popular humorists, delivered in a spirited and highly pleasing manner, while his original humor is of that quaint dry sort that crops out where it is least expected.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was soreness in my right side. In a short time a bunch came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away."—Mrs. R. R. PRISON CONGRESS BEGINS ITS WORK

Great International Gathering Is Opened in Washington

SPEECH BY PRESIDENT TAFT

He Welcomes the Representatives of Many Nations—Address by Professor Henderson, Presiding Officer of Convention.

Washington, Oct. 3.—More than 100 of the most distinguished criminologists of the world, representing almost every civilized nation, were gathered in the great hall of the National museum yesterday afternoon when the International Prison congress was called to order promptly at two o'clock. Prof. Charles R. Henderson of the University of Chicago, who was elected president of the congress last year to succeed the late Dr. Samuel J. Barrows, was in the chair and introduced to the assemblage President Taft, who was received with hearty applause.

President Taft spoke rather briefly, but made clear his personal interest in the work of the congress and told the delegates how glad the United States was of the opportunity to entertain them. He alluded to the efforts in this country to better the conditions of prison life and to make good citizens of the criminal and delinquent, and said he hoped the visitors from foreign lands had seen evidences of the success of these efforts during their recent tour of the east and middle west as guests of the government.

President Henderson's Address.

President Henderson, after adding his words of welcome to those of Mr. Taft, spoke in part as follows:

"The Prison congress agrees on the following things: We believe that children should never be sent to prison with adults; that the ancient penal procedure should be fundamentally modified in their case; that young delinquents should receive a certain amount of education under the paternal supervision of the judge or of a special magistrate. It is a question with us still whether this education should continue until the sixteenth, eighteenth or even the twenty-first year.

"Secondly we are in accord in the belief that the insane should be excluded from prisons and that they should be confined to hospitals. Public security and the interests of the insane themselves demand the segregation of the insane under medical specialists.

"Thirdly, we believe, moreover, that there are many young delinquents and even adults who are guilty of having yielded to bad examples. Such individuals are not intentionally vicious. They should be spared the stigma of becoming criminals by being saved the moral injury of incarceration by a suspension of sentence with a period of freedom under supervision. We are also in accord in recommending after a certain period of incarceration the release of young or adult prisoners on provision that their liberty shall be conditional and carefully supervised. It is not possible to make useful citizens in absolute slavery.

"We believe, moreover in the necessity of doing away with the short sentence in the case of guilty persons who are dangerous whether they be vagabonds or inebriates, hardened criminals or professional criminals. The period of detention and of supervision may be extended either by a supplementary sentence or by placing the offender at the disposition of the government.

Severe Justice Most Beneficial.

"We urge furthermore the union of all investigators and reformers.

"One single, powerful purpose common to us all has brought us together in this hall of the National museum consecrated to science. We represent the firm determination of society and the national government to render the way of the transgressors against social order hard and thorny in order that fear may restrain the evil-doer and that an inflexible force shall constrain him to obey the laws. We preach also the gospel of the reform of the delinquent and his education. We seek to elevate the moral standard of humanity. We desire to open wide to the delinquent the door of hope. There never has been a conflict between justice and pity, because only compassion allows a vicious man to follow his course without hindrance. It is not compassion, but weakness. Justice is truly beneficial when it deprives the malefactor of the liberty which he has abused, when it forces him to form the habit of work and pursuades him that his true interest is in becoming a loyal and useful citizen.

"The state is the power which should control the forces which act upon the character of the prisoner. The state alone can direct his conduct. The state is the supreme organ of the will and morality of the entire people. It cannot be left to philanthropists alone to seek the reformation and the instruction of the malefactor, leaving to the state simply the punishing and the inflicting of penalties of the prisoner. The state is responsible for the conditions which concern the convict. If the prisoner is returned to liberty simply, without instruction, without a trade cherishing in his heart the idea of vengeance, philanthropists will have a difficult and not to say impossible task. In modern civilization, the majority of citizens are friends of humanity, and the government which neglects its prisoners does not represent the mind of the mass of the nation."

In the evening there was a joint meeting of the congress with the American Prison association, at which addresses were delivered by Z. R. Brockway, former superintendent of the Elmira reformatory; Major R. W. McClaughry of the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan.; Sir Evelyn Ruggles-Brise, president of the British prison commission; Dr. Guillaume of Berne Switzerland, secretary of the International Prison congress, and Dr. Borel. Today the section meetings of the congress will begin.

GREAT POW-WOW OF INDIANS

Toppenish, Wash., Oct. 3.—About 4,000 Indians, representing all the tribes of the Northwest west of the Mississippi river, gathered in a national convention today at this place. It is one of the most important meetings of red men in many years, and will last ten days.

The federal government sanctioned the pow-wow, at which the spectacular features will be the sun and religious dances of the early days and a series of races with Indian riders on Indian ponies.

HOME FOR AGED CARPENTERS

Resolutions Committee Favors Such Institution in Report to Convention.

Des Moines, Oct. 1.—Tubercular, disabled and aged members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America will find care in a home which will doubtless be established by the union as a result of action taken by the convention of the brotherhood at the Auditorium. A resolution favoring the founding of such a home was reported by the resolutions committee. It found favor in the eyes of the delegates and they referred it to the general officers with instructions to thoroughly investigate and report back at the next biennial convention.

Work on the report of the constitutional committee was concluded yesterday. Consideration of the report of the resolutions committee and that of the organization committee was also completed and the convention adjourned last night.

PUBLIC SERVANTS CONVENE

National Federation of States, City and Town Employees Meets in Worcester, Mass.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 3.—The annual convention of the National Federation of State, City and Town Employees was held in this city yesterday with President Michael F. O'Brien in the chair. The delegates came from all parts of the country and there was lively discussion of plans for bettering the conditions of their employment, especial attention being given to the encroachment of the contract system on municipal and state work. The public employees' compensation bill, pensions, the minimum wage and other topics were debated by members and invited speakers. Mayor James Logan and Jeremiah Fitzgerald, head of the local union welcomed the delegates. This evening a banquet will be given by the Worcester union.

NETHERLANDS LED THE WAY

LITTLE COUNTRY WAS PIONEER IN PRISON REFORM.

Professor Van der Aa Tells International Congress About the "Rasphouse" and "Spinnhouse" of Sixteenth Century.

Washington, Oct. 3.—That the tiny country of the Netherlands was a European pioneer in prison reform was the thesis of the public lecture by Professor Simon Van der Aa this afternoon before the International Prison congress. Dr. Van der Aa, professor of criminal law at the University of Groningen, traced the rise of the prison system of the Netherlands out of and away from the atrocious tortures and abundant executions of the period succeeding the time of the Reformation. He said:

"The first beginnings of prison organization date from the last part of the sixteenth century. At that time, capitol punishment stood at the head of the list and corporal punishment in second place. In 1589 the aldermen of Amsterdam, objecting to a sentence of death passed upon a youth of sixteen, resolved to 'erect a house where all vagabonds, malefactors, rascals and such people could be confined and put to work, for so long a time as the justices should deem fit.' From this resolution arose the 'rasphouse' and the 'spinnhouse.'"

Professor Van der Aa then rapidly sketched the organization of these houses pointing out that many of the modern reform principles found expression in the Netherlands at this early date. There was classification by sex and by age; sentences were not always definite (thus giving the earliest known example of the practise of the indeterminate sentence); the organization was relatively systematic; labor was enforced and productive, being a marvelous contrast to other prisons; there was even a school of letters maintained on a small scale. The buildings and the cells excited wonder in their time because of their completeness and their excellence, although they fell far short of the prison standards of the twentieth century. Indeed, the epidemics raged more fatally outside the "rasphouse" and the "spinnhouse" than inside.

"Discipline was severe," concluded Dr. Van der Aa, "yet we must bear in mind the rough and turbulent character of the prison population. These prisons incited many imitators. John Howard, the great English prison reformer of the eighteenth century, noted with joy the small number of executions and the excellent condition of prisons in the Netherlands."

URGES PENOLOGY TRAINING

Professor Vambery of Hungary Says on This Depends Future of Prison Reform.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Quoting the statement of Havelock Ellis that "the prison officer of today is about as well fitted for the treatment of criminality as the hospital nurse of a century ago was fitted for the treatment of disease," Professor R. Vambery of Hungary, professor in the University of Budapest, pleaded before a large audience at the International Prison congress this afternoon for thorough professional training of prison officials, both in high places and in subordinate positions. Professor Vambery paid tribute to the remarkable personalities of many wardens and superintendents of American and European prisons, but maintained that on the solution of the far greater question of the training in general of prison officers depends the entire future of prison reform as well as of penal law. "It can no longer be passed over in silence."

"Training schools for prison officials," said Professor Vambery, "have been founded in France, Italy, Spain, Hungary and other European countries. In my own country of Hungary we have had for several years courses of twenty weeks a year for the chief officers of the various penal and corrective institutions, the courses embracing the elements of jurisprudence, criminology, criminal psychology, theoretical and practical prison management, treatment of youthful offenders, and prison hygiene. A museum of penology is connected with the course of instruction."

In conclusion Professor Vambery paid a high compliment to the United States in stating that "for the solution of the problem of the adequate training of prison officials, we of Europe look to your mighty country, where full justice is done to the theoretical exigencies of any problem. For more than a century we in Europe have been accustomed to see the sun of prison reform rise in the west."

STATE PUBLICITY BUREAU.

is Slogan of Committee of Eleven of Des Moines Admen's Club.

"A state publicity bureau for Iowa" is the slogan adopted by the Committee of Eleven of the Des Moines Admen's Club, who have districted the state and are working hammer and tongs for the passage of a bill by the next legislature.

The last census shows that the state has been losing population, while the total wealth has been increasing at a wonderful rate.

Iowa soil is not being made to produce half what it should produce, and there is not a quarter of the manufactured goods made within the state that it annually consumes.

The Publicity Bureau, which it is proposed (by the committee of eleven) to establish under the direction of the state department of agriculture, will be the means of disseminating a vast fund of information regarding the state and its possibilities. Little stories of successes achieved here and there throughout Iowa may be published to inspire others to do as well. The work will be of an educational nature.

The people of the state will be more fully informed of the wonderful opportunities that lie at their very doors and are now being neglected. With this information at hand, so that they know their state and can talk its advantages, they will be less susceptible to the alluring advertising of far-distant and less favored regions.

To assist in financing the movement, the profits from the house and stock company of one of the most popular theatres in Des Moines have been donated to the committee, for a period of one entire week, beginning Oct. 2d.

The Committee of Eleven is working for a record attendance, so that the profits may be sufficient to finance the entire campaign and make it thoroughly effective.

A speakers' bureau has been organized, which will assist in forming advertising clubs in all the prominent towns of the state, and address clubs already formed whenever it can be of assistance in spreading the propaganda now so successfully under way.

The idea has already been indorsed by the Iowa League of Commercial Clubs and the Iowa League of Municipalities, two of the most powerful organizations in the state, and personal letters have been received from over 500 editors and leading business men and advertisers of the state, strongly favoring the movement.

If you favor such a bureau, send your name to Frank Armstrong, Chairman, or W. M. Eldred, secretary of the Committee of Eleven, 322 Flynn building, Des Moines.

Reservations for the theatre benefit, week of October 2, may also be made through these officers of the Committee.

Leavenworth Next Year.

Leavenworth, Kan., gets the next military tournament that is put on by the department of the Missouri. The war department has passed upon it and representatives of the Leavenworth miltary committee are in Des Moines gathering data which they hops will be of service to them in its conduct.

Ten True Bills Reported.

Ten true bills were reported by the grand jury, Lloyd McKibben must stand trial on a charge of forgery, Frank Chiado and John Giglotti were indicted for malicious threats to extort, Don Losh for indecent exposure and Frank Winterhaus for lewdness. The others are not in custody.

Granted Fourth Divorce.

Mrs. Violet Gay has been granted her fourth decree of divorce by Judge James A. Howe in the equity division of the district court. Mrs. Gay has tried marriage four times, according to her story, and in each case found that the object of her devotion was addicted to liquor.

Jury Disagrees In Williams Case.

HIS RUBBERS HAD VANISHED

Consequently Man From the Country Had Little Use for City Methods.

The benches in the waiting rooms at the Union depot in Kansas City are used for other purposes than to rest on by travelers, the Kansas City Star enlightens us. At every midnight the maids clean out the rooms. They do not forget to poke under the benches for stray bundles left by trusting travelers.

Sometimes, after intervals, the travelers return to claim their property. Some time ago a red cap at the depot saw a man in a linen duster, a felt hat and the manner of one who had spent his life in a secluded part of the Ozarks get down on his knees and peer carefully under several of the benches.

"Lost anything, mister?" the red cap queried.

"Wall, no, sonny, not a'zactly. I left a pair of rubbers here last January when I was on the way tew Emporey. Hain't seen nuthin' of 'em, have you?"

The red cap explained that he hadn't, and, moreover, that the room had been cleaned out several dozen times since last January.

"Well, I swan," replied the traveler, blinking and stroking his beard, "the city methods do beat me."

BABY'S SKIN TORTURE

"When our baby was seven weeks old he broke out with what we thought was heat, but which gradually grew worse. We called in a doctor. He said it was eczema and from that time we doctored six months with three of the best doctors in Atchison but he only got worse. His face, head and hands were a solid sore. There was no end to the suffering for him. We had to tie his little hands to keep him from scratching. He never knew what it was to sleep well from the time he took the disease until he was cured. He kept us awake all hours of the night and his health wasn't what you would call good. We tried everything but the right thing.

"Finally I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies and I am pleased to say we did not use all of them until he was cured. We have waited a year and a half to see if it would return but it never has and to-day his skin is clear and fair as it possibly could be. I hope Cuticura may save some one else's little ones suffering and also their pocket-books. John Leason, 1403 Atchison St., Atchison, Kan., Oct. 19, 1909."

Why He Wouldn't Hurry.

They were riding to church and were late. Several of the party were worried and one remarked: "The audience will be waiting." "Well," observed the old pastor (who was to preach that forenoon), "don't let's fret over it if we are a little late. It reminds me of the man who was being taken to execution. His guards were greatly exercised over the fact that they could not possibly get there on time. 'Never mind,' said the poor fellow, philosophically. 'Don't fuss over it. The people can wait. There'll be nothing doing till I get there.'"—Christian Herald.

Good Advice, but——

A traveler entered a railway carriage at a wayside station. The sole occupants of the compartment consisted of an old lady and her son, about twelve years old. Nothing of note occurred until the train steamed into the station at which tickets were collected. The woman, not having a ticket for the boy, requested him to "corrie doon."

The traveler intervened and suggested putting him under the seat.

"Man," said the excited woman, "it's as shair as death; but there's twa under the sait a'ready!"

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

During the past week the Times has received a big advertising proposition from Montgomery Ward & Co., the big mail order house These big concerns know only too well that it pays to advertise, and to advertise extensively, and they also know that the best way to reach the buyers is through the columns of the country newspapers. The sooner the country merchant realizes this fact and acts accordingly, the sooner the mail order house will quit doing the business that legitimately belongs to the country stores.

The First National Bank of Crystal Lake has been closed and is in the hands of a bank examiner. A lot of bad and worthless notes is the cause of the failure. It will be known as the Farmers National Bank, and has since been authorized to begin business. The capital is $25,000 —Kanawha Record.

A Radical Departure

There never was a time in the history of the world when good stories and articles could command such large prices as they do today. It is an extremely expensive thing to publish a high class magazine nowadays, filled with the best products of the most famous authors and artists.

Yet together with its many attractive features the Chicago Record-Herald furnishes its readers with its Sunday Magazine section that compares favorably with the best weeklies and monthlies, and has some merits peculiar to itself. The most famous writers and illustrators contribute to it. Some of the choicest novels of the year are published serially in its columns before they see the light in book form. The best new humorist since Mr. Dooley began writing is a regular contributor to its columns alone. To furnish such a magazine with every copy of a Sunday newspaper is an amazing venture, yet the experiment has proved a complete success and is now firmly established.

Fortune In Broom Corn

R. J. Terwilliger, a former resident of Garner, but who moved to Liberal, Kansas, some time ago, has struck it rich. He purchased a large tract of cheap land in the vicinity of Liberal, and this season planted 1,700 acres in broom corn and conservative estimates on the crop place the yield at over 300 tons, which, at the prevailing market price, should net Mr. Terwilliger above $30,000. He certainly did not go far wrong in putting his farm in broom corn this year.

The Meservey Messenger is conducting a popular girl piano contest. We hope Bro. Gordon may realize a big bunch of money on the contest. but our opinion, based on the result of similar contests which we have seen tried by small papers, is that he will be dissatisfied with the results. There always seems to be more or less dissatisfaction among the losing contestants which it is hard to overcome.

THEY WERE SURPRISED

A very pleasant surprise was perpetrated upon Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Wessel and daughter Lurena, last Friday evening, when the members of his congregation all dropped in at the parsonage to spend the evening. The event was a pleasant one in one way but it had with it a tinge of sadness owing to the near departure of this estimable family to a new home, and the gathering was a farewell party given by the church members to a very popular minister and his family The family had just retired for the night when the crowd swooped down on them and to say it was a surprise is expressing it mildly. Soon all were comfortably settled in full possession of the parsonage and the evening was spent in music and social intercourse.

As a token of the esteem in which Rev. Wessel and wife are held among their people, they were presented with a beautiful hall tree, George Gruetzmacher making a very pleasant presentation speech which was responded to by the pastor.

After a couple of hours of visiting, speaking and music, the party broke up, all returning to their homes wishing the pastor and family much happiness and abundant success The six years work here by Rev. Wessel have been very successful and his church people are all sorry to see him leave. He is an untiring worker and will succeed wherever he may be.

We understand that the dance last Friday night was not very largely attended. There was, however, more than the usual amount of yelling and hideous noises on the streets at a late hour. It would not be out of place at all if some disturbers of the peace were called upon to pay a fine some of these nice mornings. We understand that some Garner fellows were painting things red and exercising their vocal powers Friday night.

Finds Parents of Twenty-four Boys.

Mason City.—Mrs. M. L. Way, living west of this city, saw in a newspaper the other day an item that was of interest to her, beyond the ordinary. It was the news of the whereabouts of Mrs. Brandon. Way back in Kentucky, in 1850, she met Mr. and Mrs. Brandon. They were the parents of twenty-four children—all boys. There were seven tripletts, one pair of twins, and one came single handed and alone. Fourteen of these served in the union army in the civil war and two were on the confederate side. Mrs. Parker is 100 years old and lives at Parker, So. Dak.

Grows Hybrid Apple.

Charles City.—As a result of thirty-five years experimenting, C. G. Patton has an hybrid apple that is a wonder. It is what he terms a Coulard-Hybrid and is a cross between a pippin apple and a wild crab. It looks like the crab with the color of a pippin and in flavor takes after each. The apple is medium in size and the tree is very hardy, even standing a much colder climate than this. A sample has been shipped to the agricultural department at Washington.

Woman, Aged 87, Cuts New Teeth.

Lake City.—Mrs. Josephine Christoferson, aged 87, living in the extreme south part of Calhoun county, is just beginning to cut a new set of teeth. An eighteen-year-old son of William Bauer also has the disease, and there have been three deaths from the same cause. The people have become so alarmed that the schools have been closed, and all public gatherings deferred for a time, in order to help the board of health in its efforts to prevent the spread of the disease.

Shooting In Mining Camp.

Oskaloosa,—Swift and unusual retribution overtook Wm. Boston, colored, aged 30, after he had shot and probably fatally wounded Susan Losson, also colored, 29 years old, at Cricket. Pursued by friends of the woman, who had jilted Boston, the man fled through a wood and attempted to board a moving train. Out of breath and made unsteady by fear, apparently, Boston fell under the wheels of the car and was ground to death.

Belle Plaine Gets Fire Hose.

Belle Plaine.—The city council has bought a new supply of fire hose for the fire department. This puts the fire department in excellent shape as to fire hose, and enables a fire at considerable distance from a hydrant to be reached. The waterworks system put in here a few years ago at a cost of $300,000 has paid for itself several times over in preventing the spread of fires.

After Forty-seven Years.

Fairfield.—After having been separated for forty-seven years, George Stokes of York county, Pa., and F. Stokes of near Salem, saw each other recently when the former came for a visit. The two brothers were together in the battle of Gettysburg and two weeks later were mustered out, George reenlisting, while his brother came to Iowa.

Woman Files Suit for $25,000 Damage

Creston.—The largest personal damage suit known in Taylor county has been filed in the courts at Bedford by Mrs. Clara Cresswell against F. E. Oat Crop, 105 Bu. An Acre.

Workman's Child Heiress.

Soon came to the edge of a grove and among the trees Captain Plum t a glimpse of a lighted window. al caution. I have sworn upon the Two Books and I will keep my oath. And then—you will answer the question I asked you back there."

He crept out into the darkness of the trees and Nathaniel followed, his heart throbbing with excitement, every sense alert, and one hand resting on the butt of his pistol. He felt that he was nearing the climax of his day's adventure and now, in the last moment of it, his old caution reasserted itself. He knew that he was among a dangerous people, men who, according to the laws of his country, were criminals in more ways than one. He had seen much of their work along the coasts and he had heard of more of it. He knew that this gloom and sullen quiet of St. James hid cutthroats and pirates and thieves. Still there was nothing ahead to alarm him. The old man dodged the gleams of the lighted window and slunk around to the end of the great house. Here, several feet above his head, was another window, small and veiled with the foliage of a vine that clung in dense masses to the log wall. With the assurance of one who had been there before the councilor mounted some object under the window, lifted himself until his chin was on a level with the glass, and peered within. He was there but an instant and then fell back, chuckling and rubbing his hands.

"Come, Nat!"

He stood a little to one side and bowed with mock politeness. For a moment Captain Plum hesitated. Under ordinary circumstances this spying through a window would have been repugnant to him. But at present something seemed to tell him that it was not to satisfy his curiosity alone that Obadiah Price had given him this opportunity. Would a look through that little window explain some of the mysteries of the night?

There came a low whisper in his ear.

"Do you smell lilac, Nat? Eh?"

In another instant Captain Plum had stepped upon the object beneath the window and parted the leaves. Breathlessly he looked in. A strange scene met his eyes. He was looking into a vast room, illuminated by a huge hanging lamp suspended almost on a level with his head. Under this lamp there was a long table and at the table sat seven women and one man. The man was at the end nearest the window and all that Nat could see was the back of his head and shoulders. But the women were in full view, three on each side of the table and one at the far end. He guessed the man to be Strang; but he stared at the women and as his eyes traveled back to the one facing him at the end of the table he could scarcely repress the exclamation of surprise that rose to his lips. It was the girl whom he had encountered at the councilor's cabin. She was leaning forward as if in an agony of suspense, her eyes on the king, her lips parted, her hands clutching at a great book which lay open before her. Her cheeks were flushed with excitement. And even as he looked Captain Plum saw her head fall suddenly forward upon the table, encircled by her arms. The heavy braid of her hair, partly undone, glistened like red gold in the lamplight. Her slender body was convulsed with sobs. The woman nearest her reached over and laid a caressing hand on the bowed head, but drew it quickly away as if at a sharp command.

In his eagerness Nathaniel thrust his face through the foliage until his nose touched the glass. When the girl lifted her head she straightened back in her chair—and saw him. There came a sudden white fear in her face, a parting of the lips as if she were on the point of crying out, and then, before the others had seen, she looked again at Strang. She had discovered him and yet she had not revealed her discovery! Nathaniel could have shouted for joy. She had seen him, had recognized him! And because she had not cried out she wanted him! He drew his pistol signaled for him, if she called him, from its holster and waited. If she he would burst the window. The girl was talking now and as she talked she lifted her eyes. Nathaniel pressed his face close against the window, and smiled. That would let her know he was a friend. She seemed to answer him with a little nod and he fancied that her eyes glowed with a mute appeal for his assistance. But only for an instant, and then they turned again to the king. Not until that moment did Nathaniel notice upon her bosom a bunch of crumpled lilacs.

From below the iron grip of the councilor dragged him down.

"That's enough," he whispered. "That's enough—for tonight." He saw the pistol in Nathaniel's hand and gave a sudden breathless cry.

"Nat—Nat—"

He caught Captain Plum's free hand in his.

"Tell me this, Obadiah Price," whispered the master of the Typhoon, "who is she?"

The councilor stood on tiptoe to answer.

"They are the wives of Strang, Nat!"

"But the other?" demanded Nathaniel. The other—

"O, to be sure, to be sure," chuckled Obadiah. "The girl of the lilacs, eh? Why, she's the seventh wife, Nat—that's all, the seventh wife!"

Breathlessly He Looked In.

CHAPTER III.

The Warning.

So quickly that Obadiah Price might not have counted ten before it had come and gone the significance of his new situation flashed upon Captain Plum as he stood under the king's window. His plans had changed since leaving ship but now he realized that they had become hopelessly involved. He had intended that Obadiah should show him where Strang was to be found, and that later, when ostensibly returning to his vessel, he would visit the prophet in his home. Whatever the interview brought forth he would still be in a position to deliver the councilor's package. Even an hour's bombardment of St. James would not interfere with the fulfilment of his oath. But those few minutes at the king's window had been fatal to the scheme he had built. The girl had seen him. She had not betrayed his presence. She had called to him with her eyes—he would have staked his life on that. What did it all mean? He turned to Obadiah. The old man was grimacing and twisting his hands nervously. He seemed half afraid, cringing, as if fearing a blow. The sight of him set Nathaniel's blood afire. His white face seemed to verify the terrible thought that had leaped into his brain. Suddenly he heard a faint cry—a woman's voice—and in an instant he was back at the window. The girl had risen to her feet and stood facing him. This time, as her eyes met his own, he saw in them a flashing warning, and he obeyed it as if she had spoken to him. As he dropped silently back to the ground the councilor came close to his side.

"That's enough for tonight, Nat," he whispered.

He made as if to slip away but Nathaniel detained him with an emphatic hand.

"Not yet, dad! I'd like to have a word with—this—"

"With Strang's wife," chuckled Obadiah. "Ho, ho, ho, Nat, you're a rascal!" The old man's face was mapped with wrinkles, his eyes glowed with joyous approbation. "You shall, Nat, you shall! You love a pretty face, eh? You shall meet Mrs. Strang, Nat, and you shall make love to her if you wish. I swear that, too. But not tonight, Nat—not tonight."

He stood a pace away and rubbed his hands.

"There will be no chance tonight, Nat—but tomorrow night, or the next. O, I promise you shall meet her, and make love to her, Nat! Ho, if Strang knew, if Strang only knew!"

There was something so fiendishly gloating in the councilor's attitude, in his face, in the hot glow of his eyes, that for a moment Nathaniel's involuntary liking for the little old man before him turned to abhorrence. The passion, the triumph of the man, convinced him where words had failed. The girl was Strang's wife. His last doubt was dispelled. And because she was Strang's wife Obadiah hated the Mormon prophet. The councilor had spoken with fateful assurance—that he should meet her, that he should make love to her. It was an assurance that made him shudder. As he followed in silence up out of the gloom of the town he strove, but in vain, to find whether sin had lurked in the sweet face that had appealed to him in its misery—whether there had been a flash of something besides terror, besides prayerful entreaty, in the lovely eyes that had met his own. Obadiah spoke no word to break in on his thoughts. Now and then the old man's insane chucklings floated softly to Nathaniel's ears, and when at last they came to the cabin in the forest he broke into a low laugh that echoed weirdly in the great black room which they entered. He lighted another candle and approached a ladder which led through a trap in the ceiling. Without a word he mounted this ladder, and Nathaniel followed him, finding himself a moment later in a small low room furnished with a bed. The councilor placed his candle on a table close beside it and rubbed his hands until it seemed they must burn.

For the Scandalmonger.

The Orleans museum has just been enriched with a curious relic of the past which some workmen in making excavations in the city came across. It is a stone representing a grinning figure, showing the teeth, the countenance being repellent enough. In this way the loquacious woman, the scandalmonger, was brought to her senses. The stone, suspended by a chain, was placed round her neck, and so accoutered she was compelled to walk round the town in which she lived. The stone is supposed to date about the sixteenth century.

Women as Criminals.

As for women generally, Doctor Bertillon gives them a good character. They are "incomparably less often criminals than men are," and when they are, a man is usually at the bottom of the trouble."—London Telegraph.

Some statistician has figured out that Americans lose $10,000,000 yearly by leaving sugar in the bottom of their coffee cups. Of course they don't, but still there is a certain fascination about statistics. They are so strikingly useless.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Subject to considerable variation, the average value of raw cotton imported into England in the course of a year is about $300,000,000.

A FOOD DRINK.
Which Brings Daily Enjoyment.

A lady doctor writes:

"Though busy hourly with my own affairs, I will not deny myself the pleasure of taking a few minutes to tell of my enjoyment daily obtained from my morning cup of Postum. It is a food beverage, not a poison like coffee.

"I began to use Postum eight years ago, not because I wanted to, but because coffee, which I dearly loved, made my nights long weary periods to be dreaded and unfitting me for business during the day.

"On the advice of a friend, I first tried Postum, making it carefully as directed on the package. As I had always used 'cream and no sugar,' I mixed my Postum so. It looked good, was clear and fragrant, and it was a pleasure to see the cream color it as my Kentucky friend always wanted her coffee to look—'like a new saddle.'

"Then I tasted it critically, for I had tried many 'substitutes' for coffee. I was pleased, yes, satisfied, with my Postum in taste and effect, and am yet, being a constant user of it all these years.

"I continually assure my friends and acquaintances that they will like it in place of coffee, and receive benefit from its use. I have gained weight, can sleep sound and am not nervous." "There's a Reason."

FIRE AT MASON CITY

Last Friday afternoon, Mason City suffered a big fire loss, in the destruction of the Mason City Transfer and Storage plant. The loss is placed at $150,000.

The fire started in the ice house belonging to the railroad company and the fierce wind blowing from the south fanned the flames into a fierce conflagration. From the ice house it spread to the new building erected by the storage company in which was stored valuable machinery belonging to various concerns. This immense building was in ten minutes completely enveloped and for a time it was thought the flames would leap to the Standard Oil plant just to the east, where thousands of gallons of oils were stored. But fortunately the fire was confined to the two buildings.

MASON CITY MAN KILLED

J. L. Meredith, proprietor of the Meredith Auto Company of Mason City, was killed, and John Wallace an employe of the Sears Auto Company of Des Moines was seriously injured, when the cars they were driving in the Des Moines Auto Association's fifteen mile free-for-all race at the fair grounds at Des Moines, crashed into each other. Meredith's skull was crushed and he died almost instantly.

BIG FOREST FIRE

Seven towns wiped out of existence; area of eighty-five miles swept clean of every vestige of life; a large number of dead and missing; this is the record of a terrible forest fire which has been raging for some days along the north border of the state of Minnesota. The loss of life may reach to 1,000 or even more while many more than that are missing. The towns which were wiped out are Spooner, Baudette, Cedar Spur, Graceton, Pitt and Roosevelt.

The Republican party is to be pitied, if what some of the leaders say is true. They make the statement that Teddy is the only man in the party who can be elected president in 1912. If that is so, they might elect him for life and do away with the expense and trouble of an election every four years. Roosevelt is popular—no denying that fact—but there are many other men just as good and just as fearless, to our notion. In fact, Iowa has one or two good men in the Republican ranks.

Kermit Roosevelt isn't so slow. We read once upon a time of a friend asking Kermit what kind of a man he thought his father was, and the boy replied "that he was the kind who wanted to be the bride at a wedding and the corpse at a funeral."

Bryan couldn't support Dahlman in Nebraska because the democratic platform there is pro-saloon, but he comes into Iowa and supports a democratic pro-saloon platform. Consistent—not!

WE have long since passed the fifteen year mark of our corporate existence; are prosperous and progressive, with ample capital to supply your needs. We have the experience and want your business. We merit it, and you sleep well and rest easy once it is placed with us.

In part the statement reads: "The Standard Oil company has inaugurated a campaign to increase the world's consumption of refined oil. WILL FEED CATTLE

This is Splendid Year for Southern Iowa Farmers

CORN CROP IS THE BEST EVER

Many Iowans Investing In Feeding Cattle to Be Made Ready for Market About Holiday Time Outlook Encouraging.

Burlington, Ia., Oct. 8.—The financial, commercial and crop situation in southeastern Iowa is one which it is believed is typical of a good portion of the west. In fact the reports from a large territory in this section of the country received by local banking interests show a very satisfactory situation in all the branches named. In this part of Iowa bankers admit that things are satisfactory, but at the same time they are uttering notes of warning against too enthusiastic investments. They are taking care of the necessary demands of their customers but for the present are not seeking new business.

The coming crop harvest, it is said by them, will characterize the situation. The prospects of a banner harvest makes the outlook highly encouraging. It is the prediction of those well posted that this part of Iowa will have the best corn crop in the history of farming in this part of the country.

Large demands are being made on the banks for the following reasons: Farmers are going into the markets, and buying feeders in large numbers, with the expectancy of a large corn crop. Many of the cattle will be in prime condition for shipment to market in time to take advantage of the good prices prevailing during the holiday season.

There is intention to hold part of the stock until spring with plenty of corn on hand. Feeding should be a sure proposition this winter for the farmers according to the well posted ones.

The situation, therefore, is very satisfactory, and while caution will prevail, the coming of the bumper crops is expected to end any tension that may arise on account of it.

Acre of Tomatoes Worth $2,400.

Belle Plaine.—A man near Hampton sold $6,000 worth of potatoes this year, produced on sixty acres; two brothers at Fort Dodge sold $4,000 worth of onions raised on six acres, but a Belle Plaine gardener far exceeded these records this season on a patch of tomatoes which he was able to irrigate during the dry period because of the free running artesian wells here, which anyone can get for about $100 expense. On one-sixth of an acre he produced tomatoes which he has sold for about $400 and is still picking, there having been no frost as yet. Of course, he got the "love apples" to the market when the price was high early in the season. This is at the rate of about $2,400 gross grown on one acre of Iowa soil, with a little irrigation at the critical time. That is far ahead of irrigation profits in California or Colorado, and still such land as this can be bought for a half or a fourth of such western irrigated land, and the water costs nothing but the well, and has to be applied only once or twice, instead of all the season and excellent markets are near by.

Oxen Haul Coal at Lake City.

Lake City.—Everett Burns surprised all the natives here recently by driving to town and getting a load of coal with four oxen, two yoke. More than four-fifths of the residents of Lake City never saw a yoke of oxen before and the scene created considerable excitement. The fine roads and the fresh air made the steers feel lively and they trotted along hauling two tons of coal with great ease. Burns explained that his two sons have raised the four steers from calfhood, petted them and trained them to many tricks. They can drive them and handle them with as much safety as a millionaire does an automobile. The steers made an imposing sight as they were driven along the highway. Each animal tips the beam at 1,800 pounds and the four are worth $400.

Burlington To Light Up.

Burlington.—Burlington is to soon have a great white way which will rival anything of the kind in cities of this size. The merchants of the city have contracted for electric light posts to line the curbs seven blocks on Main street, and six or seven on Jefferson street, while the side streets in the downtown districts are to be liberally sprinkled with the lights. These lights will be placed eight in a block and will consist of a post bearing one upright globe in the center and four drop globes beneath.

Gathering Two Years' Seed Corn.

Corning.—The farmers of Adams county are gathering their seed corn. Several have reported gathering enough for two years' seeding, and many more will gather the seed in a few days. Corn was a little late on account of replanting, and the rains in August and September have kept it very green. This county will have the best corn crop since 1880, and there is a very large acreage. The farmers of the county say they are not going to be caught without seed corn again if they can help it. The frost on the night of the 26th did no damage to the crop in this county, probably was a benefit, as it retarded the growth.

Finds $1,500 Pearl.

Osage.—The most valuable pearl that has yet been found in the Cedar river is the property of K. E. Knutson, the finder. He is a resident of St. Ansgar. He found the pearl in the river right near his home. It weighs twenty-four grains and is of a rich, reddish color. It is known as a coral pearl. Those who have seen it say that it is a much nicer stone than the Trogue pearl found about three weeks ago and which sold for $1,200. Mr. Knutson will not part with his find for less than $1,500.

Danish Sisterhood Elects.

Council Bluffs.—The national convention of the Danish Sisterhood, which has been in session here for ten days has adjourned. Heretofore two men have held offices in the sisterhood. This convention voted to bar men entirely. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Hansina Matson, Clinton Ia.; vice president, Mrs. Sophie Lauritson, Alameda, Cal.; secretary, Caroline Nelson, Chicago; treasurer, Louisa Rasmussen, St. Paul, Minn.

The Iowa Canning company in their factories at Garrison, La Porte, Shellsburg and Vinton, estimate about six million cans of corn packed. The Vinton Canning company, figure about two million and a half cans packed in the city of Vinton.

Seeks Divorce and Alimony.

Waterloo.—Christina Buttke filed suit here asking divorce from her husband, Henry Buttke, custody of the minor children and $35,000 alimony. The couple were married thirty-two years ago and reared a family of twelve children, of whom ten are living and four being minors. The estate is valued at $70,000 and includes 575 acres, all amassed by their own efforts. She alleges cruelty.

Message to the Farmers.

Iowa City.—Good crowds are on hand at the different stations to meet the hog special which is now being run over the Rock Island lines in Iowa. Great interest is being shown by the farmers, the stockmen and others in the talks given by the experts on the most scientific and profitable methods of raising and feeding hoge. Seven care make up the train.

Winter Wheat Acreage.

Elliott.—There is a larger acreage of winter wheat being sown in this section than ever before. Some of it is up, making the fields green, while others are preparing the ground now and others are sowing. The ground is in fine condition and seeding has been done in better shape than usual.

Married Sixty-Eight Years.

Marshalltown.—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kelly, of this city, celebrated the sixty-eighth anniversary of their marriage. This happy old couple were married in England in 1842. Mr. Kelly is 88 years old and his wife is one year his junior.

Farm Sells For $50,000.

Creston.—A fifty thousand dollar cash deal was consummated here when the 400 acre farm of Josiah Miller, two miles south of the city, changed hands, J. T. Thompson becoming the owner; $125 per acre was the price paid.

He went ...d with the withered lilacs on the ...close beside him. He fell asleep with their scent in his nostrils. When he awoke they were gone. He started up in astonishment when he saw what had taken their place. Obadiah had visited him while he slept. The table was spread with a white cloth and upon it was his breakfast, a pot of coffee still steaming, and the whole of a cold baked fowl. Near by, upon a chair, was a basin of water, soap and a towel. Nathaniel rolled from his bed with a healthy laugh of pleasure. The councilor was at least a courteous host, and his liking for the curious old man promptly increased. There was a sheet of paper on his plate upon which Obadiah had scribbled the following words:

"My Dear Nat: Make yourself at home. I will be away today but will see you again tonight. Don't be surprised if somebody makes you a visit."

The "somebody" was heavily underscored and Nathaniel's pulse quickened and a sudden flush of excitement surged into his face as he read the meaning of it. The "somebody" was Strang's wife. There could be other interpretation. He went to the trap and called down for Obadiah but there was no answer. The councilor had already gone. Quickly eating his breakfast the master of the Typhoon climbed down the ladder into the room below. The remains of the councilor's breakfast were on a table near the door, and the door was open. Through it came a glory of sunshine and the fresh breath of the forest laden with the perfume of wild flowers and balsam. A thousand birds seemed caroling and twittering in the sunlit solitude about the cabin. Beyond this there was no other sound or sign of life. For many minutes Nathaniel stood in the open, his eyes on the path along which he knew that Strang's wife would come—if she came at all. Suddenly he began to examine the ground where the girl had stood the previous night. The dainty imprints of her feet were plainly discernible in the soft earth. Then he went to the path—and with a laugh so loud that it startled the birds into silence he set off with long strides in the direction of St. James. From the footprints in that path it was quite evident that Strang's wife was a frequent visitor at Obadiah's.

A Few Days Before He Would Have Counted This Walk to St. James One of the Events of His Life.

At the edge of the forest, from where he could see the log house situated across the opening, Nathaniel paused. He had made up his mind that the girl whom he had seen through the king's window was in some way associated with it. Obadiah had hinted as much and she had come from there on her way to Strang's. But as the prophet's wives lived in his castle at St. James this surely could not be her home. More than ever he was puzzled. As he looked he saw a figure suddenly appear from among the mass of lilac bushes that almost concealed the cabin. An involuntary exclamation of satisfaction escaped him and he drew back deeper among the trees. It was the councilor who had shown himself. For a few moments the old man stood gazing in the direction of St. James as if watching for the approach of other persons. Then he dodged cautiously along the edge of the bushes, keeping half within their cover, and moved swiftly in the opposite direction toward the center of the island. Nathaniel's blood leaped with a desire to follow. The night before he had guessed that Obadiah with his gold and his smoldering passion was not a man to isolate himself in the heart of the forest. Here—across the open—was evidence of another side of his life. In that great square-built domicile of logs, screened so perfectly by flowering lilac, lived Obadiah's wives. Captain Plum laughed aloud and beat the bowl of his pipe on the tree beside him. And the girl lived there—or came from there to the woodland cabin so frequently that her feet had beaten a well-worn path. Had the councilor lied to him? Was the girl he had seen through the king's window one of the seven wives of Strang—or was she the wife of Obadiah Price?

The thought was one that thrilled him. If the girl was the councilor's wife what was the motive of Obadiah's falsehood? And if she was Strang's wife why had her feet—and hers alone with the exception of the old man's—worn this path from the lilac smothered house to the cabin in the woods? The captain of the Typhoon regretted now that he had given such explicit orders to Casey. Otherwise he would have followed the figure that was already disappearing into the forest on the opposite side of the clearing. But now he must see Strang. There might be delay, necessary delay, and if it so happened that his own blundering curiosity kept him on the island until sundown—well, he smiled as he thought of what Casey would do.

Refilling his pipe and leaving a trail of smoke behind him he set out boldly for St. James. When he came to the three graves he stopped, remembering that Obadiah had said they were his graves. A sort of grim horror began to stir at his soul as he gazed on the grass-grown mounds—proofs that the old councilor would inherit a place in the Mormon heaven, having obeyed the injunctions of his prophet on earth. Nathaniel now understood the meaning of his words of the night before. This was the family burying ground of the old councilor.

He walked on, trying in vain to concentrate his mind solely upon the business that was ahead of him. A few days before he would have counted this walk to St. James one of the events of his life. Now it had lost its fascination. Despite his efforts to destroy the vision of the beautiful face that had looked at him through the king's window its memory still haunted him. The eyes, soft with appeal; the red mouth, quivering, and with lips parted as if about to speak to him; the bowed head with its tumbled glory of hair—all had burned themselves upon his soul in a picture too deep to be eradicated. If St. James was interesting now it was because that face was a part of it, because the secret of its life, of the misery that it had confessed to him, was hidden somewhere down there among its scattered log homes.

Slowly he made his way down the slope in the direction of Strang's castle, the tower of which, surmounted by its great beacon, glistened in the morning sun. He would find Strang there. And there would be one chance in a thousand of seeing the girl—if Obadiah had spoken the truth. As he passed down he met men and boys coming up the slope and others moving along at the bottom of it, all going toward the interior of the island. They had shovels or rakes or hoes upon their shoulders and he guessed that the Mormon fields were in that direction; others bore axes; and now and then wagons, many of them drawn by oxen, left the town over the road that ran near the shore of the lake. Those whom he met stared at him curiously, much interested evidently in the appearance of a stranger. Nathaniel paid but small heed to them. As he entered the grove through which the councilor had guided him the night before his eagerness became almost excitement. He approached the great log house swiftly but cautiously, keeping as much from view as possible. As he came under the window through which he had looked upon the king and his wives his heart leaped with anticipation, with hope that was strangely mingled with fear. For only a moment he paused to listen, and notwithstanding the seriousness of his position he could not repress a smile as there came to his ears the crying of children and the high angry voice of a woman. He passed around to the front of the house. The door of Strang's castle was wide open and unguarded. No one had seen his approach; no one accosted him as he mounted the low steps; there was no one in the room into which he gazed a moment later. It was the great hall into which he had spied a few hours previous. There was the long table with the big book on it, the lamp whose light had bathed the girl's head in a halo of glory, the very chair in which he had found her sitting! He was conscious of a throbbing in his breast, a longing to call out—if he only knew her name.

In the room there were four closed doors and it was from beyond these that there came to him the wailing of children. A fifth door was open and through it he saw a cradle gently rocking. Here at last was visible life, or motion at least, and he knocked loudly. Very gradually the cradle ceased its movement. Then it stopped, and a woman came out into the larger room. In a moment Nathaniel recognized her as the one who had placed a caressing hand upon the bowed head of the sobbing girl the night before. Her face was of pathetic beauty. Its whiteness was startling. Her eyes shone with an unhealthy luster, and her dark hair, falling in heavy curls over her shoulder, added to the wonderful pallor of her cheeks.

Nathaniel bowed. "I beg your pardon, madam; I came to see Mr. Strang," he said.

"You will find the king at his office," she replied.

The woman's voice was low, but so sweet that it was like music to the ear. As she spoke she came nearer and a faint flush appeared in the transparency of her cheek.

"Why do you wish to see the king?" she asked.

How a Story Grew.

A chimney at the Horticultural hall, Westminster, was damaged by lightning recently. Not long after the storm the Church Army headquarters were surprised to get a telephone message that a thunderbolt had fallen in one of their city gardens, close to the Horticultural hall and destroyed a quantity of produce. This report proved to be wholly unfounded. It was followed by an offer of £5 from an enterprising daily paper for the thunderbolt which killed Prebendary Carlile, the honorable chief secretary of the society, while standing in a garden at Westminster. Within a short time came a better offer, one of £50 from a learned society for the meteorite which had wrecked the Church Army headquarters, burying Prebendary Carlile in the ruins. Seeing that the headquarters are intact and the Prebendary in his usual state of health, the society was unable to take advantage of the offer.—London Globe.

Advertising.

"Why do you persist on making speeches on the unpopular side of a subject?"

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "the people see so many arguments on the right side of a question that the only way to get a reputation for sensational originality is to contradict them."

Then It Happened.

"What made you think he would propose to me?"

"Why, when I refused him he said he didn't care what became of him; but perhaps he wasn't serious."

Editorial Favor.

"A month ago you rejected a story of mine."

"I remember. Thought it was rotten."

"I had offered it for $7, and you turned it down."

"So I did."

"Well, I sold that story for $40. Here's another story. May I ask the favor of one more rejection? It seems to help."

THREE GOOD SOUPS

WITH THE BEAN AS THE STAPLE INGREDIENT.

Possibilities of This Vegetable Have Been Somewhat Overlooked—Properly Cooked It Is One of the Best Available.

The food possibilities of the bean, long known, are almost illimitable. Not only the omnipresent navy bean, but the black, the kidney, the cranberry, the lima, and the other varieties may all be treated in many ways. As it happens, they are all more or less ill treated by the majority of cooks and made too harsh a food for delicate digestions.

Black Bean Soup.—Soak one-half pint of black beans over night. In the morning put to cook with one pint of water and a pinch of salt. Boil till beans are soft, always adding enough cold water to keep the quart of water on beans. When they are soft take them off the stove and mash through colander. Put back on the stove the part in the colander and the part squeezed through. Add one small onion chopped, one-half teaspoonful of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of celery salt, a dash of black pepper, and boil thoroughly. Now take off stove, put through colander again, this time keeping out skins, etc., allowing the thick part only of the beans to stay in the liquor. Twenty minutes before serving put in kettle, add six whole cloves and a sprinkle of cayenne pepper. Pour over thin slices of lemon on each plate and serve. This soup can easily be made in a fireless cooker. While it seems a good deal of trouble at first one feels repaid because it is good. By doubling the quantity labor is saved and it will keep in the icebox for a week.

Onion and Bean Puree.—Over a cup of cold cooked beans—Lima or any dried kinds—even baked ones will answer—pour a pint of cold water. Mince a good sized onion fine. Add a little salt, cover in a small granite stew pan, and allow to simmer until the onion is pulpy. When ready to serve cream a spoon of butter and half a spoon of flour and gradually stir in the seasoned puree. Just before dishing add a cup of milk, or suffient to make the soup nice consistency to serve to the number required. Add a dash or two more of salt and dusting of paprika. A sprinkling of minced parsley may also be added. Serve with tiny toast trips made by buttering a slice of bread, cutting crosswise in narrow bits and crisping in the oven.—Chicago Tribune.

Beef Bouilion.—In the morning put ten-cent piece of lean beef off the rump of shoulder on to cook in three pints of boiling water. Take off any scum that appears, then put the kettle where the meat will cook slowly until it is tender. Take off the stove and leave the meat in until the soup is cold. When it is time to prepare the dinner put the soup on to heat. Add teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of celery salt, and dash of white pepper. Mix two level teaspoonfuls of corn starch with enough cold water to moisten, add to soup, boil up once, and it is ready to serve in bouillon cups with small squares of well toasted bread.

Bird's Nest Salad.

To prepare this attractive dish take a little spinach that has been cooked and drained and while still hot press with a spoon to extract the green coloring matter. Rub enough of this liquid with some black pepper into a Philadelphia cream cheese to give it a delicate green color. Shape into balls the size of robins' eggs. With clean, sharp scissors cut crisp lettuce leaves into shreds and arrange them in nests on a pretty plate. Place five eggs in each nest and cover with a little mayonnaise or French dressing. Serve cheese straws with this salad.

Cocoanut Tarts.

One cupful of sugar, half-cupful of water, half of a grated cocoanut, three eggs. Boil the water, sugar and cocoanut together for five minutes. Remove the mixture from the fire, and when it is nearly cold add the yolks of the eggs, well beaten. Stir all well together, pour the preparation into patty pans lined with crust, and bake eight minutes. Beat the whites stiff, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, distribute this meringue among the tarts, and return them to the oven to brown lightly.

Your cough annoys you. Keep on hacking and tearing the delicate membranes of your throat if you want to be annoyed. But if you want relief, want to be cured, take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Sold by all dealers.

A Good Position

Can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway Telegraphy. Since the 8-hour law became effective, and since the Wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of R. R. and Wireless officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Davenport, Ia., Cincinnati, O., Portland, Ore., or Memphis, Tenn. 7-

A Radical Departure

There never was a time in the history of the world when good stories and articles could command such large prices as they do today. It is an extremely expensive thing to publish a high class magazine nowadays, filled with the best products of the most famous authors and artists.

Yet together with its many attractive features the Chicago Record-Herald furnishes its readers with its Sunday Magazine section that compares favorably with the best weeklies and monthlies, and has some merits peculiar to itself. The most famous writers and illustrators contribute to it. Some of the choicest novels of the year are published serially in its columns before they see the light in book form. The best new humorist since Mr. Dooley began writing is a regular contributor to its columns alone. To furnish such a magazine with every copy of a Sunday newspaper is an amazing venture, yet the experiment has proved a complete success and is now firmly established.

Queer Questions.

Queer questions come over the telephone to the newspaper offices. Here was one that the man who chanced to answer the phone had put up to him the other day:

"Say," began the unknown seeker after the truth, "do you—do you remember who it was that killed Abel?"

"Why, Cain, of course," replied the newspaper man, who put in several years at Sunday school. "Who'd ju suppose?"

"Well," observed the man at the other end in an annoyed tone, "doggon if I ain't gone and made a fool o' myself. Course it was Cain, now that you mention it, but I made a two to one bet with a fellow that 'twas Goliath, and now I'll have to go without a new overcoat, I reckon, this next winter."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Good Job.

Jacob H. Schiff, at a dinner on the yacht Ramona, condemned a concern that had gone up.

"Straight business methods are the only ones," he said. "There is a moral in the receiver story.

"A man, you know, said one day to a little boy:

"'Well, Tommy, what are you going to be when you grow up?'

"'A receiver, sir,' Tommy answered promptly. 'Ever since pa's been a receiver we've had champagne for dinner and two automobiles.'"

Cheerfulness should be the gift of the sunlight, the air should suffice for inspiration, and radiance of wisdom is the lonely waste of the pine woods, making us dance and run about happily like children.—Emerson.

DAME NATURE HINTS
When the Food Is Not Suited.

When Nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food. The old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona man says:

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried various kinds of breakfast food, but they were all soft, starchy messes which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee, too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating.

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months ago.

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have headaches. I have gained 12 pounds in weight and feel better in every way.

"Grape-Nuts make a delicious as well as a nutritious dish, and I find that Postum is easily digested and never produces dyspepsia symptoms."

"There's a Reason."

CHARTER RESTORED

General James A. Williamson Circle Wins Fight at Atlantic City

INDIVIDUALS WERE EJECTED

G. A. R. Ladies Will Begin Activities When Mrs. Belle Richley Returns from Eastern Trip, Where She Plead for Her Circle.

Des Moines, Oct. 8.—Ejected as individuals from the state convention of the Ladies of the G. A. R., held in Des Moines in June, their charter revoked on a charge of alleged discourtesies of four members of the circle, the members of the Gen. James A. Williamson circle of the Ladies of the G. A. R. have won their fight for reinstatement and return of charter at the councils of the national convention recently held in Atlantic City.

When the state convention of the Ladies of the G. A. R., an auxiliary of the G. A. R., met in Des Moines in June the trouble between the officers of the local circles and the department officers came to an issue. The defendant circle had Mrs. Ella Mark of Waterloo as its legal representative in the trial that was conducted behind locked doors of the Plymouth Congregational church where the department convention was in session. The trial was long and tedious, both sides being a hearing.

A dramatic incident in connection with this trial was the ejection individually of the one hundred and more members of the deposed circle from the convention hall. Orderlies were posted at the doors and a new countersign was issued. Throughout the long trial that day the determined circle members of Des Moines sat on the steps of the church building and waited for the decision. When the decision was given there was no fight made and the deposed circle set to work to keep its organization intact socially, believing that the members would gain redress in the national convention in September.

An overture was made to the national officers to investigate charges and make a final decision. The women of the circle are jubilant over the fact that their officers who were placed under the ban by department officers have been cleared of charges, their charter returned and the circle reinstated without blemish into the national department.

The local circle will begin its activities again when Mrs. N. Belle Richey, president of the deposed circle returns from the east, where she went to personally plead for her circle before the national convention.

Sends Child to Asylum.

Fearful lest the numerous threats to kidnap the child from the Methodist hospital be carried into execution, Judge De Graff of the criminal division of the district court signed an order committing Robert Nathoo Miller, the alleged child of "Count" C. A. Nathoo, the Hindu seer to the Iowa Children's Orphans' asylum at Davenport.

IOWA'S BIG CORN YIELD.

Dr. Geo. M. Chappel Estimates It at Over 300,000,000 Bushels.

Des Moines, Oct. 8.—"The harvest has been profitable and with a few exceptions very bountiful."

Thus Dr. George M. Chappel in his final crop bulletin for the year optimistically describes the conditions of the Iowa 1910 season.

The entire corn crop is practically safe from frost says the weather director. He predicts that the yield will probably be over 300,000,000 bushels.

According to the report more seed corn was collected in September than in any previous year. The extra amount of corn cut for fodder and the excellent condition of the fall pastures more than made up for the short hay crop, is the statement of Dr. Chappel.

Small grains were above the average in quality and in yield, states the director of the Iowa station. He also says that the fall grains are up and growing nicely.

Following is the bulletin:

"The week was very favorable for ripening corn and the crop is now practically safe from any damage by frost. There is, however, a small percentage of the crop in the late planted fields that will need another week of good weather to fully mature. With the exception of the 26th and 27th the weather was ideal. Light rain fell on the 26th and light to heavy frost occurred on the 27th, but no material damage was done. A great deal of interest is being taken in the selection of seed corn and more seed was harvested in September than ever before. The rains of the previous week and the early part of the past week were very beneficial for fall plowing, pastures, meadows and winter grains. Most of the silos have been filled and much more than the usual amount of corn has been put in shock. Fall grains are up and growing nicely. In spite of the severe freezing weather in April and May and the drouth during the summer months, the harvest has been profitable, and with a few exceptions very bountiful. Tree fruits were practically killed and berries seriously injured by the late frosts of spring and the hay and potato crops were shortened by the drouth, but the small grains were above the average in quality and yield. Corn was damaged considerably by the lack of moisture, but the average yield will be above the normal and the total yield will probably be over 300,000,000 bushels. The shortage of the hay crop has been made up largely by the extra amount of corn cut for fodder and the excellent condition of fall pastures. The potato crop will be smaller than usual, but the quaity will be fairly good."

Month Rain Record Badly Beaten.

More rain fell in the month of September, 1910, in Des Moines than in any same month during the past eighteen years. This was discovered when the monthly meteorological summary was issued by Weather Forcaster George M. Chappel. The precipitation for September, 1910, was 3.82 inches, which is rather greater than that of any September since 1892, when the rainfall reached 5.03 inches.

The rainfall in Des Moines since January, however, is below the average more than 10 per cent. Compared to the normal for September the rainfall in this city was .89 above the average.

INFLUENCE OF THE MOTHER

Well to Remember That She Is Ever a Model of Behavior to the Children.

It is hard for a young mother, who has not yet overcome the wayward tendencies of her own youthful nature, to realize the influence she exerts over her little one. She is constantly surrounded by critical imitators who copy her morals and manners.

As the mother is, so are her sons and daughters. If a family of children are blessed with an intelligent mother, who is dainty and refined in her manner, and does not consider it necessary to be one woman in the drawing room and an entirely different person in her everyday life, but who is a true mother and always a tender, charming woman, she will invariably see her habits of speech and perfect manners repeated in her children.

Great, rough men and noisy, busy boys will always tone down their voices and step quietly and try to be more mannerly when she stops to give them a kind word and a pleasant smile. For a true woman will never fail to say and do all the kind, pleasant things she can that will in any way help to lift up and cheer those whose lives are shaded with care and toil. The mother of today rules the world of tomorrow.

It is a shame for people who have in their lives a consciousness of love and character and courage, to fall into the wasteful folly of unhappiness about the unimportant.—Margaret Deland.

WASTED A FORTUNE ON SKIN TROUBLE

"I began to have an itching over my whole body about seven years ago and this settled in my limbs, from the knee to the toes. I went to see a great many physicians, a matter which cost me a fortune, and after I noticed that I did not get any relief that way, I went for three years to the hospital. But they were unable to help me there, I used all the medicines that I could see but became worse and worse. I had an inflammation which made me almost crazy with pain. When I showed my foot to my friends they would get really frightened. I did not know what to do. I was so sick and had become so nervous that I positively lost all hope.

"I had seen the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies a great many times, but could not make up my mind to buy them, for I had already used so many medicines. Finally I did decide to use the Cuticura Remedies and I tell you that I was never so pleased as when I noticed that, after having used two sets of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, the entire inflammation had gone. I was completely cured. I should be only too glad if people with similar disease would come to me and find out the truth. I would only recommend them to use Cuticura. Mrs. Bertha Sachs, 1621 Second Ave., New York, N. Y., Aug. 20, 1909."

"Mrs. Bertha Sachs is my sister-in-law and I know well how she suffered and was cured by Cuticura Remedies after many other treatments failed. Morris Sachs, 321 E. 89th St., New York, N. Y., Secretary of Deutsch-Ostrowoer Unt.-Verein, Kempner Hebrew Benevolent Society, etc."

Rising in his seat he fixed her with an accusing forefinger and uttered the single word "Graft!"

WHY NEW ORLEANS

CITY IS LOGICAL POINT FOR WORLD'S PANAMA EXPOSITION.

Its Geographical Position and Many Other Considerations Mark It as Most Suitable Spot for Dedication of Great Work.

Public sentiment has decided that the completion of the Panama Canal in 1915 shall be celebrated with a great International Exposition in which all the nations of the world may participate; and the question of where this Exposition is to be held will be settled by Congress at its approaching session.

New Orleans and San Francisco are contesting for the honor of holding this Exposition, and both cities have guaranteed immense sums of money as an evidence of their ability to finance so great an enterprise.

An Exposition worthy of the term "World's Fair," such as New Orleans proposes to build, will be a great educational movement. Its success as such, however, will depend entirely upon the percentage of our population who can secure its educational advantages, this in turn, depends upon its location, as the time in traveling to and from the Exposition, and the cost in railroad and Pullman fares, are the most important factors.

Considering these matters, New Orleans' claims to being the "Logical Point" for this Panama Exposition, seem to be fully substantiated by the following facts:—

New Orleans is 500 miles from the center of population in the United States. San Francisco is 2,500 miles distant therefrom.

Within a radius of 500 miles from New Orleans there are 17,500,000 people. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 2,000,000.

Within a radius of 1,000 miles from New Orleans, there are 65,000,000. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 6,000,000.

At an average of 900 miles from New Orleans, there are 70 of our principal cities with a combined population of 20,000,000. Averaging 900 miles from San Francisco there are only 8 large cities, with a combined population of just 1,000,000. The average distance of all these cities to New Orleans is 792 miles,—to San Francisco 2,407 miles.

Over 75 per cent. of the people of the United States could go to an Exposition there at an average expense for railroad fare of $12.50, as against an average of $37.50 to the Pacific Coast; and for several millions of our people, the Pullman fare and Dining Car expenses alone, for a trip to San Francisco, would amount to more than all their transportation expenses for a trip to New Orleans.

This is an important public question to be settled by Congress at the session which convenes in December.

Many of our readers will wish to visit this World's Panama Exposition, and if held in New Orleans a great many more could spare the time and money for the trip than could go to San Francisco. Therefore, we urge our readers to write to the two senators from this State and the congressman from this district, requesting them to support New Orleans in the contest.

Childish Reasoning.

"Look at the brownies, papa!" exclaimed a little miss as she gazed upward at a Wall street skyscraper.

"They are not brownies, dearie," replied papa. "They are big men, like me, but they look so tiny because they are so high."

"If they were twice as high, would they look twice as small?" she asked, showing the mathematical turn not unnatural in the offspring of a successful broker.

Papa answered "Yes."

She made a quick calculation and remarked: "They won't amount to much when they get to heaven, will they?"

BANKERS KNEW THEIR MAN

In His Customary Condition, and No Further Identification Was Necessary.

One day a big city bank received the following message from one of its country correspondents: "Pay $25 to John Smith, who will call today." The cashier's curiosity became suspicion when a cabman assisted into the bank a drunken "fare" who shouted that he was John Smith and wanted some money. Two clerks pushed, pulled and piloted the boisterous individual into a private room away from the sight and hearing of regular depositors. The cashier wired the country bank:

"Man claiming to be John Smith is here. Highly intoxicated. Shall we await identification?"

The answer read: "Identification complete. Pay the money."—Success Magazine.

The Place of Honor.

Farmer Hodge was of the good, old-fashioned school, and he always gave a feast to his hands at harvest time.

It was harvest time and the feast was about to commence.

Giles was the oldest hand and the hostess, with beaming cordiality, motioned him to the seat by her right hand. But Giles remained silently unresponsive.

"Come," said the hostess, "don't be bashful, Mr. Giles"—he was just Giles on ordinary occasions—"you've a right to the place of honor, you know."

Giles deliberated a moment, then spoke.

"Thank you kindly, Mrs. Hodge," he said, "but if it's all the same to you, I'd rather sit opposite this pudden'!"

Poor Prospects.

"Yes," said Miss Passay, "I found a very nice boarding house today, but the only room they had to offer me had a folding bed in it, and I detest those things."

"Of course," remarked Miss Pert, "one can never hope to find a man under a folding bed."—Catholic Standard and Times.

COFFEE WAS IT.
People Slowly Learn the Facts.

"All my life I have been such a slave to coffee that the very aroma of it was enough to set my nerves quivering. I kept gradually losing my health but I used to say 'Nonsense, it don't hurt me.'

"Slowly I was forced to admit the truth and the final result was that my whole nervous force was shattered.

"My heart became weak and uncertain in its action and that frightened me. Finally my physician told me, about a year ago, that I must stop drinking coffee or I could never expect to be well again.

"I was in despair, for the very thought of the medicines I had tried so many times nauseated me. I thought of Postum but could hardly bring myself to give up the coffee.

"Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, nourishing, rich drink it was! Do you know I found it very easy to shift from coffee to Postum and not mind the change at all?

"Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better, and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew sound and steady, I slept well and felt strong and well-balanced all the time.

"Now I am completely cured, with the old nervousness and sickness all gone. In every way I am well once more."

It pays to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have.

FISH AND GAME LAW

Warden Lincoln Makes Recommendations in Biennial Report

FAVORS REVISING SEINE LAW

Would Prohibit More Than Two Hooks on a Trot Line and Make It Unlawful for Children to Carry Firearms.

Des Moines, Oct. 15.—In his biennial report to Governor Carroll George A. Lincoln, state fish and game warden, makes several recommendations for changes in the fish and game laws of the state. Those recommendations are as follows:

A law making the possession of a seine unlawful; a law prohibiting the use of over two hooks on a trot line; a law defining game birds and declaring the ownership of them to be in the state; a law forbidding the use of ferrets in hunting game; a law making it unlawful to take or offer for sale black bass under eight inches long; striped bass under eight inches long; blue or channel cat under ten inches long, pike, pickerel or perch under ten inches long, and croppies under six inches long, and a law making it a misdemeanor for children under 17 years of age to carry firearms on the public domain. All these laws are asked for in the interest of game and fish preservation. Warden Lincoln also declares against the establishment of state game preserves and says that private game preserves are un-American and reminders of feudal days in Europe.

His report shows that he prosecuted 449 cases, getting $10,617.22 in fines, 38 jail sentences and 35 acquittals. He destroyed 112 seines, 261 hoop nets, 250 trot lines, 101 traps, 167 dip nets, 38 spears and 7 boats, the total value of which was $6,000. He has put out 6,250 eggs of ring neck pheasants to 178 applicants in 82 counties. He believes this to be the proper method of propagation of these game birds.

Two men, he says, made $12,400 off of German carp taken from the Mississippi river. One man caught 60,000 pounds, for which he received $2,400, and one man caught 217,000 pounds, for which he received $10,000.

Make Plans For Meeting.

Baptist churches of Iowa will hold the state Baptist convention in the First Baptist church of Des Moines Oct. 24 to 28.

Monday evening and Tuesday morning will be given over to the discussion of subjects of interest to the pastors. The regular sessions of the convention will be held on Wednesday and Thursday.

Among the speakers of national note who appear on the programme will be the Rev. Ingram Bill, a pastor in Chicago; Prof. E. D. Burton of Chicago university; Dr. Charles L. White of New York, Dr. W. J. Williamson of St. Louis, Dr. Lincoln McConnell of Kansas City, Mo.; the Rev. A. L. Bain of Congo, Africa; Miss Inga Petterson of Japan, and Miss Harriet Cooper of Detroit.

The interest of the convention centers in the address of Prof. E. D. Burton of the University of Chicago, who was a member of the commission to China.

Three States May Combine.

Cooperation between the states of Iowa, Illinois and Missouri in the war being waged on tuberculosis is being advocated by the state tuberculosis experts of each of the three states, according to A. E. Kepford, the Iowa tuberculosis expert. There will be a conference of the tuberculosis workers of the three states in Galesburg, Ill., Oct. 21-25 at which time it is hoped to perfect a plan whereby the three states can work in unisn. Dr. Kepford will represent Iowa at that conference.

"All three states are fighting the disease and it is our belief that better work can be accomplished if we help each other," said Dr. Kepford. "In all probability we will arrange a plan at the conference whereby our forces will be united."

Poultry and Pet Stock Men Meet.

At a meeting of the Poultry and Pet Stock association, at the coliseum to make final arrangements for the show to be held here in January, a resolution was passed to have the dog, cat, and pet fanciers join with the poultry fanciers in the coming state show. It is proposed to shut off a separate stage for this feature.

Death Toll in August.

Death collected a heavy toll in Iowa during the month of August, according to the monthly bulletin issued by the state board of health. The records show that 1785 people succumbed to the ravages of various diseases.

ELECTRICITY CURES PARALYSIS

Iowa Health Board Secretary Disagrees With New York Physician.

Des Moines, Oct. 15.—Secretary Sumner of the State Board of Health, disagrees with the New York city physicians that electricity is a "cure all" for infantile paralysis. Not only does Secretary Sumner hold that electricity is not a "cure all" for the disease but that it should not be used in any circumstances during the process of the disease.

His attention was called to the fact that Mrs. Laura Graham, of New York city, who was afflicted with infantile paralysis five years ago, is now beginning to walk because of electric treatments.

"During the process of the disease no electricity should be applied in cases of infantile paralysis," said Secretary Sumner, discussing the New York case. "When the spinal cord is attacked and is in an inflammatory condition there is nothing to be done except give the patient absolute rest and quiet. After all the symptoms are gone and apparent recovery seems to begin, rest and quiet should be continued and then electricity can be applied to assist or stimulate nature in its work of building up the diseased parts.

"You will notice in the Graham case that the disease had apparently left the body and nature had started its repair work before electricity was suggested. It then proved an assistant to nature in nature's repair work and that is perfectly proper. The giving of electricity promiscuously as a "cure all" for infantile paralysis should be absolutely avoided. This woman will probably again learn to walk but she will never be entirely cured, she will never walk with the freedom that she once did. They never do, once they survive the disease."

King's Daughters Hold Meeting.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Iowa branch of the international order of the King's Daughters and Sons was held in the Central Presbyterian church.

Addresses of welcome were given at the opening session by Mayor James R. Hanna, Miss Emma Quackenbush, Mrs. J. B. McCarroll and Dr. George P. Magill. At the evening session Mrs. W. F. Mitchell gave an address of greeting on behalf of the federation of women's clubs, Miss Phoebe Bardsley on behalf of the Y W. C. A. Mrs. F. J. Mansfield of Burlington, state secretary, gave the main address.

At the Thursday morning session annual meetings of the Mary Lowe Dickinson chapter and the Silver Cross chapters were held. The public health move was discussed at length in the afternoon by Dr. McGowan, state secretary for Iowa of the public health education committee in the tuberculosis fight. Dr. E. Luther Stevens discussed the subject of preventing tuberculosis. The closing address was given by Mrs. Ella Reinking Towle of Grinnell.

Mrs. E. N. Coleman of Davenport gave the Thursday evening address The Friday sessions was given over to the conduct of the business of the state organization.

Lehane Girls Get Estate of $100,000.

Katherine and Mary E., daughters of the late Daniel Lehane, are made the sole heirs of an estate valued at $100,000, according to the terms of a very brief will of the deceased filed with Probate Commissioner James E. O'Brien. The two daughters are also made the executors and are not required to give bond, file an inventory of the estate and secure the approval or consent of the court in the sale of any of the real estate or personal property.

Farmers Interested in Soil Special.

Iowans of every class show a great deal of interest in the Burlington soil special. At a number of the stops made the coaches were not large enough to hold the crowds and the lectures were made from the depot platforms. The crowds were not confined to farmers but in every town business and professional men, high school and college students were interested spectators.

Murder and Suicide End Feud.

Claude Masters, a dairyman, residing at the Law farm, Southwest Twenty-first street and Bloomfield road, and Lee Wilson, a prominent farmer residing south of the army post, are both dead as a result of a double tragedy in which Wilson shot Masters five times and then turned the gun against himself, dying almost instantly.

Anti-Saloon League Men Indicted.

C. P. Browning, head of a Des Moines detective agency of that name, R. B. McKee and A. R. Rice, all of whom were instrumental in securing evidence for W. C. Barber against Chief of Police Yeager, were indicted by the Polk county grand jury and are charged with malicious threats to extort.

GETTING EVEN WITH MAMMA

In This Case, Child's Punishment Certainly Failed to Have Salutary Effect.

A little girl had been so very naughty that her mother found it necessary to shut her up in a dark closet—in that family the direst punishment for the worst offense. For 15 minutes the door had been locked without a sound coming from behind it. Not a whimper, not a sniffle.

At last the stern but anxious parent unlocked the closet door and peered into the darkness. She could see nothing.

"What are you doing in there?" she cried.

And then a little voice piped from the blackness:

"I thpit on your new dress and I thpit on your new hat, and I'm waiting for more thpit to come to thpit on your new parasol!"

History of Red Cross Seal.

"Charity stamps," first used in Boston in 1862 for the soldiers' relief funds during the Civil war, were the original forerunners of the Red Cross Christmas seal, which will be used this year to bring happiness and cheer to millions. The Delaware Anti-Tuberculosis society in 1907 for the first time in America made use of a stamp for the purpose of getting revenue to fight consumption. In a hastily organized campaign of only three weeks they realized $3,000. The next year, 1908, the American Red Cross conducted the first national tuberculosis stamp campaign. From this sale $135,000 was realized for the anti-tuberculosis movement. In 1909, under many adverse conditions, $250,000 was realized from these stamps. This year the slogan of the tuberculosis fighters and the Red Cross is "A Million for Tuberculosis From Red Cross Seals in 1910."

TERRIBLE SUFFERING ENDED.

How An Allegan, Mich., Woman Regained Her Health.

Mrs. Robert Schwabe, R. F. D. No. 3, Allegan, Mich., says: "Doctors could not cure me and I was rapidly running into Bright's disease. Kidney secretions were like blood and I arose 8 to 10 times at night to void them. I became frightened at my condition. My sight began to fail and pains in my back were like knife-thrusts. I cried for hours, unable to control my nerves. After I started using Doan's Kidney Pills, I began to feel better and soon I was cured. I am a living testimonial of their merit."

Resinol is the never failing article resorted to by my wife for the many bruises, chafings, cuts, burns and accidents of the children and has been our cure-all for years. LEFT TO A WORSE FATE

Dynamiter, Himself a Married Man, Knew What Awaited Forgetful Husband.

The business man was sitting in his office, thinking of starting for home, when a suspicious looking person came in with a leather bag in his hand.

"If you don't give me $25," said the visitor, coming at once to the point, "I will drop this on the floor."

The business man was cool. "What is in it?" he asked.

"Dynamite," was the brief reply.

"What will it do if you drop it?"

"Blow you up."

"Drop it!" was the instant command. "My wife told me when I left home this morning to be sure and send up a bag of flour, and I forgot it. I guess it will take just about as much dynamite as you have there to prepare me for the blowing up I'll get when she sees me!"

He threw himself back in his chair and waited for the explosion, but it did not come.

"I'm a married man myself," said the dynamiter, and quietly slipped out.—Illustrated Bits.

Just Guessed.

"Mrs. Wadsworth, I am very glad, indeed, to meet you. But, haven't I had the honor of being introduced to you before? What was your name formerly, if I may ask?"

"My maiden name?"

"No; your name before you were divorced."

"How did you know I had been divorced?"

"Why, hasn't everybody?"

HIS HANDS CRACKED OPEN

"I am a man seventy years old. My hands were very sore and cracked open on the insides for over a year with large sores. They would crack open and bleed, itch, burn and ache so that I could not sleep and could do but little work. They were so bad that I could not dress myself in the morning. They would bleed and the blood dropped on the floor. I called on two doctors, but they did me no good. I could get nothing to do any good till I got the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. About a year ago my daughter got a cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and in one week from the time I began to use them my hands were all healed up and they have not been a mite sore since. I would not be without the Cuticura Remedies.

"They also cured a bad sore on the hand of one of my neighbor's children, and they think very highly of the Cuticura Remedies. John W. Hasty, So. Effingham, N. H., Mar. 5, and Apr. 11, '09."

Tired Out.

"Is the first edition of your novel exhausted yet?"

"No. Why?"

"I thought it might be from standing so long on the counters."

CONVINCING PROOF

OF THE VIRTUE OF

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

What is the use of procrastinating in the face of such evidence as the following letters represent? If you are a sick woman or know one who is, what sensible reason have you for not giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? For 30 years we have been publishing such testimonial letters as these—thousands of them—they are genuine and honest, too, every one of them.

Mrs. S. J. Barber says:

"I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine in the world for women—and I feel it my duty to let others know the good it has done for me. Three years ago I had a tumor which the doctor said would have to be removed by an operation or I could not live more than a year, or two, at most. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for advice, and took 14 bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today the tumor is gone and I am a perfectly well woman. I hope my testimonial will be of benefit to others." — Mrs. S. J. BARBER, Scott, N. Y.

Mrs. George May says:

"No one knows what I have suffered from female troubles, neuralgia pains, and backache. My doctor said he could not give me anything to cure it. Through the advice of a friend I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the pain soon disappeared. I continued its use and am now in perfect health. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a God-send to me as I believe I should have been in my grave if it had not been for Mrs. Pinkham's advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." —Mrs. GEORGE MAY, 86 4th Ave., Paterson, N. J.

Mrs. E. F. Hayes says:

"I was under the doctor's treatment for a fibroid tumor. I suffered with pain, soreness, bloating, and could not walk or stand on my feet any length of time. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, followed her directions and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. To-day I am a well woman, the tumor was expelled and my whole system strengthened. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. E. F. HAYES, 1890 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Mrs. W. K. Housh says:

"I have been completely cured of a severe female trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and want to recommend it to all suffering women." —Mrs. W. K. HOUSH, 7 Eastview Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, etc.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

The first number of the 1910-11 lecture course last Thursday evening was well attended and those who turned out were well entertained by Ned Woodman, the noted cartoonist and chalk-talker. Mr. Woodman is a good entertainer and makes people laugh. While some lecturers are driven to the platform by a vital message they feel they must deliver to the people, Woodman says he was driven to the platform by his creditors. One thing is sure—he is an artist of no mean ability and those who missed his entertainment missed a rare treat.

FRED SAMPSON IS DEAD

This sad and shocking intelligence was passed from mouth to mouth on our streets Tuesday and it seemed almost too impossible to be believed, as Fred was down town the evening before in seemingly good health. He had been ailing for a few days but it was not generally known, nor was it suspected by the family even that his ailment was of a serious nature. On Tuesday morning at about six o'clock he complained to his parents of having a severe headache and finally said he thought they had better send for a doctor, which was immediately done, but before the physician arrived Fred had lapsed into unconsciousness and he did not rally. His death occurred at about noon, in spite of all that loving hands and medical aid could do relieve him Death was caused by acute nephritis. Deceased had been in good health up to a few days before his passing.

It is sad indeed—the passing away of a young man in the very prime of life—and the shock is a severe blow to his parents and the other members of the family as well as to the whole community. Fred was well liked by everyone; was always of a cheerful disposition, and was of a very free-hearted and liberal nature, and his loss will be keenly felt in the home made so sad by his sudden death. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of all our people.

Fred Sampson was born in German township, Hancock county, Iowa, March 22nd, 1887, and at the time of his death was aged 23 years, 6 months and 25 days. He leaves a mother and father, Mr. and Mrs Louis Sampson; one brother, Clarence, of Beltrami, Minnesota; four sisters—Mrs. C. H. Lenz of Klemme, Mrs. Levi Klutzbach of Froelich, Iowa, and Florence and Viola at home. Funeral services are to be held this afternoon at two o'clock from the German M. E. church, Rev. SENATOR DOLLIVER IS DEAD

Dilation of Heart Direct Cause of Death of Distinguished Statesman

END CAME WITHOUT PAIN

Dissolution Took Place While Physician Was Testing Heart Action of Patient.

IOWA MOURNS A LOYAL SON

For About Twenty-five Years Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver Had Signally Honored His District and State in National Affairs.

Ft. Dodge, Ia., Oct. 17.—Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver, senior senator from Iowa, died at his home here at 7:30 o'clock Saturday night, while a physician stood over him making an examination with a stethoscope.

Death came without a moment's warning, and Dr. E. M. Van Patten, making the examination when the instrument stopped, thought the stethoscope had been broken.

He looked up into the face of the senator to find that silently and with tragic suddenness the death messenger had called the soul of the great statesman.

Mrs. Dolliver, her two daughters, Margaret and Frances, and her son, George, were present when Senator Dolliver died. A sister, Miss Fay Dolliver, who is dean of women at Morningside college, is in Sioux City. R. H. Dolliver, a brother, a Methodist minister, has not been in Fort Dodge during the illness of the senator. Another sister, Mrs. Graham, lives in the east.

Sketch of Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver.

It was with difficulty that men, gathering in groups in public places and in drawing rooms in this city, discussed the sorrow that fell upon Iowa with the passing of Jonathan P. Dolliver.

It was significant of the hold this man had upon the people. For he was much loved and the affection of men was his strength. There was something about him which winning always ennobled, and gave him quick access to the hearts of his people.

The closest friends of the family hastened to the home to offer their condolences and sympathy to the stricken family. In a few hours the word passed over the entire country, and telegrams of sympathy began to pour in from almost every city in the United States. The colleagues of the dead senator were early to offer their condolences and there were many words of sympathy from the statesmen and diplomats at Washington.

He served Iowa during a quarter of a century of the period of greatest development in nation and state and it fell to him to participate in most if not all of the great political crises which confronted the country. It was under the early tutelage of Carpenter and later that of Allison, whom he revered, that he found in the activities of the political field the success of which his talent and character were assurances, while his remarkable ability as a political orator distinguished him in every corner of the nation and brought reflected fame to his own state.

His keenness of intellect and his brilliance of speech, his high sense of humor and an unequaled capacity for vitalizing with his wit subjects in themselves dry and unappealing, gained him an immense popularity as a speaker and from one end of this country to the other the name of J. P. Dolliver is known to those who admire ability and applaud genius.

Meeting the obstacles incident to ambition in the political field and tenaciously fighting his way into position he served in important places in the national house of representatives and in the senate of the United States. He was a member of the ways and means committee of the house and was an intimate friend of leaders like McKinley. In the senate he was made chairman of the great committee on agriculture and it had become known recently that he was slated for advancement to position on the committee on finance, with the retirement of Senator Aldrich.

Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver was a resident of Fort Dodge whither he went with his brother, Robert H. Dolliver, since 1878. He was born near Kingwood, Preston county, Virginia, now West Virginia, February 6, 1858. His father was the late James J. Dolliver, who spent over forty years in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church, mostly in the mountains of West Virginia. Father Dolliver, as he was affectionately called by his friends, was born in Saratoga county, New York, November 25, 1816, of New England ancestry, who were mainly fishermen and sailors along the coast of Massachusetts where the family name is still common. James J. Dolliver spent his youth in the state of New Jersey, though at an early age he emigrated to Ohio and began a business career as a country merchant. In 1841, however, he was called to the Methodist ministry, in which he spent the most of his active life. He was married in 1855 to Eliza J. Brown, daughter of Robert Brown, near Kingwood, Preston county, West Virginia. Five children were born to them. Senator Dolliver was the second in age. The others were, Robert H., a Methodist minister, born in 1856, now a resident of Rochelle, Illinois; Victor B., born in 1861, a lawyer and a resident of Fort Dodge to the time of his death about four years ago, and who shared with his brother the gift of oratory and was one of the most popular campaign speakers in the United States; Miss Margaret Gay, who makes a home for her father in Fort Dodge, and Mrs. Mary H. Graham, wife of Mr. E. R. Graham of Evanston, Ill.

The two brothers, Robert H. and Jonathan P., were graduated from the University of West Virginia in the same class in 1875. That summer J. P. Dolliver went to Sandwich, Ill., where he taught school the following winter in a country school, known as Victor Center. The next spring he returned to his home in West Virginia and spent a year in studying law in the office of his uncle, John J. Brown, of Morgantown, returning the next fall to Sandwich, Ill., where he was principal of the high school. In the spring of 1878 the Dolliver boys invested all their money in law books and came to Fort Dodge, where they opened a law office. They were not denied that valuable schooling which comes from the struggle of vigorous youth to gain a professional footing with but small financial backing. They had the usual struggles, such as other young men under similar circumstances have had, but it was not long until the people of Fort Dodge began to know that the Dolliver boys were made of good stuff and that there were some things they could do better than others.

The future senator soon gained a local reputation as a speaker and it spread to the surrounding counties until he was frequently called upon for public addresses, lectures, etc. In 1884 a friend, the late Dr. Charles Beardsley of Burlington, who was chairman of the republican state committee, told the committee about this wonderful young man from Virginia with the gift of oratory and the brains and industry and ambition to put something besides high-sounding phrases into his speeches. So Mr. Dolliver was invited to be temporary chairman of the republican state convention in Des Moines in April, 1884.

The speech he made then lifted him from the obscurity of a country law office into national fame. It was the rising of a new star in the political firmament and its power and brilliancy were at once recognized by the republican leaders in charge of the national convention. Mr. Dolliver was called east and bore a conspicuous part in that memorable campaign, traveling for a time and speaking with James G. Blaine, the republican nominee for the presidency in that year. "No, Captain Plum, I Was Not Aware of It."

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

ILLUSTRATIONS BY MAGNUS G. KETTNER

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Captain Nathaniel Plum of the sloop Typhoon, lands secretly on Beaver island, Lake Michigan, stronghold of the Mormons. Obadiah Price, an eccentric old man and councilor of the Mormons, who has been spying on him, suddenly confronts him and tells him he is expected. Plum insists he has got the wrong man. Price ignores his protestations and bargains for the ammunition on board the sloop. He binds Nat by a solemn oath to deliver a package to Franklin Pierce, president of the United States. He agrees to show Plum the Mormon town, St. James. Plum sees the frightened face of a young woman in the darkness near Price's cabin. She disappears, leaving an odor of lilacs. It develops that Plum's visit to Beaver island is to demand settlement from the king, Strang, for the looting of his ship some time previously by men whom he suspected of being Mormons. Burke, his mate, has been left in charge of the sloop with orders to bombard St. James if the captain does not return within a certain time. Price takes Nat secretly in the darkness to the king's house, and through a window he sees Strang and his seven wives, among whom is the lady of the lilacs, who Price says is the seventh wife. Price's actions lead Plum to believe that he is jealous of Strang. Plum calls at the king's office.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

Was there a tremble of fear in her voice? Even as he looked Nathaniel saw the flush deepen in her cheeks and her eyes light with nervous eagerness.

"I am sent by Obadiah Price," he hazarded.

A flash of relief shot into the woman's face.

"The king is at his office," she repeated. "His office is near the temple."

Nathaniel retired with another bow.

"By thunder, Strang, old boy, you've certainly got an eye for beauty!" he laughed as he hurried through the grove.

"And Obadiah Price must be somebody, after all!"

The Mormon temple was the largest structure in St. James, a huge square building of hewn logs, and Nathaniel did not need to make inquiry to find it. On one side was a two-story building with an outside stairway leading to the upper floor, and a painted sign announced that on this second floor was situated the office of James Jesse Strang, priest, king and prophet of the Mormons. It was still very early and the general merchandise store below was not open. Congratulating himself on this fact, and with the fingers of his right hand reaching instinctively for his pistol butt, Captain Plum mounted the stair. When half way up he heard voices. As he reached the landing at the top he caught the quick swish of a skirt. Another step and he was in the open door. He was not soon enough to see the person who had just disappeared through an opposite door, but he knew that it was a woman. Directly in front of him as if she had been expecting his arrival was a young girl, and no sooner had he put a foot over the threshold than she hurried toward him, the most acute anxiety and fear written in her face.

"You are Captain Plum?" she asked breathlessly.

Nathaniel stopped in astonishment.

"Yes, I'm—"

"Then you must hurry—hurry!" cried the girl excitedly. "You have not a moment to lose! Go back to your ship before it is too late! She says they will kill you—"

"Who says so?" thundered Captain Plum. He sprang to the girl's side and caught her by the arm. "Who says that I will be killed? Tell me—who gave you this warning for me?"

"I—I—tell you so!" stammered the young girl. "I—I—heard the king—they will kill you—" Her lips trembled. Nathaniel saw that her eyes were already red from crying. "You will go?" she pleaded.

Nathaniel had taken her hand and now he held it tightly in his own. His head was thrown back, his eyes were upon the door across the room. When he looked again into the girlish face there was flashing joyous defiance in his eyes, and in his voice there was confession of the truth that had suddenly come to overwhelm whatever law of self-preservation he might have held unto himself.

"No, my dear, I am not going back to my ship," he spoke softly. "Not unless she who is in that room comes out and bids me go herself!"

CHAPTER IV.

The Whipping.

Scarce had the words fallen from his lips when there sounded a slow, heavy step on the stair outside. The young girl snatched her hand free and caught Nathaniel by the wrist.

"It is the king!" she whispered excitedly. "It is the king! Quick—you still have time! You must go—you must go—"

She strove to pull him across the room.

"There—through that door!" she urged.

"No, I won't do it, my dear," he whispered. "Just now it might make trouble for—her."

He lifted his eyes and saw a man looking at him from the doorway. He needed no further proof to assure him that this was Strang, the king of the Mormons, for the Beaver island prophet was painted well in that region which knew the grip and terror of his power. He was a massive man, with the slow slumbering strength of a beast. He was not much under fifty; but his thick beard, reddish and crinkling, his shaggy hair, and the full-fed ruddiness of his face, with its foundation of heavy jaw, gave him a more youthful appearance.

In an instant Nathaniel had recovered himself. He advanced a step, bowing coolly.

"I am Captain Plum, of the sloop Typhoon," he said. "I called at your home a short time ago and was directed to your office. As a stranger on the island I did not know that you had an office or I would have come here first."

"Ah!"

The king drew his right foot back half a pace and bowed so low that Nathaniel saw only the crown of his hat. When he raised his head the aggressive stare had gone out of his eyes and a welcoming smile lighted up his face as he advanced with extended hand.

"I am glad to see you, Captain Plum."

His voice was deep and rich, filled with that wonderful vibratory power which seems to strike and attune the hidden chords of one's soul. The man's appearance had not prepossessed Nathaniel, but at the sound of his voice he recognized that which had made him the prophet of men. As the warm hand of the king clasped his own Captain Plum knew that he was in the presence of a master of human destinies, a man whose ponderous red-visaged body was simply the crude instrument through which spoke the marvelous spirit that had enslaved thousands to him, that had enthralled a state legislature and that had hypnotized a federal jury into giving him back his freedom when evidence smothered him in crime. He felt himself sinking in the presence of this man and struggled fiercely to regain himself. He withdrew his hand and straightened himself like a soldier.

"I have come to you with a grievance, Mr. Strang," he began. "A grievance which I feel sure you will do your best to right. Perhaps you are aware that some little time ago—about two weeks back—your people boarded my ship in force and robbed me of several thousand dollars' worth of merchandise."

Strang had drawn a step back.

"Aware of it!" he exclaimed in a voice that shook the room. "Aware of it!" The red of his face turned purple and he clenched his free hand in sudden passion. "Aware of it!" He repeated the words, this time so gently that Nathaniel could scarcely hear them, and tapped his heavy stick upon the floor.

"No, Captain Plum, I was not aware of it. If I had been—" He shrugged his thick shoulders. The movement, and a sudden gleam of his teeth through his beard, were expressive enough for Nathaniel to understand.

Then the king smiled.

"Are you sure—are you quite sure, Captain Plum, that it was my people who attacked your ship? If so, of course you must have some proof?"

"We were very near to Beaver island and many miles from the mainland," said Nathaniel. "It could only have been your people."

"Ah!"

Strang led the way to a table at the farther end of the room and motioned Nathaniel to a seat opposite him.

"We are a much persecuted people, Captain Plum, very much persecuted indeed." His wonderful voice trembled with a subdued pathos. "We have answered for many sins that have never been ours, Captain Plum, and among them are robbery, piracy and even murder. The people along the coasts are deadly enemies to us—who would be their friends; they commit crimes in our name and we do not retaliate. It was not my people who waylaid your vessel. They were fishermen, probably, who came from the Michigan shore and awaited their opportunity off Beaver island. But I shall investigate this; believe me, I shall investigate this fully, Captain Plum!"

Nathaniel felt something like a great choking fist shoot up into his throat. It was not a sensation of fear but of humiliation—the humiliation of defeat, the knowledge of his own weakness in the hands of this man who had so quickly and so surely blocked his claim. His quick brain saw the futility of argument. He possessed no absolute proof and he had thought that he needed none. Strang saw the flash of doubt in his face, the hesitancy in his answer; he divined the working of the other's brain and in his soft voice, purring with friendship, he followed up his triumph.

"I sympathize with you," he spoke gently, "and my sympathy and word shall help you. We do not welcome strangers among us, for strangers have usually proved themselves our enemies and have done us wrong. But to you I give the freedom of our kingdom. Search where you will, at what hours you will, and when you have found a single proof that your stolen property is among my people—when you have seen a face that you recognize as one of the robbers, return to me and I shall make restitution and punish the evil-doers."

So intensely he spoke, so filled with reason and truth were his words, that Nathaniel thrust out his hand in token of acceptance of the king's terms. And as Strang gripped that hand Captain Plum saw the young girl's face over the prophet's shoulder—a face, white as death in its terror, that told him all he had heard was a lie.

"And when you have done with my people," continued the king, "you will go among that other race, along the mainland, where men have thrown off the restraints of society to give loose reign to lust and avarice; where the Indian is brutified that his wife may be intoxicated by compulsion and prostituted by violence before his eyes; where the forest cabins and the streets of towns are filled with half breeds; where there stalk wretches with withered and tearless eyes, who are in nowise troubled by recollection of robbery, rape and murder. And there you will find whom you are looking for!"

Strang had risen to his feet. His eyes blazed with the fire of smothered hatred and passion and his great voice rolled through his beard tremulous with excitement, but still deep and rich, like the booming of some melodious instrument. He flung aside his hat as he paced back and forth; his shaggy hair fell upon his shoulders; huge veins stood out upon his forehead—and Nathaniel sat mute as he watched this lion of a man whose great throat quivered with the power that might have stirred a nation—that might have made him president instead of king. He waited for the thunder of that throat and his nerves keyed themselves to meet its bursting passion. But when Strang spoke again it was in a voice as soft and as gentle as a woman's.

"Those are the men who have vilified us, Captain Plum; who have covered us with crimes that we have never committed; who have driven our people into groups that they may be free from depredation; who watch like vultures to despoil our women; wild wifeless men, Captain Plum, who have left families and character behind them and who have sought the wilderness to escape the penalties of law and order. It is they who would destroy us. Go among my own people first, Captain Plum, and find your lost property if you can; and if you can not discover it where in seven years not one child has been born out of wedlock, seek among the Lamanites—and my sheriffs shall follow where you place the crime!"

He had stretched out his arms like one whose plea was of life and death; his face shone with earnestness; his low words throbbed as if his heart were borne upon them for the inspection of its truth and honor. He was Strang the tragedian, the orator, the conqueror of a legislature, a governor, a dozen juries—and of human souls. And as he stood silent for a moment in this attitude Nathaniel rose to his feet, subservient, and believing as others had believed in the fitness of this man. But as his eyes traveled a dozen paces beyond, he saw the young girl gesturing to him in that same terror, and holding up for him to see a slip of paper upon which she had written. And when she had caught his eyes she crumpled the paper into a shapeless ball and tossed it just over the landing to the ground below the stair.

"I thank you for the privileges of the island which you have offered me," said Nathaniel, putting on his hat, "and I shall certainly take advantage of your kindness for a few hours, as I want very much to witness one of your ceremonies which I understand is to take place today. Then, if I have discovered nothing, I shall return to my ship."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Stick to Task and Saved Lives.

Several thrilling incidents occurred during a fire on the steamer Lavinia, which broke out the other afternoon while the vessel was high and dry upon a pontoon at Sunderland, England. A boy named John Patterson and a man named Peter Mills were working in the fore peak when a heated rivet fell among oakum, which blazed up and cut off their retreat. They were in grave danger of being suffocated or burned to death. Patterson's brother and another man pumped air through the port holes, and bravely stuck to their task for over an hour, despite showers of water from the fire engines, which drenched them and threatened to swep them off the gangway into the river below. Meanwhile a gang of men were working desperately to cut out a heavy steel plate half an inch thick in the bulkhead. After an hour's strenuous labor the plate gave way, and the two prisoners were released, apparently little the worse for their thrilling experience. Thousands of people watched the rescue operations from a bridge 100 feet above.

OLD SOLDIER WISHES TO HELP SUFFERERS FROM KIDNEY, LIVER AND BLADDER TROUBLES

I am frequently troubled with kidney and bladder trouble, especially in the Spring and Fall. Being an old veteran of the Civil War, a little exposure or cold settles on my kidneys, and then I am laid up with kidney or bladder trouble. Your Swamp-Root was recommended to me a number of years ago, and I took a number of bottles of it and was more than pleased with the results. I consider Swamp-Root the greatest and best kidney medicine on the market, and it never fails to give quick results in kidney trouble, bladder trouble and lame back.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root has done me so much good that I feel if any words of mine will be the means of relieving any poor sufferers that you are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit.

Yours very truly,

Slightly Mixed.

Two Englishmen were resting at the Red Home inn at Stratford-on-Avon. One of them discovered a print picturing a low, tumbling building underneath which was printed: "The House in Which Shakespeare Was Born." Turning to his friend in mild surprise he pointed to the print. His friend exhibited equal surprise and called a waiter, who assured them of the accuracy of the inscription.

"'Pon my word," said the observing Englishman, shaking his head dubiously. "I thought he was born in a manger!"

HISTORIC SPANISH PALACE IN TEXAS TO BE RAZED.

San Antonio Structure to Be Replaced by a Modern Ten-Story Office Building—Was the Home of Spanish Governor.

After having been in situ since 1735 the stone and mortar of the Veramendi palace will be used in the construction of a modern ten-story office building, a New York Herald's San Antonio correspondent says. Instead of hearing the gasconades of Spanish conquistadores and the dolce voices of senoritas they will hereafter listen to the click of typewriters and the giggles of those who work them. No more will they look upon proud Dons from far Hispano, armed cap-a-pie and incased in helmet, visor, doublet and cuirass, for hereafter twentieth century business men with green ties, pink socks, pigeon-toed shoes and padded garments will be the only companions. Before the stones get that far, however, they will be put through the mill and made of the size used in concrete construction. They are limestone, of excellent quality and well adapted for their future mission.

With the Veramendi palace passes one of the best known architectural remains of Spanish American civilization. It was erected almost simultaneously with the Mission San Antonio de Valero, now the Alamo, and for many years was the white house of the Spanish province of Bexar, a territory comprising all of Texas. In those days, however, it was merely known as the governor's house, a description more suitable than Veramendi palace. The latter name is received because of its occupancy by the last Mexican governor of Texas.

The building stood in Soledad street, its site marking formerly the northeastern corner of a large public square, the center of which was occupied by the Plaza des Armas of San Fernando Presidio. In its rear was a big garden, which extended to the banks of the San Antonio river, the whole house and garden being at one time surrounded with a very strong palisade and deep ditches. It was no uncommon thing to have the Indians make raids right in the city in those days and for that reason defenses of that kind were necessary.

The old building was the scene of many a romance of love and murder. Almost in its shadows a Mexican general caused to be butchered like pigs a number of Spanish and other prisoners, who had been unfortunate enough to side with the Spanish government during the Mexican revolution. The description of this scene, picturing the assassin as he whetted the knife on the soles of his shoes every time he had slit the throat of a prisoner, forms one of the most stirring chapters in Texas history. In the Veramendi palace Ben Milam met his end at the assassin's hand, and in its patio and the shaded walks of its gardens James Bowie, designer of the famous knife bearing his name, courted and won Ursula Veramendi, said to have been by far the prettiest woman in Texas.

All that remains intact of the famous old structure now are a pair of old cedar doors which had swung on their hinges since 1735. They are elaborately carved and unusually well preserved. For some time to come they will swing in a private residence in this city, but it is hoped to put them in some museum in the near future.

OF A POLITICAL NATURE

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 24 Special: Despite the fact that the closing weeks of every campaign are the decisive ones, republican nominees who are aspiring to election on November 8th ignored their personal interests last week and almost without exception cancelled every speaking engagement they had made. The action was taken because of the death of United States Senator Jonnathan P. Dolliver, and serves to show in what regard he was held by all the people of Iowa.

Owing to the fact that the flow of oratory was stemmed for a week, it is expected the speaking campaign will be more strenuous than ever from now until the day of election. Many of the candidates will endeavor to visit the places in which they had planned to make addresses last week by whirlwind trips and shorter addresses.

Governor B. F. Carroll this week is campaigning along the southern border of the state. On Wednesday afternoon he appears in Centerville, the home of Claude R. Porter, who is the democratic nominee for the place now held by Gov. Carroll, and to which he is secking re-election. Three days following his appearance at the home of his opponent, Gov. Carroll will speak in his home town of Bloomfield. His address will be Saturday night and it is probable he will remain in Bloomfield over Sunday. Gov. Carroll is covering more territory than any other republican nominee. Thru the use of automobiles, he is able to make several towns a day and meet the people while enroute.

Among the other speakers who enter upon speaking campaigns this week are Attorney General H. W. Byers, Lieutenant Governor George W. Clark, former Governor Warren Garst, Supreme Court Clerk B. W. Garrett, George Cosson, W. S. Kenyon, F. F. Faville, George Dobson, C. G. Saunders and Robert Healy.

During the past week the democrats have endeavored to secure recognition from the republicans by suggesting a series of joint debates between Gov. Carroll and Mr. Porter. The challenge was answered with a statement that Mr. Carroll's dates had been arranged for the remainder of the campaign, but that if Mr. Porter would discuss the planks in either the democratic or republican platforms, Mr. Carroll would answer the arguments in his speeches. Through the record of these speeches in the press everyone would have the advantage of learning the views of both men.

Another play for republican attention was made when the democrats suggested that a primary be held on the general election day for the purpose of learning who the people of Iowa favored as Dolliver's successor. That it is impossible, under the law, to hold such a primary unless a vacancy shall have occurred on the ticket at least thirty days prior to the day of election was recognized, but the democrats suggested a special session of the legislature be called to amend the primary law. This was so evidently impossible that little heed was paid to the suggestion.

With election only two weeks away the republican party is presenting a united front. From every part of the state come reports similar to the one published from Ottumwa, which says.

"In Ottumwa where three months ago progressive and standpat republicans were barely speaking as they passed by, the men prominent in the party are working tooth and toenail for the success of the entire ticket, and this condition is noticeable in the other counties of the district."

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Black Duck, Minn.—"About a year ago I wrote you that I was sick and could not do any of my housework. My sickness was called Retroflexion. When I would sit down I felt as if I could not get up. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and did just as you told me and now I am perfectly cured, and have a big baby boy." — Mrs. Anna Anderson, Box 19, Black Duck, Minn.

Consider This Advice.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

NEED MONEY FOR GOOD WORK

Plans of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

What "a Million for Tuberculosis from Red Cross Seals" will do in providing some of the 275,000 beds needed at once in the United States for consumptives, is explained in a recent bulletin of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. There is just about one bed for every ten indigent consumptives, and if all tuberculosis persons in the country are counted, both rich and poor, hardly one for every 25 or 30. If sufficient hospital accomodations are provided only for those who are too poor to pay the full price for their treatment, fully 275,000 more beds in special institutions for tuberculosis would be needed at once. The immense outlay necessary to provide and maintain so many beds in hospitals, make it imperative, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis declares, that such institutions be erected from public money, either municipal, county or state. In order to get appropriations for public hospitals for tuberculosis, agitation is necessary, and in order to create a campaign of agitation, organization is demanded. But in order that an organization may carry on an effective campaign, funds are needed.

These funds it is proposed to secure in as many communities as possible from the sale of Red Cross seals.

WISE WORDS.

A Physician on Food.

A physician, of Portland, Oregon, has views about food. He says:

"I have always believed that the duty of the physician does not cease with treating the sick, but that we owe it to humanity to teach them how to protect their health, especially by hygienic and dietetic laws.

"With such a feeling as to my duty I take great pleasure in saying to the public that in my own experience and also from personal observation I have found no food equal to Grape-Nuts, and that I find there is almost no limit to the great benefits this food will bring when used in all cases of sickness and convalescence.

"It is my experience that no physical condition forbids the use of Grape-Nuts. To persons in health there is nothing so nourishing and acceptable to the stomach, especially at breakfast, to start the machinery of the human system on the day's work.

"In cases of indigestion I know that a complete breakfast can be made of Grape-Nuts and cream and I think it is not advisable to overload the stomach at the morning meal. I also know the great value of Grape-Nuts when the stomach is too weak to digest other food.

"This is written after an experience of more than 20 years, treating all manner of chronic and acute diseases, and the letter is written voluntarily on my part without any request for it."

SENATOR BURIED

Jonathan P. Dolliver Laid to Rest Near Father's Grave

SERVICES HELD AT FT. DODGE

Two Methodist Bishops, Governor Carroll, Senator Cummins and a Number of Others Delivered Eulogies.

Fort Dodge, Ia., Oct. 20.—Impressive services over the remains of Senator Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver, who died Oct. 15, were held here this afternoon and the remains interred in a grave on the hillside in Oakland cemetery, near "Father" Dolliver's grave.

Committees from the United States Senate, the National House of Representatives, members of the Iowa House and Senate, state and city officials, and thousands of relatives and friends from all parts of the state and country, wended their way through the streets of Fort Dodge, out to Oakland cemetery to the north of the city, where sorrowing friends and fellow citizens of the deceased senator stood with bowed heads while the mortal remains of one of the foremost American citizens were laid away.

Eulogies.

Governor B. F. Carroll paid tribute to Senator Dolliver in behalf of the state of Iowa; Senator A. B. Cummins for the United States Senate; Geo. E. Roberts, of Washington and Fort Dodge, director of the mint, in behalf of the press; Rev. Robert Smylie, of Sioux City, in behalf of the Northwest Iowa Conference of the Methodist church; Rev. W. H. Spencer, of Ft. Dodge, on "The Senator's Relation to the Home Church"; Bishop William Frasier McDowell, of Chicago, on "A Fallen Leader," and Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of Philadelphia, on "The Laymen's Relation to the Church."

The active pallbearers were S. T. Meservy, secretary of the United States Gypsum company, Chicago; Postmaster A. R. Loomis, J. W. Campbell, S. J. Robertson, Edward Thompson, a farmer, who will move onto the Dolliver farm in the spring; Frank Gates, Otto Ottosen, and E. M. Williams.

GOVERNOR CARROLL'S EULOGY.

All Iowa Glories in the Record of Achievement of Beloved Statesman.

Governor Carroll spoke as follows:

"Nearly thirty years ago there came to our state from the hills of West Virginia a young man full of hope and full of promise. He was a university graduate, had been a school teacher and was admitted to the practice of law. Full of vigor of young manhood he located in Fort Dodge and engaged in the practice of his profession.

"He had not dwelt there long until it became apparent that he possessed more than the ordinary degree of mental activity and capacity. He soon took rank as a public speaker and was in great demand as such. As the years passed by he came to be recognized not only as a young man of unusual gifts and attainments, but was regarded as an orator of splendid ability.

"Public attention was directed toward him and he was called upon to enter public life. He first became a member of the lower house of congress from the Tenth congressional district and was later transferred to the United States senate.

"In each of these positions he served his constituency and his country with marked ability and distinction. He grew in popular favor with his people, and with the country until his name became prominently mentioned for the highest office in the gift of the American people.

An Apparent Giant.

"Strong in intellect, full of courage, apparently a physical giant, marching with steady tread upon his upward public career, it seemed that years of useful service were his.

"Today we come to pay our tribute of respect to this honored citizen of our commonwealth. Senator Dolliver has passed to the Great Beyond. We have come as representatives of our state and of the United States to place upon his bier the tokens of our respect and esteem, and to participate in these last sad rites.

"While we thus pause to mourn the loss of a great man and an able statesman, we can scarcely realize that he who but a few days ago seemed a tower of physical strength has been thus early stricken and removed.

"From the date of his advent into public life Senator Dolliver took easy rank as a great public speaker and thinker.

"He spent no time dwelling among the foothills of public debate but mounted at once to the highest peaks and pinnacles of discussion.

"He loitered not at the edge of the waters, but delved deep into the great ocean of thought and investigation.

"Glittering pearls and gems of expression fell from his lips like notes from the songbird's throat.

Few Equals as Orator.

"For eloquence and diction he had few equals. Satire and humor flowed with equal freedom from his tongue. Versatility and fluency of speech dwelt side by side and words with him were but convenient and ready vehicles of expression.

"In his riper years he loved rather the logic of the arguments than the sensation of the oratorical or the mirthfulness of wit and humor.

"I remember to have heard him say only a few years ago that he had abandoned eloquence for argument and wit and humor for the logic of reason.

"He was a profound and thorough student of governmental questions and a more able exponent of public issues has seldom arisen.

"He was universally recognized as one of the greatest debators that this great nation of ours has ever produced.

"His star was yet ascending. His hopes were yet brightening. No shadow of declining years had yet appeared. He was in full enjoyment of all the powers and blessings of fully developed manhood. The end was sudden.

Death Came Suddenly.

"He lingered not in the shadow nor tarried long in the shadow of death. Death came to him rather as the dying, pulsating throbs of the mighty engine plunged into an impassable barrier with all the momentum of the swiftly moving train. Apparently possessed of all the strength and vigor of an athlete, speeding toward the goal of his ambition, death fell full athwart his pathway.

"Iowa has lost one of her most able and renowned citizens. He brought distinction to our commonwealth. His services were in demand from all parts of the republic.

"Our state has given to the public many able and capable men, but there are few who have approached that degree of recognized ability and capacity for public service attained by him whose life we here commemorate. But we think of him no more as the aggressive, forceful and ever-ready combattant of public life. We turn rather to that sweeter side of a rounded out and generally finished record of great achievements. We put aside all that might seem harsh or discordant and magnify the noble deeds and accomplishments that build for him a monument of fame, lasting as the history of our state and of our nation.

"A borrowed thought here presses itself upon me, 'That at the moment of the death of a good man there gathered around him his deeds of charity and kindness transformed into ministering angels and the spirits of those departed who have been benefited and comforted by his life, and they bear aloft, on luminous wings the freed spirit upward to the very portals of the city immortal.'

"All Iowa today joins in these sweetly solemn memories of the life of this beloved statesman and glories in his grand and magnificent record of public achievement.

"Senator Dolliver's life work is ended. Two and a quarter millions of loyal citizens of our great commonwealth join with those of the nation in mourning his departure."

CUMMIN'S TRIBUTE.

Tells of Splendor of Colleague's Useful Career.

Senator A. B. Cummins said:

In this, the darkest and most sorrowful hour of personal bereavement, when the heart is torn with the anguish which the living feel when the dead is given back to Mother Earth, it is impossible for me to summon the composure which one must have when he attempts to define the place this beloved son of Iowa held among his fellow-men and especially among his associates in the Senate of the United States. Just now every heart is grieving the old loving refrain:

"Oh for the touch of a vanished hand and until time softens the sharp pangs of grief we cannot render full justice to the splendor of his useful career.

The sound of a voice that is still,"

In behalf of his collegues in the Senate I am bidding him a last goodbye rather than uttering the eulogy which later on will pour from the lips of his friends in the chamber which he so often filled with the lofty strains of his inspiring eloquence. I am lamenting over the irreparable loss we have suffered. I am thinking of his work, mightily advanced but still unfinished. We shall miss him as we would have missed no other man. To him was given a measure of affection rich in its quality and royal in its extent. Not the least of his striking and shining characteristics was the abounding good-fellowship with which he enveloped not only his associates, but all humanity. Notwithstanding his acknowledged preeminence in debate I hazard the prediction that when we meet again around his vacant chair the first thought will be of his kindly presence, his cheerful greeting as he passed from desk to desk during the hours of tiresome discussion, of the never-failing wit and humor with which he illuminated the most casual conversation. He was always welcome because his heart was not only overrunning with friendliness, but because as he went his way he left behind him the smile born of his felicitating comment or the delightful reflection awakened by the keen thrust of his satire.

In debate he was easily the leader of the Senate. No man surpassed him in the accuracy of his analysis, the depth of his thought, or the thoroughness of his investigation, and no man approached him in the art of expression. He was nobly endowed with a mind that could explore all the regions of morals, philosophy, literature and statescraft, and he reasoned conventionally upon all these things; but unquestionably his crowning gift was his marvelous power of speech. He could so use his mother tongue that every word he spoke challenged immediate attention and carved itself into full relief upon the memory of his audience. His language was plain and simple, but it had a fundamental quality that made it the best possible garb for the idea that he was seeking to convey. Those who heard him remembered what he said because it was instantly recognized that he had put his case in the strongest way in which it could be put, and there are very few of his speeches in which will not be found passages which rightfully become classics in form and permanent part of the literature of the subject to which they relate.

He was a master mind and it is inexpressibly sad that at the climax of his influence, the zenith of his greatness when his vision was clearer and broader than ever before that we must give him up. The burdens which he was so manfully and courageously bearing must fall upon those less able to sustain them, but we all bow to the decree of an inscrutable Providence, and march on, carrying with us, the heavy sorrow of his death; but cheered, strengthened and inspired by the lesson of his life.

JOHN MORRISON FOUND DEAD

Hedrick Postmaster Found Lying at Bottom of Stairway in Rear of His Postoffice.

Hedrick, Ia., Oct. 20.—John Morrison, ex-representative, widely known over the state as a republican leader, and one of the leading citizens of Keokuk county, was instantly killed by a fall into a basement at the postoffice building. Three or four business men of the city, missing Mr. Morrison, who has been postmaster for thirteen years, from the postoffice, began a search about the premises and found his body lying at the foot of the short stretch of stairs leading from the ground down into the basement at the rear of the postoffice building. His skull was crushed and there was an ugly cut over the eye and the nose was broken.

Mr. Morrison represented Keokuk county in the Iowa legislature for three terms. He was county auditor for two years and served as postmaster at Sigourney for one term. He had resided in Keokuk county for fifty-seven years and in Hedrick for the past twenty years. He is survived by his wife, four daughters and one son. One son, John Morrison, was killed during the Spanish-American war.

Barney Suggests Pay for Bovines

The danger from tuberculosis in cattle, has been greatly exaggerated, according to W. B. Barney, state dairy commissioner. In his address to the State Dairy association he declared that the milk was dangerous only where the cow's udder is affected. He took a position opposite to the veterinarians and health officers in regard to the necessity for slaughter of animals having indications of tuberculosis. He also insisted it is an injustice to require the killing of cows without compensation to the owner.

Cash Balance Is Half Million.

The quarterly count of the money in the hands of the state treasurer disclosed the fact that the balance in the general fund amounts to $571,667.19. The treasurer also has on hand the special funds of the following: For the state college, $93,857.36; for the university, $64,331.72; for the normal college, $16,051.57. The college interest fund amounts to $1,511.50, the lake bed fund $3,014.63, and the endowment bonds for the state college $686,777.97.

Finds Old Paper.

An interesting paper was recently found by E. Lewis of East Locust street, among the belongings of his grandfather, the late Dabo McDowell, who died a few years ago at the age of 98. The paper, which is called the Maryland and Baltimore Journal, is over 147 years old, being published Aug. 20, 1773. It is the original sheet of what is now the Baltimore American.

Each Child of 13 Is Given $5.

Ten daughters and three sons of Isaac Warden, a wealthy farmer of Madison township, were each left a $5 gold piece by their father, according to the terms of a will which was opened by Probate Commissioner James E. O'Brien. Eliza Warden, the eleventh daughter, was left the remainder of the deceased's estate, which is said to be valued at $50,000.

BOARD WANTS MORE MONEY.

Report to Be Submitted to Next Legislature Being Prepared.

Des Moines, Oct. 22.—Chairman Robinson, of the State Board of Control, is preparing the biennial report of the board. The board will ask the state legislature to increase the per capita appropriation for inmates of the various state institutions. There is a wide difference among the institutions as to the amount of per capita appropriations they get from the legislature. For instance the per capita appropriation for the tuberculosis sanitarium at Oakdale is $30 while for the prison at Ft. Madison it is but $9. For the blind school at Vinton and the deaf school at Council Bluffs the present per capita appropriation is $22. For the insane hospitals the appropriation is $12, while for the feeble minded at Glenwood it is $16. If the plans of the State Board of Control are carried out all these appropriations will be materially enlarged. The cost of living and general expense incident to the management of the state institutions is largely responsible for the demand for increased appropriations for these institutions. Were it not for the excellence of the state farms it would be impossible to give the inmates decent living and care on the present per capita appropriation.

Improper Food Causes Death.

One-half of all the children who died in Iowa during the month of September, succumbed to preventable diseases, according to Secretary Sumner of the state board of health, who is now preparing his monthly statement of deaths.

The September record shows that 432 children died during the month, of which number over half, or 185, died of cholera infantum, a disease due to poor and improper feeding.

"So one can see that one-half of the babes who died during the month could have been saved," said Dr. Sumner.

The records of the state health board show that on the average one-third of all the deaths are among the babes, and one-half of the babes could be saved.

Des Moines Second in Building Gain.

Des Moines made a great building record in September. Des Moines ranks second among the leading cities in the country for the gain in building over the conditions of last year, according to the Construction News for October. New buildings in the city for September this year show a gain over the building for the corresponding month in 1909 of 157 per cent. This gain in building activities is nothing short of remarkable. Last year was a record breaker in Des Moines for new building. Conditions this fall show that even last year's mark will be greatly excelled by that to be made this year.

Find Ring in Stomach.

An X-ray examination of the stomach of M. F. Fort, who confessed that he swallowed a diamond ring, showed that the jewel was lodged in the sigmoid flexure. Fort has been under care of a physician and detectives, when it is claimed, he purposely swallowed a $350 ring belonging to Harry Cohen. R. A. Fort, a merchant at Glidden, brother of Fort, came to Des Moines and deposited $350 to assure the return of the ring and took Fort home with him.

Wrong Guess.

It was exhibition day at No. 3, and as the parents of Jack Grady, the dullest pupil, were listening hopefully, the teacher tried her best to help the boy. "How did Charles I. of England die?" she asked, assigning the easiest question on her list to Jack. As he looked at her, with no indication of a coming answer, the teacher put her hand up to her neck. Jack saw the movement and understood its meaning, as he thought. "Charles I. of England died of cholera," he announced briskly.—Youth's Companion.

Fable of Pan of Biscuits.

A Vassar girl married a Kansas farmer.

Two weeks later a cyclone made the happy pair a friendly call.

It cavorted around the premises, ripping up the fences, scattering the haystacks and playing horse with the barn, but when it looked through the open window it drew back in alarm.

There lay the bride's first pan of biscuits.

"I ain't feelin' very strong this morning," murmured the cyclone.

And with another glance at the terrible pan it blew itself away.

on the side of the house where winter blasts strike hardest always has a lower temperature than the rest of the house. There are times when it is necessary to raise the temperature quickly or to keep the temperature up for a long period. That can't be done by the regular method of heating without great trouble and overheating the rest of the house. The only reliable method of heating such a room alone by other means is to use a which can be kept at full or low heat for a short or long time.

Four quarts of oil will give a glowing heat for nine hours, without smoke or smell.

An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. Filler-cap does not screw on; but is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached by a chain and cannot get lost.

An automatic-locking flame spreader prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that it can be cleaned in an instant.

To the Republican Voters of the 10th District of Iowa:

It will be the duty of the legislature this winter to elect a successor to Senator Dolliver. His successor must be a Republican. Every Republican candidate for the legislature in Iowa must be elected without fail. The big 10th District must do its duty. Every single Republican in this District has his duty to perform at the polls.

A good crop or thriving business deserves the protection afforded by your ballot cast for the Administration under which our prosperity exists. We once burned corn as fuel, business was at a standstill and a day's labor was worth $1.25 if you could get work at all. That was not under a Republican administration.

In the coming election personal considerations must give way to principle. Iowa cannot take a backward step in State and National affairs. The record of Iowa's delegation in Washington must be endorsed. The voter simply must vote and vote for the Republican legislators and for the ticket as a whole.

The representation of your precinct in your county conventions depends on the number of votes cast for the ticket in your precinct on Nov. 8th. A large vote in the precinct gives it a large representation in the County Convention. A large vote in the precinct gives the County a large representation in District and State Conventions. A large vote in the precinct will give the State a large representation in national affairs in 1912, a presidential year. Iowa's prestige and power in the nation rests with every single voter in every precinct. The prosperity, the power, the safety, of our nation depends upon the patriotism and fidelity of the individual.

The Congressional Committee respectfully, but insistently urges and requests the Republicans of this District to vote and VOTE RIGHT on November 8th.

DOG CURES ASTHMA

Peculiar Case Where Healthy Dog Absorbs Ailment from Lad

CURED BY SLEEPING WITH HIM

Andy Anderson, of Ames Satisfied that Canine Saved Son's Life, and Now the Dog Has Well Defined Case of Asthma.

Boone, Oct. 22.—A most peculiar case of a dog absorbing an ailment from a lad, and the lad recovering from the same, is reported from Ames. Andy Anderson, living at 421 Boone street, is firmly of the opinion that a dog saved his son's life. Orrin Anderson had contracted the asthma. The parents had travelled all over the United States in the hope that the lad would be cured, but the boy instead seemed to grow worse.

A friend wrote to Mr. Anderson of a cure used in some places in the east, the securing of a good, clean, healthy dog, and making the boy and the dog bedfellows. The dog was in reality to sleep on the pillow with the boy. It was claimed that in a short time the dog would absorb the disease and the boy would be freed from it. Mr. Anderson doubted, but purchased a nice fox terrier and gave it to Orrin as a bedfellow. The dog objected for a few nights, but soon got used to the new order of things. Shortly after commencing sleeping with the boy the dog started sneezing and wheezing as though he had the tuberculosis. The boy began to improve. Now the dog has a well-defined case of asthma and the boy is nearly well.

It will require 4,000 tons of coal, but no estimate can be made on the oil as it has not been used extensively before. To clarify the sugar will require 125 cars of stone. The factory will be in operation from Oct. 15 to some time in February, and the employes will number about 300.

Promotion for Former Iowan.

Coggon.—Word has been received here of the appointment of Rev. Frank Loveland of Omaha to the pastorate of the largest Methodist Episcopal Church in Kansas, located at Topeka. Some twenty years ago Rev. Mr. Loveland was pastor of the Methodist society in Coggon, where that body was struggling through the hardships that characterize a church in a small town. For several years past he has been pastor of one of the largest churches in Omaha.

State Dairymen Elect Officers.

Waterloo.— Officers of the State Dairy association elected were: President, E. R. Shoemaker, Waterloo; vice president, F. W. Stephenson, Lamont; secretary, J. J. Ross, Iowa Falls; treasurer, F. L. Odell, Des Moines. A large crowd was here to hear Senator Cummins speak.

May Build A Soldiers' Temple.

Waterloo.—The board of supervisors will ask the voters to authorize the erection of the sodiers' memorial temple. It is likely the temple, if authorized, will be built on the court house grounds and the Grand Army wil hold its meetings there.

Would Protect Birds.

Waterloo.—To protect the game birds of Iowa, which are rapidly being decimated by hunters, the Audubon society and the conservation committee of the State Federation of Women's clubs will conduct a campaign of education and circulate petitions in the various counties of Iowa, asking the next general assembly to repeal that section of the game laws which permits of spring shooting. It is hoped by these agencies that the people of Iowa will declare their views on conservation of the game birds so emphatically that the lawmakers will be compelled to act. It is pointed out by those who are back of the movement that unless something is done the game birds in this state will soon be entirely extinct.

Big Profits in Melons.

Manchester.—Iowa people who look with longing eyes on the marvelous profits to be derived from truck farming in the south and west can well turn their attention to what Delaware county will do in this line. Matt. Hutson, living on a farm near this city, planted an acre and a half to melons in the spring, and he has this fall realized a net profit of $300 from the patch, or at the rate of $200 per acre. Mr. Hutson devotes most of his time to other interests, but at that can figure that his melons have made him a neat sum, considering the amount of time required to care for them.

Wyer Heads the Librarians.

Davenport.—At the annual election of the Iowa State Librarians' association the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, M. G. Wyer, Iowa City; First Vice President, Miss Grace Rose, Davenport; Second Vice President, Fannie Durren, Waterloo; Secretary, Miss Lillian Barnold, Dubuque; Treasurer, N. W. Parvin, Cedar Rapids; Registrar, Miss Bertha Wilson, Des Moines; Member of Executive Board, Mrs. D. W. Norris, Grinnell; Honorary President, Capt. Witter H. J. Johnson, Fort Dodge.

I. O. O. F. at Cedar Rapids.

Cedar Rapids.—With the biggest attendance in the history of the grand lodge, I. O. O. F., the sixty-third annual session opened with a reception for the grand lodge officers. An hour was devoted to the reception and another hour to the addresses of welcome and the responses. Music by the girls' orchestra from the Odd Fellows' Orphans' home was a feature.

Ramsey Guilty; Given Ten Years.

Albia.—W. S. Ramsey, under arrest on a charge of forgery, entered a plea of guilty and was immediately sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. It is said the forgeries alleged to have been committed by Ramsey will amount to many thousands of dollars. The Equitable of Iowa is a heavy loser.

Has Plenty of Potatoes.

Grundy Center. — Reports from Grundy county are to the effect that the potato yield is much better than earlier advices indicated. Yields of 150 to 200 bushels an acre are frequently reported. Local papers report that the price paid ranges from 35 to 45 cents a bushel.

To Enlarge Lodge Home.

Oskaloosa.—The contract has been signed by Oskaloosa Knights of Pythias for the erection of the new lodge apartments, 60x120 feet on the third story, making a new sixty-foot front to the building. The new work will cost $30,000, furnishing lodge apartments, $5,000 more.

Monticello Has Great Year.

Monticello.—This has been the greatest year in the history of Monticello for improvements, which have not only beautified the town, but also added to its commercial interests. The total cost of the various improvements will amount to at least $110,000.

New Hampton Factory.

Hampton.—O. C. Engebretson has established a small glove and mitten factory in his building on West Fourth street and he states that if he can secure the necessary help he will put in an extensive plant for the manufacture of gloves, mittens and overalls.

Big Canning Output.

Hampton.—The packing season at the Hampton Canning company has closed and for a new institution it was one of the most successful runs ever made. In all there were about 1,700,000 cans of corn put up and $8,000 was paid for labor.

Found Dead in River Shack.

Marshalltown. — The police are working on a case they think may prove one of murder, in the death of George Kunkel, aged 23, a bricklayer, found dead in a small shack on the river below the city.

Yea—yea—even into the land of Lamanites are you king!"

t the sound of his voice Strang ed toward him and the sonorous mph that rumbled in his throat ed to a low greeting. And Nathaniel saw that the little old councilor's eyes glittered boldly as they met the prophet's and that in their glance was neither fear nor servitude but rather a light as of master meeting master. The two advanced and clasped hands and a few low words passed between them while Nathaniel went to the door.

"I will go with you, Captain Nathaniel Plum," called Obadiah. "I will go with you and show you the town."

"The councilor will be your friend," added Strang. "Today he carries with him that authority from the king."

He bowed and Nathaniel passed through the door. Looking back he caught a last warning flash from the girl's eyes. As he hurried down the stair he heard the councilor pause for an instant upon the landing and taking advantage of this opportunity he picked up the crumpled paper, and read these lines:

"Hurry to your ship. In another hour men will be watching for an opportunity to kill you. You will never leave the island alive—unless you go now. The girl you saw through the window sends you this warning."

He thrust the paper into his coat pocket as Obadiah came up behind him.

"Ho, ho, Nat, my boy, I have come fast to catch you—I have come fast!" he whispered. He caught his companion by the arm and Nathaniel felt his hand trembling violently. "Come this way, Nat—beyond the temple. I have things to say to you." His voice was strangely unnatural and when Captain Plum looked down into his face the look in the bead-like eyes startled him. "Nat, you must hurry away with the package!"

"So I understand—if I save my skin. Obadiah Price, I have a notion to kill you!"

They had passed beyond the huge edifice of logs, and as he stopped, hidden from the view of the king's office, Nathaniel caught the councilor's arm in a grip that crushed to the bone.

"I have a notion to kill you!" he repeated.

The old man stood unflinching. Not a muscle of his face quivered as the captain's fingers sank into the flesh.

"At the first sign of treachery, at the first sign of danger to myself, I shall shoot you dead!" he finished.

"You may, Nat, you may. From this moment until you leave the island I shall be at your side and no harm shall come to you. But if there should, Nat, or if there should come a moment when you believe that I am your enemy—shoot me!" There was sincerity in his voice that carried conviction to Nathaniel's heart and he released his hold upon the councilor's arm. Regardless of the mystery that surrounded him he believed in Obadiah.

"If you had remained at the cabin, Nat, you would have known that I was your friend," continued Obadiah. "She would have come to you, but now—it is impossible. You know. You have been warned?"

Nathaniel drew Winnsome's note from his pocket and read it aloud. Obadiah smiled gleefully when he noticed how carefully he kept the handwriting from his eyes.

"Ah, Nat, you are a noble fellow!" he cried, rubbing his hands in his old tireless way. "You would not betray pretty little Winn, eh? And who do you suppose told Winnsome to give you this note?"

"Strang's wife."

"Yea, even so. And it was she who set my old legs a-running for you, my boy. Come, let us move!"

The little councilor was his old self again, chuckling and grimacing and rubbing his hands, and his eyes danced as he spoke of the girl.

"Casey is not a cautious man," he gurgled with a sudden upward leer. "Casey is a fool!"

"Casey!" almost shouted Captain Plum. "What the devil do you mean?"

"Ho, ho, ho—haven't you guessed the truth yet, Nat? While you and I were getting acquainted last night a couple of fishermen from the mainland dropped alongside your sloop. They had been robbed by the Mormon pirates. They cursed Strang. They swore vengeance. And your cautious Casey cursed with 'em, and fed 'em, and drank with 'em—and he would have had them stay until morning only they were anxious to hurry with their report to Strang. Understand, Nat? Eh? Do you understand?"

"What did Casey tell them?" gasped Nathaniel.

Obadiah hunched his shoulders.

"Enough to warrant a bullet through your head, Nat. Cheerful, isn't it? But we'll fool them, Nat, we'll fool them! You shall board your ship and hurry away with the package, and then you shall make love to Strang's wife—for she will go with you!"

He stopped to enjoy the amazement that was written in every lineament of the other's face.

"She will go with me, councilor! And why?"

Obadiah had laughed softly as he watched the change. Suddenly he jerked himself erect.

"Sh-h-h!" he whispered. "Keep cool, Nat! Don't show any excitement or fear. Here comes the man who is to kill you!"

He made no move save with his eyes.

"He is coming to speak with me and to get a good look at you," he added in excited haste. "Appear friendly. Agree with what I say. He is the chief of sheriffs, the king's murderer—Arbor Croche!"

He turned as if he had just seen the approaching figure. And he whispered softly, "Winnsome's father!"

Arbor Croche! Nathaniel gave an involuntary shudder as he turned with Obadiah. Croche, chief of sheriffs, scourge of the mainland—the Attila of the Mormon kingdom, whose very name caused the women of the shores to turn white and on whose head the men had secretly set a price in gold! Without knowing it his hand went under his coat. Obadiah saw the movement and as he advanced to meet the officer of the king he jerked the arm back fiercely. Half a dozen paces away the chief of sheriffs paused and bowed low. But the councilor stood erect, as he had stood before the king, smiling and nodding his head.

"Ah, Croche," he greeted, "good morning!"

"Good morning, councilor!"

"Sheriff, I would have you meet Capt. Nathaniel Plum, master of the sloop Typhoon. Captain Plum this is his majesty's officer, Arbor Croche!"

The two men advanced and shook hands. Nathaniel stood half a head above the sheriff, who, like his master, the king, was short and of massive build, though a much younger man. He was a dark, lowering hulk of a creature, with black eyes, black hair, and a hand-clasp that showed him possessed of great strength.

"You are a stranger, Captain Plum?" The councilor replied quickly.

"He has never been at St. James before, sheriff. I have invited him to stay over to see the whipping. By the way—" he shot a suggestive look at the officer. "By the way, Croche, I want you to see him safely aboard his sloop tonight. His ship is at the lower end of the island, and if you will detail a couple of men just before dusk—an escort, you know—"

Nathaniel felt a curious thrill creep up his spine at the satisfaction which betrayed itself in the officer's black face.

"It will give me great pleasure, councilor," he interrupted. "I shall escort you myself if you will allow me, Captain Plum!"

"Thank you," said Nathaniel.

"Captain Plum is to remain with me throughout the day," added Obadiah. "Come at seven—to my place. Ah, I see that people are assembling near the jail!"

"We have changed our plans somewhat, councilor." The officer turned to Nathaniel. "You will see the whipping within half an hour, Captain Plum." He turned away with another bow to the councilor and hastened in the direction of Strang's office.

"So that is the gentleman who thinks he is going to put a bullet through me!" exclaimed Nathaniel when the officer had gone beyond hearing. He laughed, and there was a kind of wild expectant joy in his voice. "Obadiah, can you not make arrangements for him to go with me alone?"

"He will not go with you at all, Nat," gloated the old man. "Ho, ho, we are playing at his own game—treachery. When he calls at my place you will be aboard ship."

"But I should like to have a talk with him—alone, and in the woods. God—I know a man at Grand Traverse bay whose wife and daughter—"

"Sh-h-h-h!" interrupted the councilor. "Would you kill little Winnsome's father?"

"Her father? That animal! That murderer! Is it true?"

"But you should have seen her mother, Nat, you should have seen her mother!" The old man twisted his hands, like a miser ravished by the sight of gold. "She was beautiful—as beautiful as a wild flower, and she killed herself three years ago to save the birth of another child into this hell. Little Winn is like her mother, Nat."

"And she lives with him?"

"Er, yes—and guarded, oh, so carefully guarded by Strang, Nat! Yes, I guess that some day she will be a queen."

"Great God!" cried the young man. "And you—you live in this cesspool of sin and still believe in a heaven?"

"Yes, I believe in a heaven. And my reward there shall be great. Ho, ho, I am taking no middle road, Nat!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Here Comes the Man Who Is to Kill You!"

Caste in the Army.

One thing not commonly understood among civilians is the completeness of the barrier which divides army officers from the soldiers—or as they are more generally called, the "men." It is always vastly amusing to those familiar with the service to observe the errors in this respect frequently made by the novelist and the playwright, says a writer in the Delineator.

Personal qualifications have nothing whatever to do with the matter. A soldier may be a gentleman who has enlisted with the purpose of obtaining a commission; yet there can be between him and his officers no social intercourse of any kind, and severe penalties would be inflicted upon the officer who would attempt to disregard the rule.

It might seem that this enforcement of a caste sense would result in much har feeling on the side of the men. Such, however, is not actually the case. It is taken for granted, and recognized as conducive to "good order and military discipline." It is a military regulation like any other, and implies no disgrace. Directly a soldier's enlistment is out or directly he rises from the ranks, the prohibition is removed.

Its Effect.

"Always speak kindly of the absent," said Young Mr. Primly.

"I would," replied Miss Cayenne, "if I thought it would be an inducement to some tiresome people to remain so."

A Beloit man has a three-legged chicken with the tail of a duck.

Was Getting Monotonous.

A handsome woman who had been so unfortunate as to find occasion to divorce not one but several husbands was returning from Nevada. In Chicago she happened to meet her first husband, for whom, by the way, she always has entertained a real affection.

"Upon my soul, if it isn't Charlie!" exclaimed the ex-wife, cordially shaking hands with the gentleman whose name she had formerly borne. "I'm awfully glad to see you, Charlie!" Then, after a wistful expression had come to and been banished from her countenance, she added:

"Old chap, I've often wondered where you were and what you were doing. It was too bad we didn't get on better together. I hope your experience hasn't been as unpleasant as mine. I'm sick and tired of marrying strangers!"

Money for Tuberculosis Work.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis gives forcible illustration of the way in which a small sum spent in education has secured large appropriations from state, county, and municipal officials. The New York State Charities Aid association in the three years, 1908, 1909, and 1910, has spent in the up-state portion of New York about $55,000 in arousing the people to the dangers of tuberculosis. As a direct result of the public sentiment produced by this outlay, the state, county, and municipal authorities have already appropriated for tuberculosis work $1,500,000 and appropriations for hundreds of thousands of dollars are pending. Hundreds of hospital beds have been provided, and the association already aims for "No Uncared-for Tuberculosis in 1915."

Thus, the National association says if $1,000,000 is realized from the sale of Red Cross seals, millions more will be added to it from the public treasuries. Last year 25,000,000 stamps were sold. It is aimed to sell four times as many this year.

KLEMME

(By our Staff Bard.)

In the midst of Hancock county
In the state of Iowa,
Stands a little town named Klemme
As nice a town as ere you saw.

It is small but it is pretty
And can hold its own in trade.
With its crops and with its cattle
Other towns puts in the shade.

It can boast of banks a couple
And of business places ten,
Of two doctors and a printer
And a barber (now and then.)

With its mayor and its council
Set there to enact the laws,
They are not kept very busy
For there rarely is a cause.

There was a time when she was noted
For her ball team great and strong
But that time is past and over
And her fame has gone along.

But its dainty colored buildings
And its sidewalks all cement
Give to the tired laborer
A feeling of content.

There in a little villa
Where I live with my wife,
I tell you boys I ne'er did have Such pleasure in my life.

CHAS. W. STIEHL

Democratic Candidate for Recorder of Hancock County. Election November 8th.

ELECTION NEXT TUESDAY

With election only four days distant, General Apathy still seems to hold full sway. Interest in politics seems to be slight in this locality. There are some who claim they believe that the democrats have a chance to carry the state this fall, but the chance is very remote, to our way of thinking. Anyway, it is your duty as well as your privilege to vote, and you should not neglect that duty. Go to the polls next Tuesday and vote your honest convictions.

To the Voters of Hancock County:

I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to you for the very liberal support you gave me in my candidacy for County Recorder before the June Primary. It may be impossible for me to meet you all before election day, but I trust my record is such that it has won the confidence of those I cannot meet; and by casting your vote Nov. 8th, give me the opportunity of proving worthy of that confidence

Very Respectfully Yours,
Christyna Callison.

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world of it. I suffered from female trouble and fearful pains in my back. I had the best doctors and they all decided that I had a tumor in addition to my female trouble, and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman and I have no more backache. I hope I can help others by telling them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — MRS. EMMA IMSE, 833 First St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

West Union.—Hunt Barnes, West Union's noted driver of fast horses, has just returned from a nine weeks' trip through northern and middle Wisconsin race curcuits. At Gay's Mills on Oct. 12 Mr. Barnes celebrated his 82d birthday, and the horsemen gathered there gave a banquet at the Briggs house in his honor and presented Mr. Barnes with a goldheaded cane. Upon it was engraved: "Presented to Hunt Barnes, the oldest driver. Given by the boys."

Nurse to Fight for Cahill Estate.

Marshalltown.—With almost $6,000 at stake, Miss Grace Kruse, a telephone operator of this city, will start a contest of the will of Thomas Cahill, an eccentric old Irishman who died at St. Thomas hospital here after making his will leaving his entire estate to the Sisters of Mercy. Miss Kruse's contest will be based on a will made by Cahill on Sept. 21, when he left everything to her. Miss Kruse was formerly a nurse in St. Thomas hospital but left the hospital last August. She had cared for Cahill and the old man insisted on leaving his property to her. He cautioned her to tell no one of it and the first will was not dreamed of until the fact of the second became public. Miss Kruse will claim that Cahill was not in his right mind when he made the second will. Miss Kruse is 20 years old and lives at Ackley.

Cement Men to Cedar Rapids.

Cedar Rapids.—The seventh annual convention and show of the Iowa Association of Cement Users will be held in Cedar Rapids, Ia., January 10-13, inclusive, 1911. The convention will last four days this year instead of three, as has been the former custom. This will afford exhibitors a better opportunity to display their appliances, as well as members of the association and visitors a better chance to educate themselves in the possibilities of cement and concrete.

Mail Carrier Kills Wolf.

Hampton.—Grant D. Palmer, a rural mail carrier out of this city, varied the monotony of his work sufficiently one day recently to take a shot at a wolf that crossed his path near the Alex Pink place in Hamilton township. He was so successful as to down one of the animals, and he declares that another appeared and was wounded, but that it got away. The scalp netted him $5 at the office of the county auditor.

R. F. D. Makes Record Trip.

Charles City.—Rural Carrier Fitkins broke all records by covering his mail route in an automobile, making the 25⅛ miles of his route in 53 minutes, and delivering 140 pieces of mail, collecting 33 cents postage due, and selling $1.18 worth of stamps. WRONG IN THAT DIAGNOSIS

Physician's Method May Have Been All Right, but Here He Was at Fault.

We are told that the latest sensation in the medical world is the assertion of a doctor that he is able, by looking into a patient's eye, to make an accurate diagnosis of the complaint which the patient is suffering. But is this really as novel as it is supposed to be? I recollect hearing some time ago of a doctor who said to a patient who was under examination: "I can see by the appearance of your right eye what is the matter with you. You are suffering from 'liver.'"

"My right eye?" asked the patient.

"Yes," returned the doctor. "It shows me plainly that your liver is out of order."

"Excuse me, doctor," said the patient, apologetically. "My right eye's a glass one."

Procrastination.

"I heard a tale the other day of a postponing chap, who thought he'd buy a wheel so gay, but—'They will be cheaper, perhaps.' And so he dallied year by year, the cheapest wheel to buy; but long before the cheapest gear, that yap he had to die! And so, by putting off the day, we miss the wine of life; and some there are in just that way who thus will miss a wife! Get busy now, you timid swain, procrastinate no more, for time is surely on the wane, and you a bachelor! Some wait too long to make a pick of husbands or of wife, and then some take a broken stick and make a mess of life."—H. B. Benedict, in Judge.

"Kin by Marriage."

A caller was talking to a small Harlem girl who is extravagantly fond of her mother. She likes her father well enough, but he is far from being first in her affections. The caller, knowing the situation, asked the child why she didn't love her father as she did her mother.

"Oh, you see," she explained, loftily, "he is only kin to us by marriage."

That observation which is called knowledge of the world will be found much more frequent to make men cunning than good.—Dr. Johnson.

THE FIRST TASTE

Learned to Drink Coffee When a Baby.

If parents realized the fact that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which is especially harmful to children, they would doubtless hesitate before giving the babies coffee to drink.

"When I was a child in my mother's arms and first began to nibble things at the table, mother used to give me sips of coffee. As my parents used coffee exclusively at meals I never knew there was anything to drink but coffee and water.

"And so I contracted the coffee habit early. I remember when quite young the continual use of coffee so affected my parents that they tried roasting wheat and barley, then ground it in the coffee-mill, as a substitute for coffee.

"But it did not taste right and they went back to coffee again. That was long before Postum was ever heard of. I continued to use coffee until I was 27, and when I got into office work, I began to have nervous spells. Especially after breakfast I was so nervous I could scarcely attend to my correspondence.

"At night, after having coffee for supper, I could hardly sleep, and on rising in the morning would feel weak and nervous.

"A friend persuaded me to try Postum. My wife and I did not like it at first, but later when boiled good and strong it was fine. Now we would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever tasted.

"I can now get good sleep, am free from nervousness and headaches. I recommend Postum to all coffee drinkers."

The Key to Germany.

...Capt. Charles King, the author, ...ked, at the Milwaukee club, the ...man element in Milwaukee's pop...tion.

"I know a soldier," said Captain ..., "who met the kaiser last year ...Berlin.

"'You have a thorough knowledge ...our best thought and customs,' said ...e kaiser. 'Have you ever been to ...many before?'

"'O, yes, sir,' said the soldier.

"'What cities have you visited? Ber... and Hamburg?' asked the kaiser.

"'No, sir,' said the soldier. 'Mil...kee.'"

Not Easy.

Pat was a married man—a very much married man. He had married no fewer than four times, and all his wives were still in the fore. According to Pat's own account before the court where he was tried for bigamy and found guilty, his experiences were not altogether satisfactory. The judge, in passing sentence, expressed his wonder that the prisoner could be such a hardened villain as to delude so many women.

"Yer honor," said Pat, apologetically, "I was only tryin' to get a good one, an' it's not aisy!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Lovemaking and Practice.

The only way to become an expert at lovemaking is to practice. This was the information handed out to a handful of hearers by the Hindu philosopher, Sakharam Ganesh Pandit, in a lecture on "The Science of Love."

"Love is a divine discontent," said the philosopher, "and if you want to arouse love in others it can be done only by giving them love. How to develop the emotion of love in another is the great question of today—the art of making love. It needs a great deal of study and a great deal of practice."

His Point of View.

"John, dear," queried the young wife, glancing up from the physical culture magazine she was perusing, "what is your idea of a perfect figure?"

"Well," replied her husband, "$100,000 may not be perfection, but it's near enough to satisfy a man of my simple tastes."

HIS LIVELIHOOD AT STAKE

Certainly Candidate for Governor Could Not Expect to Get That Vote.

An incident in which former Governor Odell of New York figured as the victim was told by Col. James Hamilton Lewis at a recent banquet.

"When Governor Odell was last running for office," said Colonel Lewis, "there had been a great deal of talk about Niagara Falls and the electrical power that could be conferred on all parts of New York. One day an old negro halted Mr. Odell and said:

"'Mr. Odell, is yo' runnin' for gov'ner, sah?'

"'I am,' answered the candidate.

"'I guess yo' want my vote, den,' said the colored man.

"'Well, I would like to have your vote, Zeb. I have known you for so many years.'

"'Well, I jist want to ask you a question, Mr. Odell, befo' I give mah vote to you. Are yo' for electric lights in dis town?'

"Well, Zeb, I am for all modern improvements,' said Odell, with a slight flourish.

"'Well, sah, I can't vote for you,' said Zeb with firmness. 'Yo' done forget dat I is a lamp lighter.'"

AWFUL BURNING ITCH CURED IN A DAY

"In the middle of the night of March 30th I woke up with a burning itch in my two hands and I felt as if I could pull them apart. In the morning the itching had gone to my chest and during that day it spread all over my body. I was red and raw from the top of my head to the soles of my feet and I was in continual agony from the itching. I could neither lie down nor sit up. I happened to see about Cuticura Remedies, and I thought I would give them a trial. I took a good bath with the Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. I put it on from my head down to my feet and then went to bed. On the first of April I felt like a new man. The itching was almost gone. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and during that day the itching completely left me. Frank Gridley, 325 East 43rd Street, New York City, Apr. 27, 1909." Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world; Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props, Boston, Mass.

One of the Best Rest Cures.

Is a good story.

To many women it is as good as a trip away from home.

When you are tired out and your nerves are on edge, try going off by yourself and losing yourself in some good story. You will, in nine cases out of ten, come back rested and invigorated.

One woman who has passed serenely through many years of hard work and worry that go with the managing of a house and bringing up of a large family of children, said that she considered it the duty of every busy housekeeper to read a certain amount of "trash," light fiction, for the rest and change to the mind that it would give.

Try it, you who lead a strenuous life, and who sometimes grow exceedingly weary of the same.

What About Him?

The talk had gone back and fro, and the youthful socialist had been announcing that no man ought to get his living by cheating, and we all listened to him, and agreed that it was dreadful when men and women did not tell the truth, but tried to make their living by deceiving people. Millionaires, landowners, financiers, we sacrificed all of them who cheat the public. "No one should make a living by deception," said the young man. Then a quiet voice from a woman came from the corner of the sofa, "What about the conjurer?"—London Chronicle.

To the Voters of Hancock County:

I am a candidate for Sheriff of Hancock County on the democratic ticket and respectfully solicit your support at the polls November 8th It will be impossible for me to see all of you personally, so I take this means of asking a fair consideration at your hands. I have been a taxpayer in this county for 26 years and live on Sec 6 in Avery township. My occupation has always been a good, honest farmer and as such I solicit your support.

Yours very respectfully,
11-4* WM. LAU.

Croup is most prevalent during the dry cold weather of the early winter months. Parents of young children should be prepared for it. All that is needed is a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many mothers are never without it in their homes and it has never disappointed them. Sold by all dealers.

To the Republican Voters of the 10th District of Iowa:

It will be the duty of the legislature this winter to elect a successor to Senator Dolliver. His successor must be a Republican. Every Republican candidate for the legislature in Iowa must be elected without fail. The big 10th District must do its duty. Every single Republican in this District has his duty to perform at the polls.

A good crop or thriving business deserves the protection afforded by your ballot cast for the Administration under which our prosperity exists. We once burned corn as fuel, business was at a standstill and a day's labor was worth $1.25 if you could get work at all. That was not under a Republican administration.

In the coming election personal considerations must give way to principle. Iowa cannot take a backward step in State and National affairs. The record of Iowa's delegation in Washington must be endorsed. The voter simply must vote and vote for the Republican legislators and for the ticket as a whole.

The representation of your precinct in your county conventions depends on the number of votes cast for the ticket in your precinct on Nov. 8th. A large vote in the precinct gives it a large representation in the County Convention. A large vote in the precinct gives the County a large representation in District and State Conventions. A large vote in the precinct will give the State a large representation in national affairs in 1912, a presidential year. Iowa's prestige and power in the nation rests with every single voter in every precinct. The prosperity, the power, the safety, of our nation depends upon the patriotism and fidelity of the individual.

The Congressional Committee respectfully, but insistently urges and requests the Republicans of this District to vote and VOTE RIGHT on November 8th.

Republican Congressional Committee

J. P. MULLEN, Sec'y

To the Voters of the County:

It would be wrong if the voters of the county would take a person away from a position where she makes people better. Therefore cast your vote for Chas. W. Stiehl, the democratic candidate for Recorder. He is running on merits, qualifications and fitness and if elected will hire his own deputy out of his salary. if a deputy is needed. I hope that every friend and neighbor will cast his vote for me Nov. 8, 1910.

DIVORCE IS SOUGHT

By Jennie Brand, Former Wife of Thomas Carraher

CARRAHER KILLED BY STEPSON

Mrs. Brand Alleges that Man Whom She Married Shortly After Her Former Husband's Death Is An Habitual Drunkard.

Des Moines, Oct. 29.—Jennie Brand, former wife of Thomas Carrraher of New Virginia, who is supposed to have been killed by Harry Hutchins, his stepson and a son of Mrs. Brand, filed a petition in the district court through her attorney, in which she asks for a divorce from R. G. Brand, the man she married a short time after her former husband's death.

In her petition Mrs. Brand alleges that her husband is an habitual drunkard. She states that between Jan. 20 and May 20 of this year that Brand was intoxicated at least three times a week. She states that he has been arrested on the charge and that when intoxicated he is quarrelsome. She states that on several occasions he has threatened to take her life.

In addition to the charge of intoxication, Mrs. Brand states that her husband is guilty of cruelty. She also says that he is guilty of illicit association with bad women and that he has spent a greater part of the money he has earned since they have been married in riotous living and upon lewd women.

One of the most interesting stories of crime in the history of the state is woven about the family. Thomas Carraher was found dead on his farm a short way from Des Moines with bullet holes in his body and horrible bruises in his head.

Harry Hutchins, son of a former husband of Mrs. Brand, confessed that he had killed the man and that he had done it because his stepfather had been cruel to him. The boy was tried for the crime at Indianola and was asquitted on the charge.

At the time of the homicide and the trial, Brand was working on the Carraher farm. Shortly after Carraher's death, Mrs. Carraher married Brand. They were married July 9, 1909, and have been living in Valley Junction a greater part of that time.

A daughter was born to Mrs. Brand on Aug. 2 of this year, and in her petition for divorce she asks that she be given custody of it.

Desperado's Wife Asks Divorce.

Mrs. Anna Morris, wife of Sherman Morris, better known as Frank Shercliffe, brought action in the district court to secure a divorce from her husband, who is serving a term of twenty years in the penitentiary at Canon City, Colo., on a charge of murder. Shercliffe is known in the world of crime as one of the most daring criminals alive. Stories of his deeds read like books and the records of his many escapes from officers of the law sound nothing short of miraculous. In her petition for divorce, Mrs. Morris makes no other plea than the fact that her husband has been convicted of a felony. In addition to the plea for divorce she asks the custody of two minor children.

"Soil Special" Ends Its Trip.

The soils special which has been touring southern Iowa in the cause of maintaining the fertility of the soil, completed a two weeks' tour when it pulled into the C. B. & Q. station practically on schedule time. The trip, according to all the Ames experts aboard, has been great, and they feel that the advice which has been given the Iowa farmers during the two weeks of the trip will bear fruit. Professor Holden has declared that $40,000,000 would be saved by the state of Iowa each year if the boys and girls of the schools knew about the corn worm. The prevention, according to the professor is not to plant corn more than two years in succession in the same field. This is one of the messages which has been borne by the soil experts to the farmers of Iowa.

Big Crowds at Pure Food Show.

Five thousand people visited the Coliseum Saturday, to attend the pure food show. All previous records of the grocers' association's shows were broken by the vast crowds that thronged the spacious aisles in the big exhibition building. The number of paid admissions will aggregate about half of that amount, as thousands of free tickets had been given by grocers to their customers.

Nathaniel turned away from the smiling eyes with a shrug.

"Why?"

"To tell our women that it helps to save their souls to wear short skirts and let their hair hang down. For every soul of a woman that it saves it sends two men on the road to hell!"

So intense was the old man's displeasure and so ludicrous the twisting contortions of his face that Nathaniel could hardly restrain himself from bursting into a roar of laughter. Obadiah perceived his inclination and with an angry bob of his head led the way through to the inner edge of the waiting circle of men. Within this circle, in a small open space, was a short post with straps attached to an arm nailed across it, and leaning upon this post in an attitude of one who possesses a most distinguished office was a young man with a three-thonged whip in his hand. An ominous silence pervaded the circle.

"That is MacDougall with the lash—official whipper and caretaker of the slave hounds," explained Obadiah in a whisper.

Nathaniel gave a start of horror.

"Slave hounds!" he breathed.

The councilor grinned and twisted his hands in enjoyment of his companion's surprise.

"We have the finest pack of bloodhounds north of Louisiana," he continued, so low that only Nathaniel could hear. "See! Isn't the earth worn smooth and hard about that post?"

Nathaniel looked and his blood grew hot.

"I have seen such things in the south," he said. "But not—for white men!"

The councilor caught him by the arm.

"They are coming!"

In the direction of the jail the crowd was separating. Men crushed back on each side, forming a narrow aisle, even the whispering of the women ceased. A moment later three men appeared in the opening between the spectators. One of these, who walked between the other two, was stripped to the waist. About each of his naked wrists was tied a leather thong and these thongs were held by the man's guards. The prisoner's face was livid; his hands were red with blood that dripped from his lacerated wrists; his eyes glared malignantly and his heaving chest showed that he had not been brought from the log prison without a struggle.

"Ah, it's Wittle first!" breathed the councilor. "It's he who said his wife should not wear short skirts."

At the edge of the circle the prisoner hesitated and the muscles in his arms and chest grew rigid. Those of the crowd nearest to him drew back. Then a sudden change swept over the man's features and he walked quickly to the stake and kneeled before it. The thongs about his wrist were tied to the straps of the cross-piece and the whipper took his position. As the first lash fell, a cry burst from the lips of the victim. When the whip descended again he was silent. A curious sensation of sickness crept over Nathaniel as he saw the red gashes thicken on the white flesh. Five times—six times—seven times the whip rose and fell and he could see the blood starting. In horror he turned his eyes away. Behind him a man grinned at the whiteness of his face and the involuntary trembling of his lips. Again and again he heard the lash fall upon the naked back. From near him there came the sobbing moan of a woman. A subdued movement, a sound as of murmuring wordless voices swept through the throng. A steady glitter filled the eyes of the man who had laughed at him—and he turned again to the stake. The man's back was dripping with blood. Great red seams lay upon his shoulders and a single lash had cut his bowed neck. Another stroke, more fierce than the others, and MacDougall turned away from the figure at the post, breathing hard. The guards unfastened the victim's wrist-throngs and the man staggered to his feet. As he swayed down through the path that opened for him his crimson back shone in the sun.

"Great God!" gasped Nathaniel.

He turned to Obadiah and was startled by the appearance of the old man. The councilor's face was ghastly. His mouth twitched and his body trembled. Nathaniel took his arm sympathetically.

"Hadn't we better go, dad?" he whispered.

"No—no—no—not yet, Nat. It's—it's Neil now and I must see how the boy—stands it!"

It was but a short time before the guards returned. This time their prisoner walked free and erect. The thongs dangled from his wrists and he was a pace ahead of the two men who accompanied him. He was a young man. Nathaniel judged his age at twenty-five. He was a striking contrast to the man who had suffered first at the post. His face instead of betraying the former's pallor was flushed with excitement; his head was held high; not a sign of fear or hesitation shone in his eyes. As he glanced quickly around the circle of faces the flush grew deeper in his cheeks. He nodded and smiled at MacDougall and in that nod and smile there was a meaning that sent a shiver to the whipmaster's heart. Then his eyes fell upon Obadiah and Nathaniel. He saw the councilor's hand resting upon the young captain's arm and a flash of understanding passed over his face. For an instant the eyes of the two young men met. The man at the post took half a step forward. His lips moved as if he was on the point of speaking, the defiant smile went out of his face, the flush faded in his cheeks. Then he turned quickly and held out his hands to the guards.

As the young man kneeled before the post Nathaniel heard a smothered sob at his side which he knew came from Obadiah.

"Come, dad," he said softly. "I can't stand this. Let's get away!"

He shoved the councilor back. The lash whistled through the air behind him. As it fell there came a piercing cry. It was a woman's voice, and with a snarl like that of a tortured animal the old man struck down Nathaniel's arm and clawed his way back to the edge of the line. On the opposite side there was a surging in the crowd and as MacDougall raised his whip a woman burst through.

"My God!" cried Nathaniel, "it's—"

He left the rest of the words unspoken. His veins leaped with fire. A single sweep of his powerful arms and he had forced himself through the innermost line of spectators. Within a dozen feet of him stood Strang's wife, her beautiful hair disheveled, her face deadly white, her bosom heaving as if she had been running. In a moment her eyes had taken in the situation—the man at the stake, the upraised lash—and Nathaniel. With a sobbing, breathless cry, she flung herself in front of MacDougall and threw her arms around the kneeling man, her hair covering him in a glistening veil. For an instant her eyes were raised to Nathaniel and he saw in them that same agonized appeal that had called to him through the king's window. The striking muscles of his arms tightened like steel. One of the guards sprang forward and caught the girl roughly by the arm and attempted to drag her away. In his excitement he pulled her head back and her hair trailed in the dirt. The sight was maddening. From Nathaniel's throat there came a fierce cry and in a single leap he had cleared the distance to the guard and had driven his fist against the officer's head with the sickening force of a sledge hammer. The man fell without a groan. In another flash he had drawn his knife and severed the thongs that held the man at the stake. For a moment his face was very near the girl's and he saw her lips form the glad cry which he did not wait to hear.

He turned like an enraged beast toward the circle of dumbfounded spectators and launched himself at the second guard. From behind him there sounded a shout and he caught the gleam of naked shoulders as the man who had been at the stake rushed to his side. Together they tore through the narrow rim of the crowd, striking at the faces which appeared before them, their terrific blows driving men right and left.

"This way, Neil!" shouted Nathaniel. "This way—to the ship!"

They raced up the slope that led from the town to the forest. Even the king's officer, palsied by the suddenness of the attack, had not followed. From a screened window in the king's building two men had witnessed the exciting scene near the jail. One of these men was Strang. The other was Arbor Croche. At another window a few feet away, hidden from their eyes by a high desk and masses of papers and books, Winnsome Croche was crumpled up on the floor hardly daring to breathe through fear of betraying her presence. From these windows they had seen the girl run from behind the jail; they had watched her struggle through the line of spectators, saw Nathaniel leap forward—saw the quick blow, the gleaming knife, and the escape. So suddenly had it all occurred that not a sound escaped the two astonished men. But as Nathaniel and Neil burst through the crowd and sped toward the forest Strang's great voice boomed forth like the rumble of a gun.

"Arbor Croche, overtake those men—and kill them!"

With a wild curse the chief of sheriffs dashed down the stairway, and as she heard him go the terror of Winnsome's heart seemed to turn her blood cold. She knew what that command meant. She knew that her father would obey it. As the daughter of the chief of sheriffs more than one burning secret was hidden in her breast, more than one of those frightful daggers that had pricked at the soul of her mother until they had murdered her. And the chief of them all was this: That to Arbor Croche the words of Strang were the words of God and that if the prophet said kill, he would kill. For a full minute she crouched in her concealment, stunned by the horror that had so quickly taken the place of the joy with which she had witnessed the escape. She heard Strang leave the window, heard his heavy steps in the outer room, heard the door close, and knew that he, too, was gone. She sprang to her feet and ran to the window at which the two men had stood. The chief of sheriffs was already at the jail. The crowd had begun to disperse. Men were swarming like ants up the long slope reaching to the forest. Three or four of the leaders were running and she knew that they were hot in pursuit of the fugitives. Others were following more slowly and among these she saw that there were women. As she looked there came a sound from the stair. She recognized the step. She recognized the voice that called her name a moment later and with a despairing cry she turned with outstretched arms to greet the girl for whom Nathaniel had interrupted the king's whipping

St. Kilda.

Macleod of Macleod intends to sell the island of St. Kilda, according to the London Daily Mail. The lonely island lies out in the Atlantic about 80 miles west of the Lewes. It has under a hundred inhabitants, whose ways are somewhat primitive. A steamer always goes in time for the bird nesting, and during the summer months another steamer sails on special dates. The cliffs, which beat back the whole force of the Atlantic, are of stupendous height. One of them, Conachar, is about 1,300 feet high and is cut down almost perpendicularly to the water's edge. Wild fowling is the staple industry, and a party of islanders have killed as many as 1,200 solan geese in a night. The air of St. Kilda has been described as full of feathered animals; the sea is covered with them, the houses are ornamented by them, the ground is speckled by them, like a flowery meadow in May, the women look like feathered Mercuries, for their shoes are made of gannet's skin; everything smells of feathers."

Queer.

BABY'S TENDER SKIN

Chafed, Sore and Bleeding Quickly Cured

Mrs. J. F. Deal, Kansas City, Kans., writes:

"I cannot speak too highly of Resinol. When our baby was four months old she was so fat that she chafed in the creases of her legs and body. She was so sore and inflamed that she bled, and was fretting and crying almost constantly. Resinol Ointment was recommended to us. We had tried everything that could be thought of without success, but Resinol cured her in a very short time. We consider it the best household remedy for irritating skin troubles and would not be without it. We are also greatly pleased with Resinol Soap. It is so delightfully refreshing for the bath."

Resinol Ointment, Resinol Toilet Soap and Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick are high grade standard preparations, and their merit and reliability have won them a place in millions of homes. They are for sale at every drug store on the American Continent and by all leading chemists in other countries.

NATURE'S SIGNALS.

The first indication of kidney disorder is often backache. Then comes pain in the hips and sides, lameness, soreness and urinary troubles. These are the warnings—nature's signals for help. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used at the first sign.

Ira Clark, North Main St., Savanna, Ill., says: "I was confined to bed with kidney trouble and never expected to be up again. A doctor said I had acute inflammation of the bladder, but he could not help me. How grateful was I for the prompt relief Doan's Kidney Pills gave me! Continued use removed every sign of kidney trouble."

Getting a Reputation.

There is a desk in the senate particularly convenient as a place from which to make speeches. It is next to the aisle and almost in the center of the chamber, and affords an opportunity for the speaker to make everybody hear.

At least a dozen senators, according to the Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Star, have borrowed this desk when they had special utterances to deliver to the senate. This led, not long ago, to a mild protest from its legitimate occupant.

"I am perfectly willing to give up my desk," said he, "but I am afraid people will think that the same man is talking all the time. I don't want to get the reputation of constantly filling the senate with words."—Youth's Companion.

G O. P. Gets Bumped Good and Plenty at Tuesday's Election

DEMOCRATS CARRY NEW YORK

Also Massachusetts and Connecticut.—Control Lower House.

Election day has come and gone, and the democrats are the victors all along the line. They have elected governor in New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut, and probably Iowa. They will have a majority of about 30 in the lower house

At this time it is impossible to tell just how things are stacking up in Iowa but it seems almost certain that Porter, democrat, has been elected governor.

In Hancock county, Carroll gets 1221 and Porter 681. With one township omitted, Wm. Lau has 546 votes for sheriff and John Suurballe 1254; Chas. Stiehl has 523 votes for recorder to Miss Callison's 1263.

IN ELL TOWNSHIP

The following township candidates were elected:

For Justices of the Peace—Frank Gruetzmacher and Jos. E. Johnson.

For Constables—Chas. Yahnke and Theo. Henschen

For Trustees—Herman Stroemer, Wm. Becker and Fred Greimann.

For Clerk—Peter Josten

On Governor, the Ell township vote was:—Carroll 77, Porter 66. On Sheriff—Wm. Lau 86, John Suurballe 76. On Recorder, Stiehl 70, Callison 83. The amendment lost in the township by a vote of 75 to 56.

SUPERVISOR

In the third supervisor district Martin Bachman was elected by a majority of 43. The vote follows:

	Lau. D	Bachman, R
Ell township	84	80
Avery	35	77
Twin Lake	36	41

ELECTION NOTES

Fred Stork, democrat, is elected supervisor in the second district over John Bush, republican.

In Cerro Gordo county, Sheriff Holdren is re elected. He received a plurality of the votes cast at the primary election but did not receive the necessary per cent to nominate. At the county convention, Clark was nominated, so Holdren ran independent and won out.

"Holler" democrats, while the hollering is good.

For once, Roosevelt has "absolutely nothing to say."

Harmon, democrat, is elected governor of Ohio, Taft's home state, by a majority of 75,000.

IOWA THE RICHEST

So Declares Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis in Des Moines Address

EMINENT DIVINE BORN IN IOWA

The Farmers Are Richest People in the World, He Says—Cannot Settle Great Problems at Washington Alone.

Des Moines, Nov. 5.—"Young man, don't leave your state, thinking there is a better country in the east or west. God Almighty smiled when he made New York and Seattle, but he laughed outright with his blessing when he made the state of Iowa."

Newell Dwight Hillis, born at Magnolia, Iowa, delivered this message to the people of the state at the Drake auditorium in his lecture on "The America of Today and Tomorrow."

Dr. Hillis, pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, reiterated Gladstone's proprecy that the keel of the country, northern Missouri, Iowa, and southern Minnesota, in the coming years would have a larger clustering group of great manufacturing cities than any other point in the world.

"The day is coming," he said, "when the banking centers of the world, now situated in London, by the swing of the pendulum, will cross to America, keeping as close as possible to the financial investments.

"The central part of the United States will be the richest part of the country. Iowa land will soon be worth $200 to $500 an acre. It is the richest land in the world. Six inches of soil in New York cannot compete with the three feet of soil here in Iowa. In twenty-five years more the center of population will be moving west to Des Moines.

"I shall always be proud," said Dr. Hillis, "that Senator Cummins presented the Iowa idea and insisted upon a reduction of the protective tariff. Now the whole republican party is for this reduction.

"The farmers are the richest people in the United States and are going to become richer. At the present time they own 65 per cent of the automobiles.

"We are going to settle the railroad question because the farmers will have so much money that they will own all the railroad stocks.

"We cannot settle the railroad question by legislation at Washington. We cannot change a natural law by votes. What we want is 10,000,000 immigrants to come into the United States by way of New Orleans to dig the irrigation ditches of the west. By the New Orleans route, because the east takes all those coming by the New York way. With a town every eight or ten miles, a long haul of a thousand miles through which country the company gets no revenue would be done away with. The shipper then would not have the cost of that long haul added to his rates.

"This country is safe if every American whose fathers came to this country 200 years ago would fall dead. The public school is the national stomach for the digestion of foreigners.

"If every republican, democrat and natural born American would die tonight the foreigners in this country would see to it that the liberties were preserved and kept intact."

Officer Sued for Shooting Horse.

Justice John T. Conroy has rendered a judgment of $50 for the plaintiff in a suit brought by Frank Hiatt against J. O. Eckles, former humane officers, and J. H. Mingle, for the alleged killing of a horse belonging to Hiatt by the defendants while Eckles was in office. This is the first case to come since the recent ruling of Judge Hugh Brennan that under the statutes an officer has no right to shoot a horse until due notice has been posted. The original amount asked for was $99.

New Grace Trial Denied.

Judge Brennan of the law division of the district court overruled a motion filed by attorneys for the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad in which they asked for a new trial of the suit brought against them by Mrs. Lessie Grace. Mrs. Grace was given judgment against the company in the sum of $11,000 for the death of her husband.

Wedded 50 Years; Wants Separation.

After a married life of more than fifty years, Nellie Vander Vate filed a petition in the district court in which she asks a decree of separate maintenance from her husband, Leendart Vander Vate. The two were married in Nuekirk, Netherlands, on Feb. 7, 1860, and have lived together since that time.

SHRINERS TO HOLD MEETING.

Will Hold Largest Reunion in History of Des Moines, Nov. 25.

Des Moines, Nov. 5.—Three thousand members of the Mystic Shrine, who have plodded over the hot sands from every section of the state, will swarm into Des Moines on Friday Nov. 25, to attend the largest reunion of Shriners ever held in Iowa.

Plans for the entertainment of this large number from the famous old organization are steadily going forward by local members and the visitors will be shown the time of their lives in Iowa's metropolis. The festivities will last one day, but they will begin early in the day and last until late into the night.

Never before in the history of the organization has such a large state reunion been planned in Iowa, and among the city's guests will be all the prominent men of the order.

The elaborate entertainment arrangement is in the hands of John C. Petty, illustrious potentate of Zaga-zig temple, corner Ninth and Pleasant streets, and members of his staff. The local men are making every effort to provide a royal welcome for the guests. Among the prominent officials of the Shriners who will be present will be E. Olin Soule illustrious potentate of ElKahir temple at Cedar Rapids; I. L. Sears, illustrious potentate of Kaaba temple at Davenport; F. S. Lamar, illustrious potentate of Abu Bekr temple at Sioux City. All the illustrious potentates will be accompanied by their staffs.

The feature of the day will be a big paradet through the streets of the city, in which all the visiting members of the Mystic Shrine and those of the local body will participate. This will be a gorgeous pageant. The parade of the day will be held in the afternoon, followed by a business session. The evening will be devoted to the ceremonials. A large number of drill teams from different parts of the state will be present and give some of their work.

The program is not entirely complete as yet, but an effort is being made by the Shriners in charge to have several prominent speakers here, from outside the Shriners' ranks.

The present meeting is the one at which the late Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver expected to be present as a candidate to be initiated into the mysteries of the order.

Judge Advocates Changes.

In a speech made before the men of the Unitarian church at the Grant club Judge Fred T. Van Liew outlined radical changes in the work of the police magistrate and police court which must ensue before the social evil question could be handled properly.

Provisions by the legislature for the appointments of a vice commissioner of public safety, a parole system for police court, probation officers for police court, education of the juvenile offenders, the publicity of operations of middlemen, imprisonment instead of the present system of fines and the identification and incarceration of old offenders, were the recommendations made by the judge.

Governor Names Delegates.

Governor Carroll has named the following list of delegates to the Trans-Mississippi Comercial Congress, San Antonio, Texas, November 22-25, 1910: Ira B. Thomas, Des Moines; Hon. J. H. Allen, Pocahontas; Hon. N. Balkema, Sioux Center; Hon. L. F. Francis, Spirit Lake; Hon. F. F. Faville, Storm Lake; John R. Welch, Mapleton; C. H. Huntington, Onawa; W. F. Ray Allison; James R. Guthrie, Dubuque; E. P. Heizer, Cherokee; W. F. Parrott, Waterloo; H. G. Larimer, Charlton; W. H. Albrecht, Tama; M. McFarlin, Des Moines; Hon. Robert Hunter, Sioux City.

Iowa Corn Crop Will Be Boomer.

Iowa corn crop this year will total 327,000,000 bushels, according to the forecast of Bartlett, Frazier & Co., whose October bulletin has just been issued.

The figures show Illinois leading in corn with a yield of 392,533,003 bushels. Iowa is second. The average yield in Iowa is 34.6 bushels per acre as against 37 in Illinois.

The grain company estimates the total corn yield this season at 3,057,000,000 bushels from a total of 114,083,000 acres.

Sues Railroad for $25,000.

Claiming that the St. Paul & Des Moines railroad was responsible for the death of J. H. Brey, Albert Steinhauser, through his attorney, John L. Gillespie, filed in the district court a suit asking for $25,000 damages. Brey was employed as a brakeman for the company, and while riding on a caboose on January 7 of this year, an engine ran head on into the train, killing him almost instantly. The accident occurred at East Twentieh street and Grand avenue.

IOWA'S POPULATION

According to Federal Census Report Is 2,224,771

DECREASE OF 7,082 IN 10 YEARS

Loss on Farms, as Counties Containing the Larger Cities of the State All Show Gain Over Census of Ten Years Ago.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The population of the state of Iowa is 2,224,771, according to the enumeration in the thirteenth census. This is a decrease of 7,082, or 0.3 per cent over 2,231,853 in 1900. The increase from 1890 to 1900 was 319,572, or 16.76 per cent.

The population of the counties containing the principal cities are:

Counties.	1910.	1900.
Black Hawk	44,865	32,399
Clinton	45,394	43,832
Des Moines	36,145	35,989

Pottawattamie	55,832	54.336
Scott	60,000	51,558
Woodbury	67,616	54,610

The falling off in population in Iowa was general throughout the state except in the larger cities and towns. In most of these there was a growth.

Unless the present basis of apportionment is retained it is probable that Iowa will lose one of her eleven members of congress.

The population by counties compared with the census of 1900 follow:

An Effort to Oblige.

"Mr. Lobrow does his best to be agreeable," said the sympathetic young woman. "It's too bad that he has so little tact."

"I understand that Miss Coddleyap refuses to speak to him. He sent her a box of candy and she fed it all to her pet terrier. So he tried to be still more kind and thoughtful and sent her a box of dog biscuit."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

A Realist on Hope.

William Dean Howells, discussing realism at one of his Sunday afternoons in New York, let fall a neat epigram on hope.

"Hope," said the famous novelist, "is not, really, an angel in a diaphanous robe of white, but only the wisp of hay held before a donkey's nose to make him go."

STOPPED SHORT
Taking Tonics, and Built Up on Right Food.

The mistake is frequently made of ying to build up a worn-out nervous stem on so-called tonics—drugs. New material from which to rebuild sted nerve cells is what should be pplied, and this can be obtained ly from proper food.

"Two years ago I found myself on e verge of a complete nervous col- pse, due to overwork and study, and illness in the family," writes a Wis- nsin young mother.

"My friends became alarmed be- use I grew pale and thin and could ot sleep nights. I took various tonics escribed by physicians, but their ffects were off shortly after I topped taking them. My food did ot seem to nourish me and I gained o flesh nor blood.

"Reading of Grape-Nuts, I de- rmined to stop the tonics and see hat a change of diet would do. I te Grape-Nuts four times a day, ith cream and drank milk also, went o bed early after eating a dish of rape-Nuts.

"In about two weeks I was sleeping oundly. In a short time gained 20 ounds in weight and felt like a ifferent woman. My little daughter hom I was obliged to keep out of chool last spring on account of hronic catarrh has changed from a hin, pale, nervous child to a rosy, ealthy girl and has gone back to chool this fall.

"Grape-Nuts and fresh air were the nly agents used to accomplish the appy results."

TO HONOR DOLLIVER

Fort Dodge Citizens Will Erect Statue to Late Senator

100 ACRES FOR DOLLIVER PARK

Everybody In That City Interested in Project, But Whole State Will Be Given a Chance to Contribute.

Fort Dodge, Ia., Nov. 5.—As they are recovering somewhat from the gloom which the death of the late Senator Dolliver has cast over the city, Fort Dodge citizens have commenced plans to erect a suitable memorial to him. All classes of citizens, rich and poor alike, are interested in the project. Even the school children will contribute their mite.

Among the largest individual offers will be that of A. R. Loomis and E. G. Larson, two of the wealthiest men of this city, who contemplate donating nearly a hundred acres of fine park grounds along the banks of the Des Moines river near the city for a park, to be called "Dolliver Park." The land is heavily wooded and with fine springs has long been the recreation grounds of the city.

O. M. Oleson, the donor of Oleson park and William Mulroney, a prominent manufacturer, are also in full accord with the park plan and it is expected will give it their support.

George S. Ringland, a neighbor of Dolliver's and a lifelong admirer of the deceased, declares he will contribute substantially for a monument of bronze, if the work is to be done by some noted artist, so as to make the memorial a fitting one. He is emphatic in that the people of Fort Dodge should not spare cost.

That admirers of Dolliver outside of Fort Dodge should also take some part in the erection of a memorial is the common opinion here. His friends say statewide grief indicates the hold he had on the people. That they should be allowed to take some part would show appreciation of his efforts in their behalf.

Notable Family Reunion.

Glenwood.—Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Pearce of Lyons township have been enjoying a family reunion incident to the celebration of their fifty-first wedding anniversary. They were married at Richmond, Washington county, Ia., Oct. 20, 1859. They have five children living, eighteen grandchildren and three great-grand-children. What is exceptional about the anniversary is the presence of Mrs. Pearces' mother, Mrs. Rebecca Adams aged 88. Mrs. Adams has seven children living, thirty-nine great-grandchildren, forty-four great-great-grandchildren, and three great-great-great-grand-children, and thirty-four of the family are married, making a total of 126 in the family.

To Operate Onion Farm.

Independence.—W. T. Hurd of Dubuque, who has purchased the Dr. Crayton farm, between Littleton and Jesup, this county, is planning to embark in the onion growing business on an unusually large scale next season. He has purchased several hundred dollar's worth of seed and will plant forty acres to that vegetable. Several men and boys will assist him in caring for and harvesting the crop. The planting of such a mammoth quantity of onions is unusual in this section, and the plan will be watched with interest.

Man Wants $20,000 for Wife's Death.

Fort Dodge.—What probably will result in one of the most hard fought cases on technical grounds here in years, was a suit filed by P. M. Dowd against the Fort Dodge, Des Moines & Southern for $20,000 damages for the death of his wife in a street car accident last August. Dowd also at the same time filed suit for $5,000 for injuries sustained by his daughter.

Probably Fatally Hurt.

Mason City.—Thrown sixteen feet into the air and to the side of the roadway, W. C. Smith, an aged farmer living near Burchinal, was probably fatally injured when his team ran away after taking fright at an auto. Several ribs of the aged victim were broken, two of which punctured a lung, and also the side of the body. Mr. Smith is 72 years old.

Oelwein Light Plant Sold.

Oelwein.—The Oelwein Light, Heat & Power company, electric lighting company, has been sold to R. W. Saunders and associates of Chicago. The present management propose to at once construct a fire-proof building for the plant and also install ice-making machinery.

Dolliver's Last Address.

Webster City.—A most peculiar coincidence in the life of the late Senator Dolliver is that his political career began and ended in Hamilton county—the county in which Webster City is located. The republican district convention which nominated him for his first term in the house of representatives was held in Webster City. This began the real political career of J. P. Dolliver, then a young Fort Dodge attorney. The very last public address delivered by Senator Dolliver—the real close of his political career—was delivered Sept. 20, in Jewell, located in Hamilton county.

It was twenty-two years ago, back in 1888, that J. P. Dolliver was given his first nomination for congress from the Tenth Iowa district. The convention that year was held in the court house in Webster City. Two years prior Dolliver had been a candidate for the republican nomination, but had been beaten by Mayor Holmes of Boone.

Land Brings $172 an Acre.

Nevada.—One of the recent real estate transactions in the immediate neighborhood of Nevada was the sale of a 110 acre farm just east of the city by Grant Ulum to Charles C. Montgomery, the price paid being $19,000, or $172 per acre. Mr. Ulum bought the place a year ago by paying $15,000 for it. No improvements have been made on the farm during the year and Mr. Ulum has raised an excellent crop on it this season. Mr. Montgomery, who purchased a fifty acre farm just south of his present purchase last year of Mr. Ulum at $200 per acre, is said to have purchased the last place as a matter of speculation.

But little land is changing hands in Story county at less than $150 this season, and not a few transactions have been at the $200 mark. The large amount of drainage work done in the county during the last four or five years has been a great factor in the tendency to raise land values.

Mrs. Carroll Heads Mothers Congress

Mrs. B. F. Carroll, wife of the governor of Iowa, was elected president of the Iowa Congress of Mothers.

Mrs. Carroll came into prominence before the mothers of the state a year ago by the advocacy of the teaching of sexology in the public schools. Her unanimous election to the highest office within the gift of the Iowa congress practically puts the indorsement of the organization upon her sex educational principles.

Associating with Mrs. Carroll will be the following officers: First vice president, Mrs. W. L. Hirst, Cedar Falls; second vice president, Mrs. H. Bean, Marengo; third vice president, Mrs. A. L. Haas, Des Moines; extension secretary, Mrs. F. S. Watts, Audubon; recording secretary, Mrs. Charles Brenton, Dallas Center; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. T. Stone, Sidney; treasurer, Mrs. S. R. Mioes, Mason City; auditor, Mrs. C. Holgrin, Humboldt.

Simpson Compiles Iowa Crop Report.

Des Moines. — Secretary John C. Simpson of the state department of agriculture has completed the compilation of agricultural and other statistics for the Year Book, showing the sources of Iowa wealth in 1909. This shows the total value of products for 1909, including grain, grass, garden stuff, fruit, dairy products, wool and eggs to have been $466,170,849. The total value of the live stock in Iowa, Jan. 1 last, was $365,161,227. The total value of farm lands was found to be $2,266,601,700 and the average value per farm was $16,663. These statistics are from the reports of Iowa assessors.

To Make War on "Suit Clubs."

Dubuque.—W. R. Wry, state secretary of the Iowa Retail Clothiers' association, has been spending several days in Dubuque. No definite action has as yet been taken, but it is given out that he is gathering data to be used against the widespread and popular practice embodied in the operation of "suit clubs." The secretary, it is understood, declares these clubs to be another form of the raffle which the state law prohibits.

Fined for Illegal Trapping.

Nevada.—A deputy game warden from Madrid made a trip through the Skunk bottoms down around Cambridge the other day, and discovered a man who was trapping out of season. The offender was pulled into court and assessed a fine of $50 and costs. There are a great many people down in that corner of the county who make a business of trapping and the river banks will be watched this season.

Iowan Finds His Mother.

Marshalltown.—After having for years mourned his mother as dead, George M. Beekman, a telegraph operator for the Iowa Central railway here, left for New York City to see Mrs. Thomas Beekman, his mother, whom he last saw twenty-five years ago.

The Perfection Oil Heater has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back, so the wick can be quickly cleaned. The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged and can be unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. ANOTHER WRECK AT DOWS

Advocate, Nov. 4th—Another bad freight wreck occurred in Dows Wednesday morning. A heavy freight was coming in from the west and the branch way freight from the north was coming down the hill at the same time. The engineer on the branch train did not see that the main line train was entering the siding at the north end switch and crashed into the side of the train. The branch engine and four cars went into the ditch.

A wrecking crew from Cedar Rapids was soon here and the work of clearing up the wreckage was commenced. By eight o'clock the track had been cleared up sufficiently to allow the passenger to cross and by afternoon the wreckage had all been removed.

BEN LAU MARRIED AT DENVER

(Communicated to the Times.)

Wednesday evening, November the second, the Grant Avenue M. E. Church of Denver, Colorado, was the scene of a brilliant and select wedding, although only the intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom were present, Miss Ella Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jackson of Belmond, Iowa, and Mr. Benjamin R. Lau, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Lau of Klemme, Iowa, being the contracting parties with the Rev. Dr. Auman officiating. Mrs. Roy H. Conklin acted as Miss Jackson's bridesmaid, with Mr. Roy H. Conklin as the groom's best man.

The wedding gown of pale messaline silk exquisitely became the bride. She carried a bridal boquet of roses. A portion of the boquet was given to the intimate friends of the bride and the remainder reserved by the bride to be worn with her going away gown. Following the ceremony the bridal party were guests at supper at the Bristol. Mr. and Mrs. Lau left for the wedding journey on a tour of the mountain resorts of Colorado, and after November seventh will be at home at 3233 Vallejo St., Denver.

There were many testimonials of regard received by the young couple.

The bride is the sixth daughter of the Jackson home of Belmond and has enjoyed the young ladyhood of marked popularity. The groom is a recent acquisition to Denver business circles holding an important position with the Commercial Circulating Bureau as chief bookkeeper and manager of collections, the Bureau being the largest real estate promotion firm in that city. Mr. Lau is a young man of good habits and the ability of making many influential friends. The bride was one of the leading students of the Belmond High School and one of the best liked in her social set there.

MAHANNAH ELECTED

Mason City Man Heads State Teachers' Association

WANT MORE NORMAL SCHOOLS

Teachers Bitterly Oppose Appropriations by Congress for Private Institutions at Closing Session of Big Convention.

Des Moines, Nov. 7.—Teachers of Iowa are unalterably opposed to the bills now before congress providing for a contribution from respective state school funds for the support of a private institution in the District of Columbia where agriculture and the mechanic arts are to be taught. Just before adjourning their convention Saturday the State Teachers' association passed resolutions in which they voiced their opposition to the plan. The Iowa Teachers' association is against any division of public school funds among private or sectarian schools.

The resolutions also recommend that provisions be made for medical inspection in the schools, for extending the privileges of high school training, so far as possible to the boys and girls of the rural districts and for more normal schools.

According to the report of the financial committee read Saturday afternoon the association has never been in better shape financially. Aside from the $1500 already in the treasury over $2000 was cleared from the present convention. It was a great convention in every way.

The officers elected are: President, Fred Mahannah, Mason City; first vice president, A. C. Fuller, Washington; second vice president, Miss Minnie Babcock, Humboldt; third vice president, G. W. Weber, Columbus Junction; members of the executive committee, A. E. Bennett, Fayette; members of educational council, W. S. Mitchell, Clinton; F. O. Norton, Des Moines.

MERGE TELEPHONE SYSTEMS

Preparations Covering Six Months of Labor for Many Men Consummated in Sixty Seconds.

Des Moines, Nov. 7.—Des Moines has but one telephone system. Mutual telephones are no more.

A force of men numbering into the hundreds engineered the last rites early Sunday morning of the Mutual telephone system, which passed out of existence at 12:08 a. m. Within a year after the death knell of the independent system was sounded and within six months after actual work on the largest telephone consolidation project ever attempted in the United States was commenced, the two large phone systems of Des Moines were combined into one service.

"Go ahead," laconically signalled F. W. Rulison, consolidation engineer, from the main exchange of the Iowa company on Seventh street to the old Mutual exchanges on Grand avenue and on the east side. Simultaneously the words were carried over the wires to the men in charge of the work at the three stations.

Within sixty seconds after the signal was given, the 14,000 telephones of the subscribers of the two systems were thrown into one service. It was done almost instantly and before the operators realized it, they were answering calls and giving numbers from the consolidated directory. A score of lines were put out of service for a few minutes, but the trouble was immediately cleared by expert telephone men standing ready for any emergency.

Although the consolidation was effected in a minute, the work incidental to the preparation for the combination of the two services represents months of labor and enormous expenditure.

The President's Proclamation.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—The vigorous growth and progress of the country as reflected by the records of population and harvests and the general conditions of international peace are things for which thanksgiving is especially due for the year 1910, according to the annual Thanksgiving day proclamation issued by President Taft.

A Farmer Disappeared.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Nov. 7.—The Missouri river in the vicinity of Hamburg is being dragged and dynamited in a search for the body of Charles Loveland, who disappeared from home and was last seen on the river bank where indications were that he had leaped into deep water. He was a prosperous farmer living with his widowed mother.

THOUGHT SHE HAD PRACTISED

Frenchman's Suspicions Really Something of a Compliment to the Men of America.

Claude Grahame White, the English aviator, praised, at a dinner in New York, the good fellowship of Americans.

"The American woman is regarded abroad as an angel," he said. "The man is admittedly a good fellow, but an angel he is far from being.

"You've heard of the Frenchman, perhaps, whose sweetheart spent the summer in America? After her return the poor Frenchman seemed quite blue.

"'What's the matter with you?' a friend asked.

"'I am worried,' the other muttered, 'about my fiancee. You see, since her return from America she kisses so much better than she used to.'"

AN INTOLERABLE ITCHING

"Just about two years ago, some form of humor appeared on my scalp. The beginning was a slight itching but it grew steadily worse until, when I combed my hair, the scalp became raw and the ends of the comb-teeth would be wet with blood. Most of the time there was an intolerable itching, in a painful, burning way, very much as a bad, raw burn, if deep, will itch and smart when first beginning to heal. Combing my hair was positive torture. My hair was long and tangled terribly because of the blood and scabs. This continued growing worse and over half my hair fell out. I was in despair, really afraid of becoming totally bald.

"Sometimes the pain was so great that, when partially awake, I would scratch the worst places so that my finger-tips would be bloody. I could not sleep well and, after being asleep a short time, that awful stinging pain—would commence and then I would wake up nearly wild with the torture. A neighbor said it must be salt rheum. Having used Cuticura Soap merely as a toilet soap before, I now decided to order a set of the Cuticura Remedies—Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills. I used them according to directions for perhaps six weeks, then left off, as the disease seemed to be eradicated, but toward spring, eighteen months ago, there was a slight return of the scalp humor. I commenced the Cuticura treatment at once, so had very little trouble. On my scalp I used about one half a cake of Cuticura Soap and half a box of Cuticura Ointment in all. The first time I took six or seven bottles of Cuticura Pills and the last time three bottles—neither an expensive or tedious treatment. Since then I have had no scalp trouble of any kind. Standing up, with my hair unbound, it comes to my knees and had it not been for Cuticura I should doubtless be wholly bald.

"This is a voluntary, unsolicited testimonial and I take pleasure in writing it, hoping my experience may help someone else. Miss Lillian Brown, R. F. D. 1, Liberty, Me., Oct. 29, 1909."

Mental Influence.

"How far is it to Gloomville?" we ask of the native who is leaning over the gate.

"Ten mile straight ahead," he answers.

"But we met a man a little way back and he said it was only two miles."

"Short, fat man, drivin' a flea-bitten sorrel hoss?"

"That's the man."

"Did you meet or pass him?"

"We passed him."

"Thought so. He's drivin' a balker I traded him, an' he didn't want his hoss to know how much furder it had to go."

Yet no sooner had he fought ...self clear of the mob than his bet...dgment leaped into the ascend... ...If danger had been lurking for ...before it was doubly threatening ...and he was sufficiently possessed ...e spirit of self preservation to ... at the speed with which he was ...ed to leave pursuit behind. A single glance over his shoulder assured him that the man whom he had saved from the prophet's wrath was close at his heels. His first impulse was to direct his flight toward Obadiah's cabin; his second to follow the path that led to his ship. At this hour some of his men would surely be awaiting him in a small boat and once aboard the Typhoon he could continue his campaign against the Mormon king with better chances of success than as a lone fugitive on the island. Besides, he knew what Casey would do at sundown.

At the top of the slope he stopped and waited for the other to come up to him.

"I've got a ship off there," he called, pointing inland. "Take a short cut for the point at the head of the island. There's a boat waiting for us!"

Neil came up panting. He was breathing so hard that for a moment he found it impossible to speak but in his eyes there was a look that told his unbounded gratitude. They were clear, fearless eyes, with the blue glint of steel in them and, as he held out his hands to Nathaniel, they were luminous with the joy of his deliverance.

"Thank you, Captain Plum!"

He spoke his companion's name with the assurance of one who had known it for a long time. "If they loose the dogs there will be no time for the ship," he added, with a suggestive hunch of his naked shoulders. "Follow me!"

There was no alarm in his voice and Nathanial caught the flashing gleam of white teeth as Neil smiled grimly back at him, running in the lead. From the man's eyes the master of the Typhoon had sized up his companion as a fighter. The smile—daring, confident, and yet signaling their danger—assured him that he was right, and he followed close behind without question. A dozen rods up the patch Neil turned into a dense thicket of briars and underbrush and for ten minues they plunged through the pathless jungle. Now and then Nathaniel saw the three red stripes of the whipper's lash upon the bare shoulders of the man ahead and to these every step seemed to add new wounds made by the thorns. As they came out upon an old roadway the captain stripped off his coat and Neil thrust himself into it as they ran.

Even in these first minutes of their flight Nathaniel was thrilled by another thought than that of the peril behind them. Whom had he saved? Who was this clear-eyed young fellow for whom the girl had so openly sacrificed herself at the whipping post, about whom she had thrown her arms and covered with the protection of her glorious hair? With his joy at having served her there was mingled a chilling doubt as these questions formed themselves in his mind. Obadiah's vague suggestions, the scene in the king's room, the night visits of the girl to the councilor's cabin—and last of all this incident at the jail flashed upon him now with another meaning, with a significance that slowly cooled the enthusiasm in his veins. He was sure that he was near the solution of the mysterious events in which he had become involved, and yet this knowledge brought with it something of apprehension, something which made him anticipate and yet dread the moment when the fugitive ahead would stop in his flight, and he might ask him those questions which would at least relieve him of his burden of doubt. They had traveled a mile through forest unbroken by path or road when Neil halted on the edge of a little stream that ran into a swamp. Pointing into the tangled fen with a confident smile he plunged to his waist in the water and waded slowly through the slough into the gloom of the densest alder. A few minutes later he turned in to the shore and the soft bog gave place to firm ground. Before Nathaniel had cleared the stream he saw his companion drop to his knees beside a fallen log and when he came up to him he was unwrapping a piece of canvas from about a gun. With a warning gesture he rose to his feet and for twenty seconds the men stood and listened. No sound came to them but the chirp of a startled squirrel and the barking of a dog in the direction of St. James.

"They haven't turned out the dogs yet," said Neil, holding a hand against his heaving chest. "If they do they can't reach us through that slough." He leaned his rifle against the log and again thrusting an arm into the place where it had been concealed drew forth a small box.

"Powder and ball—and grub!" he laughed. "You see I am a sort of revolutionist and have my hiding places. Tomorrow—I will be a martyr." He spoke as quietly as though his words but carried a careless jest.

"A martyr?" laughed Nathaniel, looking down into the smiling, sweating face.

"Yes, tomorrow I shall kill Strang."

There was no excitement in Neil's voice as he stood erect. The smile did not leave his lips. But in his eyes there shone that which neither words nor smiling lips revealed, a reckless, blazing fury hidden deep in them—so deep that Nathaniel stared to assure himself what it was. The other saw the doubt in his face.

"Tomorrow I shall kill Strang," he repeated. "I shall kill him with this gun from under the window of his house through which you saw Marion."

"Marion!" exclaimed Nathaniel. "Marion—" He leaned forward eagerly, questioning. "Tell me—"

"My sister, Captain Plum!"

It seemed to Nathaniel that every fiber in his body was stretched to the breaking point. He reached out, dazed by what he had heard and with both hands seized Neil's arm.

"Your sister—who came to you at the whipping post?"

"That was Marion."

"And—Strang's wife?"

"No!" cried Neil. "No—not his wife!" He drew back from Nathaniel's touch as if the question had stabbed him to the heart. The passion that had slumbered in his eyes burst into savage flame and his face became suddenly terrible to look upon. There was hatred there such as Nathaniel had never seen; a ferocious, pitiless hatred that sent a shuddering thrill through him as he stood before it. After a moment the clenched fist that had risen above Neil's head dropped to his side. Half apologetically he held out his hand to his companion.

"Captain Plum, we've got a lot to thank you for, Marion and I," he said, a tremble of the passing emotion in his voice. "Obadiah told Marion that help might come to us through you and Marion brought the word to me at the jail last night—after she had seen you at the window. The old councilor kept his word! You have saved her!"

"Saved her!" gasped Nathaniel. "From what? How?" A hundred questions seemed leaping from his heart to his lips.

"From Strang. Good God, don't you understand? I tell you that I am going to kill Strang!"

Neil stood as though appalled by his companion's incomprehension. "I am going to kill Strang, I tell you!" he cried again, the fire burning deeper through the sweat of his cheeks.

Nathaniel's bewilderment still shone in his face.

"She is not Strang's wife," he spoke softly, as if to himself. "And she is not—" His face flushed as he nearly spoke the words. "Obadiah lied!" He looked squarely into Neil's eyes. "No, I don't understand you. The councilor said that she—that Marion was Strang's wife. He told me nothing more than that, nothing of her trouble, nothing about you. Until this moment I have been completely mystified. Only her eyes led me to do—what I did at the jail."

Neil gazed at him in astonishment.

"Obadiah told—you—nothing?" he asked incredulously.

"Not a word about you or Marion except that Marion was the king's seventh wife. But he hinted at many things and kept me on the trail, always expecting, always watching, and yet every hour was one of mystery. I am in the darkest of it at this instant. What does it all mean? Why are you going to kill Strang? Why—"

Neil interrupted him with a cry so poignant in its wretchedness that the last question died upon his lips.

"I thought that the councilor had told you all," he said. "I thought you knew." The disappointment in his voice was almost despair. "Then—it was only accidentally—you helped us?"

"Only accidentally that I helped you—yes! But Marion—" Nathaniel crushed Neil's hand in both his own and his eyes betrayed more than he would have said. "I've got an armed ship and a dozen men out there and if I can help Marion by blowing up St. James—I'll do it!"

For a time only the tense breathing of the two broke the silence of their lips. They looked into each other's face, Nathaniel with all the eagerness of the passion with which Marion had stirred his soul, Neil half doubting, as if he were trying to find in this man's eyes the friendship which he had not questioned a few minutes before.

"Obadiah told you nothing?" he asked again, as if still unbelieving.

"Nothing."

"And you have not seen Marion—to talk with her?"

"No."

Nathaniel had dropped his companion's hand, and now Neil walked to the log and sat down with his face turned in the direction from which their pursuers must come if they entered the swamp.

Suddenly the memory of Obadiah's note shot into Nathaniel's head, the councilor's admonition, his allusion to a visitor. With this memory there recurred to him Obadiah's words at the temple, "If you had remained at the cabin, Nat, you would have known that I was your friend. She would have come to you, but now—it is impossible." For the first time the truth began to dawn upon him. He went and sat down beside Neil.

Damages for a Sale of Morphine.

An important decision with reference to the sale of morphine has recently been given by the Tenth Chambre Correctionnelle. A pharmaceutical chemist having sold morphine without a medical prescription to a student at Nancy, the latter gave it to one of his comrades, who as a result of taking it contracted the morphine habit. The father of the victim then brought an action for damages against the chemist, who in his defense said, in the first place, that he was responsible only for his own action, but not for the action of the student who had given the morphine to his comrade, and in the second place, that he had no direct connection with the injury sustained by the consumer of the morphine. The lower court upheld this view, but the higher tribunal ordered the chemist to pay 100 francs fine and 4,000 francs damages on the ground that a pharmaceutical chemist who sells a poisonous substance without a medical prescription knows that he is liable for whatever misuse may be made of it, either by the first recipient or by the next person who comes into possession of it.—Paris letter to the London Lancet.

Not Very Accurate.

Senator Root at Senator Depew's farewell dinner in his honor in Washington, said, anent his European tour.

"Well, I hope I'll gather over there more accurate information than that which Lady Salisbury's housekeeper used to give her American visitors.

"Lady Salisbury had a housekeeper who, in showing American and other visitors over Salisbury castle, would always pause before a painting of Catherine d'Medici, sister of Venus d'Medici and say:

"'This lovely painting is a portrait of Catherine d'Medici, sister of Venus d'Medici.'"

A Godsend.

An esteemed German who draws a well earned salary from the city of New York, says the Sun, was talking about a case of sudden death the other day. It was due to an accident. It was nobody's fault. It was a veritable bolt from a clear sky. All this had impressed the German deeply. "Vy," he said awesomely, "it vass a regular Godsend."

Art in the Kitchen.

After much meditation and experience, I have divined that it takes as much sense and refinement and talent to cook a dinner, wash and wipe a dish, make a bed and dust a room as goes to the writing of a novel or shining in high society.—Rose Terry Cooke.

De Forest, Wis.—"After an operation four years ago I had pains downward in both sides, backache, and a weakness. The doctor wanted me to have another operation. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am entirely cured of my troubles."—Mrs. AUGUSTE VESPERMANN, De Forest, Wisconsin.

Another Operation Avoided.

New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. LILY PEYROUX, 1111 Kerlerec St., New Orleans, La.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE.

"No, I don't think Reggy will ever learn to run his auto."

"Why not?"

"He's always trying to roll a cigarette and guide the machine at the same time."

Pride.

"Chicago has a lot of local pride, hasn't it?"

"Well," replied Mr. Lakemish; "it depends on whether you are talking about baseball or the grain business."

Can You Blame Him?

"Pa, what does 'skeptical' mean?"

"That describes a man's feelings when a woman tells her age."

"Undoubtedly it's a case of appendicitis!" said specialist No. 1, gravely.

"Undoubtedly!" assented specialist No. 2.

"But would he be able to stand an operation?" pondered No. 1.

"Ah, would he?" echoed No. 2.

They dug him in the ribs again, and he squealed.

"Ah," remarked No. 1, "I think we ought to let him get a bit stronger before we cut into him."

"Confound your palaver!" gasped the patient, starting up. "What do you take me for—a cheese?"

Cheap Excursion to California.

On Thursday, Dec. 8th, James Porter of the Porter Land Co., will take a trainload of people to the Early Fruit Lands of Kern County, in the San Joaquin Valley of California. This is a splendid chance for you to see the western wonderlands and to get a rich fruit farm that will produce from $500 to $1,000 an acre each year. Write us or come and see us and let us arrange for your trip to California, on one of our cheap excursions. If you cannot go just now, let us select a choice farm for you and hold it for three months for your inspection.

Think of it: no snow, no winters. The balmy delightful climate, the jovial thrifty people you will have for neighbors, the wealth the land will bring you—those are the things that once investigated will make you a California fruit farmer—a man of wealth and influence. Write for our new booklet "Early Fruit Lands" and full particulars regarding our cheap excursion of Dec. 8th, to land seekers. Porter Land Co., Marquette Bldg., Chicago, Illinois.

Cheerful Pessimist—Well, how's things these days?

Dolorous Optimist—All right: Lots of work, money coming in hand over fist! Can't complain a bit!

THANKSGIVING RECOLLECTIONS

By Gerard Chapman

When the winds of bleak November
Down the chimney moan and sigh,
Stirring into life each ember
Till the flames roar fierce and high
Then my thoughts revert to boyhood,
When Thanksgiving Day drew nigh.

In the flames I see the farmhouse,
And the woodland brown and sere
Where the sportsman's rifle echoed
As that day of days drew near.
Scenes which ever shall be cherished
In the burning logs appear.

I can see the deep old cellar
Where the apple bins, piled high,
Overshadowed heaps of pumpkins
Golden as the sunset sky,
And the casks of new fall cider
Stood along the wall close by.

As the old-time scenes are fading
While the fire slowly dies,
Visions of a groaning table
Are presented to my eyes,
And I almost scent the fragrance
Of the mince and pumpkin pies.

KEEPING THE FEAST

TRUE MEANING OF LESSON OF THANKSGIVING.

Should Be Time of Rejoicing for All, Those Who Have Abundance Sharing With Their Less Fortunate Brethren.

The sober joyfulness of the first New England Thanksgiving did not exhaust itself in a single day. Governor Bradford after the first scanty harvest made deliberate provision for three days' feasting and rejoicing, during which the infant colony entertained more than its own number of visiting Indians. It is true that these guests contributed venison for the feast, as they had earlier contributed corn for the use of the colony, but the heart of the feast was in the hospitality which made them welcome.

We call Thanksgiving day especially a home festival, and its associations are most delightful in family reunions and home pleasures. Yet the precedent of Plymouth hospitality has never been and never ought to be neglected. It is a time when those who are blessed with home joys take pleasure in sharing them with the homeless. Families enlarge themselves to include not only the scattered next of kin, but those also who are far from their own home circle. A touch of the blessed spirit of home joy and mutual helpfulness stretches beyond the limits of the family to include those for whom the day would otherwise be lonelier than others days for privation of home companionships.

The community was the host in that first Plymouth festival, yet the community divided into families As they kept the feast in the large family groups into which the necessity of house building and defense had up to this time divided them, did any of them think, we wonder, of the law of the passover established for other exiles and pilgrims so many centuries before: "And if the household be too little for the lamb, let him and his neighbor next unto his house take it according to the number of the souls"?

As a community we are today much further from absolute want and peril of starvation than the Pilgrims were when they began the custom of the yearly feast of thanksgiving Yet there are many of our people who, if they keep the feast, must keep it in the midst of poverty and peril of want. In the widst of greater want and peril the forefathers invited strangers to the feast, providing what they could. They were wholly free from that false pride, so common nowadays, which thinks most of appearances and is ashamed to offer hospitality unless it is possible, also, to make a show of wealth. Out of what they had the fathers gave God thanks and entertained the strangers at their gates. The other spirit of false pride and shame robs both guest and host of the best joy of the Thanksgiving time—the joy of common faith in the Giver of all good, and of cordial welcome which has nothing to conceal

Hymn of Praise

We hold our hands to Thee, O Lord of Hosts!
And praise Thee for Thy blessings manifold.
We thank Thee for the bounteous harvest yield,
The garnered opulence of vine and field,
The work of man with full fruition crowned.

We thank Thee that we live with souls attuned
To all the beauty of the pulsing world.
We thank Thee for the heroes of the quiet ways,
When no man knoweth, but who live thy praise,
The silent heroes in the ways forgot.
We praise Thee that no brother lives enslaved,
Free hearts, free homes! aye, let thanksgiving rise,
The end of strife—the soldier's duty done;
The rich reward—the joys of freedom won.
Thank God! ye people, for the gift of peace.

Foresight.

The dispute over the discovery of the pole having reached the acute stage, naturally it was taken into the courts.

"Have no fear," said the lawyers for one side. "Our case is simple and our proof is decisive."

"Have no fear," said the lawyers for the other side. "As soon as this trouble started we sent to Greenland and retained every expert Eskimo witness."

Realizing that many years of hypothetical questions were before it, the public turned its attention to the south pole.

Hint of Etiquette.

"Say," whispers the parvenu at the banquet given to commemorate the reconciliation of the society couple, "my bread is wrapped in a napkin. I'm not up on all these things, you know. Do I eat the napkin?"

"Oh, no," says his mentor. "Not here. This feast is to celebrate the cessation of chewing the rag."

Washington.—A majority of approximately 55 in the house of representatives and a gain of at least eight seats in the senate are the results obtained by the Democrats at the election.

Indiana, Maine, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Montana and West Virginia are the states which have elected Democratic legislatures that will choose successors to Republican senators. The margin on joint ballot in the Indiana legislature will not be great, but it is sufficient to insure the election of John W. Kern as successor to Senator Beveridge.

Champ Clark, representative from Missouri and present minority leader in the house, is an avowed candidate for speaker of the Sixty-second congress, and it is almost certain he will be elected to that position with very little if any serious opposition.

In the contests for state offices in many of the states the Democrats were as successful as they were in the congressional field. In some instances states which were formerly counted on as strongly Republican, reversed the old order and chose Democratic officials.

In New York John A. Dix, the Democratic candidate, was elected over Stimson, Roosevelt's candidate, by a majority of 65,000.

In Massachusetts Eugene N. Foss, Democrat, was elected governor after a hotly-contested campaign.

New Jersey stepped into the Democratic column by electing as governor, Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university.

Ohio re-elected Judson Harmon by 60,000; Connecticut, which was Republican in 1908 by 44,660, elected Simeon E. Baldwin by 3,500; Massachusetts, which was Republican in 1908 by 110,000, chose E. N. Foss by 34,000; Colorado elected John F. Shafroth, Democrat, by 15,000; Iowa went Republican by a majority of 15,000.

A Touch of Family Life.

When the country youth proposed to the city girl, he received the conventional assurance that she would be his sister. It happened that this youth had sisters at home and knew exactly his privileges. So he kissed her. At this juncture she availed herself of the sisterly right to call out to father that brother was teasing her. Father responded in good, muscular earnest. Then the new brother-and-sister relation was dissolved by mutual consent. —Judge.

Resinol in Three Weeks Does What Other Remedies Failed to Do in Four Months.

My baby's face was like a raw and bleeding piece of meat. I was at my wits' ends what to do. Medicine from three physicians and ointment recommended seemed to make the Eczema worse. Then another mother spoke of Resinol, which I procured at once—remember I had no more faith in it than in all the rest I had tried—but I thought it would be wasting only 50c more. Never did I spend 50c to better advantage, for the first and second days I noticed a remarkable change, and now at the end of the third week I have my pretty blue eyed, rosy cheeked, cooing baby well again. I am safe in saying he is perfectly cured and the cure was surely something remarkable. Your Soap and Ointment did in three weeks what everything else I tried failed to do in four months. My baby was positively disfigured, now his complexion is all right again.

PUTS STOMACHS IN ORDER.

No Indigestion, Gas, Sourness or Dyspepsia Five Minutes After Taking a Little Diapepsin.

There should not be a case of indigestion, dyspepsia or gastritis here if readers who are subject to Stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtue contained in Diapepsin. This harmless preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort, and relieve the sourest, acid stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming all foul, nauseous odors from the breath.

If your stomach is sour and full of gas, or your food doesn't digest, and your meal don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any druggist here in town, and make life worth living. Absolute relief from Stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and besides, one fifty-cent case is sufficient to cure a whole family of such trouble.

Surely, a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Pape's Diapepsin, which will always either at daytime or during night, relieve your sick, sour, gassy, upset stomach and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.

Its Advantages.

"There is one appropriate use of a good poker hand."

"What is that?"

"It will shovel in the money."

Have You Tried?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest statements of facts.

Cresson, Pa.—"Five years ago I had a bad fall, and hurt myself inwardly. I was under a doctor's care for nine weeks, and when I stopped I grew worse again. I sent for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, took it as directed, and now I am a stout, hearty woman."—Mrs. Ella E. Aikey, Cresson, Pa.

Baird, Wash.—"A year ago I was sick with kidney and bladder troubles and female weakness. The doctors gave me up. All they could do was to just let me go as easily as possible. I was advised by friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. I am completely cured of my ills, and I am nearly sixty years old."—Mrs. Sarah Leighton, Baird, Wash.

Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Yes, things will wear out. The old organ was alright while it lasted, but like all good things get all, so a week ago last Wednesday, the organ refused to speak forth her charming music and the end had come. So she was gently removed to the book room, and the space is occupied by a piano which is being rented at present with a view towards buying. A good deal of interest has been manifested in music past week which we hope may be maintained through the year.

Union opening exercises were held last Monday morning in the High School room which proved very beneficial to all. The main number on the program was a piano solo by Miss Esther Lenz, who came up to play by special request.

There will be a program given in the High School room next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. This program will be given by pupils of the entire school. Those that will take part from out side are Revs Achtermann, Schneider and Hubber.

JOE MILL

Senator Lafe Young

Lafayette Young, Sr., editor of the Des Moines Capital and standpatter of nation wide reputation, has been appointed by Governor Carroll to succeed the late United States Senator Dolliver. He will hold the office until the next state legislature elects. Mr. Young is a native Iowan and has been publishing the Des Moines Capital for twenty years. He is a competent and all around good man, but a most rank standpatter, and as the next legislature will be progressive, it is doubtful whether he will be elected by that body. It is said that Carrol, Young and Lacey will be the standpat candidates and among the progressives the following are most prominently mentioned for the place: Kenyon, Clark, Garst, Funk and Byers. One thing is certain, either Funk or Kenyon would come nearer to meeting the two factions of the party than any of the other mentioned candidates.

It Was Carroll

We have to make a correction on our last week's report of the election. It was Carroll who was elected Governor instead of Porter. Carroll's majority will be about 20,000. All the republicans on the state ticket were elected. We have not yet been able to learn how the amendment proposition came out.

ELECTION RESULTS.

Overwhelming victories in the important doubtful states carried with them the control of the house of representatives in the Sixty-second congress by a majority that may range anywhere from 45 to 60. Figures show enough Democratic gains throughout the country to leave no doubt of the power of the present minority to organize the next house with a big margin to spare.

Carroll, Republican, is elected governor of Iowa by a small margin, instead of Porter, Democrat, whose victory was prematurely announced.

The general dissatisfaction over the tariff law did not serve materially to reduce the customary Republican plurality in Wisconsin. F. E. McGovern was elected governor by a plurality of about 30,000.

Among the United States senators who surely were retired by the recent election are John Kern of New Jersey, Chauncey M. Depew of New York, Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana and Elmer J. Burkett of Nebraska. The incumbents possibly retired in favor of Democrats are Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts and Charles Dick of Ohio.

John A. Dix, Democrat, was elected governor of New York by a plurality of about 68,000. Henry L. Stimson, for whom Col. Roosevelt stumped the state, was knifed in the upstate districts.

Congressman Eugene N. Foss was elected Governor of Massachusetts by a plurality over Gov. Draper of about 28,000.

Gov. Harmon, candidate for re-election, carried Ohio by close to 100,000.

Michigan elected Chase S. Osborn of Sault Ste. Marie governor by about 50,000 plurality. The remainder of the state had even more comfortable margins.

Indiana went Democratic by a decisive majority, and not only was the entire state ticket elected, but the legislature will be Democratic by a decisive vote on joint ballot.

GENERAL NEWS.

The annual convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union opened in Baltimore with an address by President Lillian M. N. Stevens.

A monument erected by the federal government over the grave of Gen. James Shields at Carrollton, Mo., was unveiled in the presence of a distinguished gathering.

Cursing Americans as brutes and pigs, a large crowd of Mexican ruffians stormed the American consulate at Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, Mexico, across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass, Tex. They stoned windows and doors first and then battered down doors and entered the building, breaking all the furniture and destroying government records.

Mail advices received at Hongkong from Leinchou, in Kwang-Su province, report that rioters have burned and demolished numerous buildings there, including the American Presbyterian church, hospital and college, and proceeded to Tsoi Yuen Po, intending to slay the missionaries. The gentry, however, assisted the latter to escape in boats to Canton.

Fifteen officers and directors of the Imperial Window Glass company pleaded nolle contendere before Judge James S. Young in the United States district court at Pittsburg, Pa., to a violation of the Sherman anti-trust act and each was fined $500. At the same time a fine of $2,500 was imposed upon the corporation itself with costs.

The high cost of living does not appear to have diminished savings, according to figures compiled in the treasury department. Deposits in the 1,759 savings banks during the year increased to more than $4,000,000,000. The average depositor's account was $445.22, just $24.77 above the average of the year before. The total of the deposits has swelled $357,000,000 during the year.

The known death toll of the recent Delagua (Col.) mine disaster has reached the total of 79. Seven bodies, including that of Willis Evans, the young mining engineer who gave up his life to save a Slav miner from suffocation, have been taken out.

Five men are dead and eighteen injured as the result of an explosion in the mine of the Shoal Creek Coal company of Chicago, at Panama, 12 miles north of Hillsboro, Ill. Four of the men were killed outright and the fifth died later from injuries.

Japan is preparing a factory law to be brought before the diet next season. The bill will prohibit employment of children under twelve years old, and those of sixteen and over will not be permitted to work more than twelve hours a day.

Royal millinery in huge quantities was the final feather that caused the Portuguese revolution, says Frances P. Paulus, a Detroit artist who has returned home from seven years' residence in Europe.

Steamer reports tell of the ceremonies of the "sow soul" celebration which took place in Tokyo recently to appease the "souls" of the animals slaughtered to feed the Japanese army during the recent war with Russia.

With the hearty approval of the judges of the juvenile court and the police commissioner, the newsboys' court was opened in Boston with three schoolboy judges. It will dispose of petty offenses by newsboys.

Reversing the decision of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in America, the superior court of Hamilton county, Ohio, declared illegal a proposed merger of the First, Second and Central Presbyterian churches of Cincinnati. Property valued at $750,000 is involved.

By the overturning of the Sharp Arrow car at the auto race track at Savannah, Ga. Albert Fuchs, the mechanician, was instantly killed, and William E. Sharp, designer of the car, and William H. Piger, driver, were seriously injured.

Prof. Herschel C. Parker of Columbia university has just returned from Alaska with what he declares is indisputable proof of the falsity of Dr. Frederick Cook's claims to having ascended to the top of Mount McKinley. Parker declares that his proofs, in the shape of photographs, show that Cook really did get within twenty miles of Mount McKinley.

Ex-Mayor David E. Rose of Milwaukee was married at his summer cottage near Paw Paw, Mich., to a vaudeville girl, Mrs. Rosemary Whitney, nee Glosz. Only Mr. Rose's son and daughter and Mr. Rose's secretary were present.

All the rivers of France have overflowed their banks, doing vast damage to property. Many villages in eastern France are inundated and numerous factories have been stopped. Fifteen hundred people of the city of Nancy are homeless.

Four women will sit in the Eighteenth general assembly of Colorado as a result of the recent election. Three of them are elected from state representative districts in Denver.

Des Moines, Nov. 14.—Hon. Lafayette Young, owner and editor of the Des Moines Capital, is the next United States senator from Iowa.

His appointment as successor to the late Senator Dolliver was announced Saturday by Governor Carroll.

The appointment of Editor Young comes as no surprise to those who have had their ear close to the ground during the past week or two. Practical political leaders who were constantly in close touch with affairs in Iowa have from the first believed that the appointment of Mr. Young was the logical thing to happen in the senatorial controversy, and hence they showed no surprise when the appointment was announced.

The appointment holds good until the meeting of the legislature January 8, next, when that body will have the duty of choosing a senator to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Dolliver, which ends March 4, 1913.

Some ...rible secret is gnawing at her heart, robbing her of the very life which a few weeks ago made her the most beautiful thing on this island; some dreadful influence is shadowing her every step, and as the day draws near when she is to join the king's harem I see in her eyes at times a look that frightens me. There is only one salvation. Tomorrow I shall kill Strang!"

"And then?"

Neil shrugged his shoulders.

"I will shoot him through the abdomen so that he will live to tell his wives who did the deed. After that I will try to make my escape to the mainland."

"And Marion—"

"Will not marry Strang! Isn't that plain?"

"You have guessed nothing—no cause for the prophet's power over your sister?" asked Nathaniel.

"Absolutely. And yet that influence is such that at times the thought of it freezes the blood in my veins. It is so great that Strang did not hesitate to throw me into jail on the pretext that I had threatened his life. Marion implored him to spare me the disgrace of a public whipping and he replied by reading to her the commandments of the kingdom. That was last night—when you saw her through the window. Strang is madly infatuated with her beauty and yet he dares to go any length without fear of losing her. She has become his slave. She is as completely in his power as though bound in iron chains. And the most terrible thing about it all is that she has constantly urged me to leave the island—to go, and never return. Great God, what does it all mean? I love her more than anything else on earth, we have been inseparable since the day she was able to toddle alone—and yet she would have me leave her! No power on earth can reveal the secret that is torturing her. No power can make Strang divulge it."

"And Obadiah Price!" cried Nathaniel, sudden excitement flashing in his eyes. "Does he know?"

"I believe that he does!" replied Neil, pacing back and forth in his agitation. "Captain Plum, if there is a man on this island who loves Marion with all of a father's devotion it is Obadiah Price, and yet he swears that he knows nothing of the terrible influence which has so suddenly enslaved her to the prophet! He suggests that it may be mesmerism, but I—" He interrupted himself with a harsh, mirthless laugh. "Mesmerism be damned! It's not that!"

"Your sister—is—a Mormon," ventured Nathaniel, remembering what the prophet had said to him that morning. "Could it be her faith?—a message revealed through Strang from—"

Neil stopped him almost fiercely.

"Marion is not a Mormon!" he said. "She hates Mormonism as she hates Strang. I have tried to get her to leave the island with me but she insists on staying because of the old folk. They are very old, Captain Plum, and they believe in the prophet and his heaven as you and I believe in that blue sky up there. The day before I was arrested I begged my sister to flee to the mainland with me but she refused with the words that she had said to me a hundred times before—'Neil, I must marry the prophet!' Don't you see there is nothing to do—but to kill Strang?"

Nathaniel thrust his hand into a pocket of the coat he had loaned Neil and drew forth his pipe and tobacco pouch. As he loaded the pipe he looked squarely into the other's eyes and smiled.

"Neil," he said softly. "Do you know that you would have made an awful fool of yourself if I hadn't hove in sight just when I did?"

He lighted his pipe with exasperating coolness, still smiling over its bowl.

"You are not going to kill Strang tomorrow," he added, throwing away the match and placing both hands on Neil's shoulders. His eyes were laughing with the joy that shone in them. "Neil, I am ashamed of you! You have worried a devilish lot over a very simple matter. See here—" He blew a cloud of smoke over the other's head. "I've learned to demand some sort of pay for my services since I landed on this island. Will you promise to be—a sort of brother—to me—if I steal Marion and sail away with her tonight?"

CHAPTER VI.

Marion.

At Nathaniel's astonishing words Neil stood as though struck suddenly dumb.

"Don't you see what a very simple case it is?" he continued, enjoying the other's surprised silence. "You plan to kill Strang to keep Marion from marrying him. Well, I will hunt up Marion, put her in a bag if necessary and carry her to my ship. Isn't that better and safer and just as sure as murder?"

The excitement had gone out of Neil's face. The flush slowly faded from his cheeks and in his eyes there gleamed something besides the malevolence of a few moments before. As Nathaniel stepped back from him half laughing and puffing clouds of smoke from his pipe Marion's brother thrust his hands into his pockets with an exclamation that forcefully expressed his appreciation of Captain Plum's scheme.

"I never thought of that," he added, after a moment. "By heaven, it will be easy—"

"So easy that I tell you again I am ashamed of you for not having thought of it!" cried Nathaniel. "The first thing is to get safely aboard my ship."

"We can do that within an hour."

"And tonight—where will we find Marion?"

"At home," said Neil. "We live near Obadiah. You must have seen the house as you came into the clearing this morning from the forest."

Nathaniel smiled as he thought of his suspicions of the old councilor.

"It couldn't be better situated for our work," he said. "Does the forest run down to the lake on Obadiah's side of the island?"

"Clear to the beach."

Neil's face betrayed a sudden flash of doubt.

"I believe that our place has been watched for some time," he explained "I am sure that it is especially guarded at night and that no person leaves or enters it without the knowledge of Strang. I am certain that Marion is aware of this surveillance although she professes to be wholly ignorant of it. It may cause us trouble."

"Can you reach the house without being observed?"

"After midnight—yes."

"Then there is no cause for alarm," declared Nathaniel. "If necessary I can bring 10 men into the edge of the woods. Two can approach the house as quietly as one and I will go with you. Once there you can tell Marion that your life depends on her accompanying you to Obadiah's. I believe she will go. If she won't—" He stretched out his arms as if in anticipation of the burden they might hold. "If she wont—I'll help you carry her!"

'And meanwhile," said Neil, "Arbor Croche's men—"

"Will be as dead as herring floaters if they show up!" he cried, leaping two feet off the ground in his enthusiam. "I've got 12 of the damnedest fighters aboard my ship that ever lived and 10 of them will be in the edge of the woods!"

Neil's eyes were shining with something that made Nathaniel turn his own to the loading of his pipe.

"Captain Plum, I hope I will be able to repay you for this," he said. There was a trembling break in his voice and for a moment Nathaniel did not look up. His own heart was near bursting with the new life that throbbed within it. When he raised his eyes to his companion's face again there was a light in them that spoke almost as plainly as words.

"You haven't accepted my price, yet, Neil," he replied quietly. "I asked you if you'd—be—a sort of brother—"

Neil sprang to his side with a fervor that knocked the pipe out of his hand.

"I swear that! And if Marion doesn't—"

Suddenly he jerked himself into a listening attitude.

"Hark!"

For a moment the two ceased to breathe. The sound had come to them both, low, distant. After it there fell a brief hush. Then again, as they stared questioningly into each other's eyes, it rolled faintly into the swamp—the deep, far baying of a hound.

"Ah!" exclaimed Neil, drawing back with a deep breath. "I thought they would do it!"

"The bloodhounds!"

"Gathered for the Heathen."

The Church Family Newspaper tells the following story:

"A missionary came down to take the Sunday services at the church of Giggleswick-in-Craven. On behalf of the 'foreign heathen' a collection was taken up. One of the wardens offered the box to a certain member of the congregation who did not believe in foreign missions.

"In a stage whisper, heard alike by congregation and parson, this man said in blank vernacular, 'Tak' it away, lad; I'm not going to give owt.'

"At that period the collecting boxes were taken direct into the vestry. Down came the preacher from the pulpit, went into the vestry, brought out one of the boxes, and marched straight towards the gentleman. He offered the box to the heretic with the naive remark: 'Tak' what thou wantest, lad; it has been gathered for the heathen!'"

Child a Train Dispatcher.

Frankie McClure is only eleven years old, but she can dispatch trains and operate the telegraph key just as cleverly as her foster father, who has been in the business for more than a score of years. "She is the best train dispatcher along the line," said her foster father, George Moore of Gabbettsville, Ga. Frankie passes much of her spare time with her father every day. Telegraphy provides as much amusement for her as her dolls. She learned telegraphy when she was six years old, and her proficiency has been increasing ever since.

Remedies for Dyspepsia.

Summing up his experiences with 425 cases of dyspepsia, an English physician said that benefit had resulted most frequently from one of two kinds of medicine—namely, alkali and a carminative, such as ginger, an hour or an hour and a half after a meal, or when the discomfort came on; or bismuth carbonate, in doses of half a dram or more before meals.

WOMAN TELLS STORY OF INTENSE SUFFERING

At the age of about 40 years, I was attacked with hemorrhage of the kidneys or bladder which continued for several years without a check. I finally took advantage of your generous offer and procured a sample bottle of Swamp-Root. Believing it helped me, I purchased a fifty-cent bottle, which convinced me that it was helping me. Three other bottles cured me. In two or three years, over-work brought my ailment back, but one bottle stopped it.

I feel as if I owe my life to you for the great blessing Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root has been to me. I recommend it to all human beings suffering as I was. You have my permission to publish this letter and if any person doubts it, if they will write me, enclosing stamp, I will give full particulars.

Yours very truly,

DRINK WATER TO CURE KIDNEYS AND RHEUMATISM

The People Do Not Drink Enough Water to Keep Healthy, Says Well-Known Authority.

"The numerous cases of kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected.

Stop loading your system with medicines and cure-alls; but get on the water wagon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicines—plain, common vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach."

To cure Rheumatism you must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism; the urine must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the bladder, and, most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomach trouble and poor digestion. For these conditions you can do no better than take the following prescription: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget the water. Drink plenty and often.

This valuable information and simple prescription should be posted up in each household and used at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache or urinary trouble, no matter how slight.

GENERAL NEWS.

One hundred and sixteen of the 1,000 militant suffragettes who marched on the British parliament building were arrested after a lively fight with the police. Led by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the women made a determined but unsuccessful attempt to force the police cordon about the house of commons and, reaching Premier Asquith, to insist upon the introduction of a woman's suffrage bill.

Judge Kenesaw M. Landis will not try the beef trust cases. He announced to attorneys appearing before him in the United States district court who sought a change of venue in the case against Chicago meat packers, that he would be unable to hear the case in any event, and irrespective of argument for or against such a course.

After a revolt at Pueblo, Mexico, in which forty were killed and three wounded, troops fought their way into the houses in which the women leaders of the rioters were intrenched and forced them to surrender. Three of the rebels were slain, one of whom killed the chief of police.

A special grand jury at Wheeling, W. Va., indicted Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk on five counts for the attempted murder of her millionaire husband, John O. Schenk. Four of the indictments charge the actual act of administering poison and the other charges an attempt.

Sailors attached to the second division of the United States battleship fleet, now in the harbor at Cherbourg, France, and gendarmes clashed in the streets. Rioting continued for some time. Many of the gendarmes and sailors were injured, none seriously.

Premier Asquith presented his program in the British house of commons. It is now settled that in the event of the rejection of the veto bill by the lords the government will pass the essential features of the budget, remove the pauper disqualification for old age pensions and dissolve parliament on November 28.

Benjamin Smith, a farmer aged twenty-two years, is in the Muncie, Ind., jail, charged with the murder of his father and according to the police he has confessed the crime. It is alleged he quarreled with his father over the payment of his board.

With one wing tip of his machine crumpled like a piece of paper Ralph Johnstone, the brilliant young aviator, holder of the world's altitude record, dropped like a plummet from a height of 500 feet into the inclosure at Overland pary aviation field, Denver, Col., and was instantly killed. Nearly every bone in his body was broken.

The government will use a camera to get evidence against "mashers" who frequent the post office at Denver, Col. After two warnings offenders will be jailed.

The result of a strike vote taken by boilermakers in the Cleveland shops of the New York Central lines was announced, 95 per cent. of the men voting in favor of a strike. The immediate cause of the trouble is the employment of six nonunion men.

The Women's Homestead association, a Boston organization, passed resolutions addressed to political leaders, virtually demanding, among other radical things, that single women who have passed their youth be pensioned or shot.

The first absolutely noiseless hospital in the world will be the new Harper at Detroit. All the calls and signals will be by means of an elaborate system of lights.

Bullets flew for the second time during the strike of 40,000 garment workers at Chicago. Pitched battles between the strikers and nonunionists prevailed throughout the factory districts. One stricker was stabbed, a detective was shot, several policemen injured, scores of strikers badly beaten and many others arrested.

Federal Judge J. McCall at Jackson, Tenn., instructed the jury in the case of the government against the Standard Oil company of Indiana to return a verdict of not guilty, and sustained the contention of counsel for the defendant that the United States had failed to prove the allegations set forth in the indictment that the company had received freight rate concessions in violation of the Elkins law.

Aroused by the report that the Imperial Window Glass company of Pittsburg, Pa., whose officers were recently fined $1,000 for alleged violation of the anti-trust law, intends to reduce wages of employes to regain the amount of the fine, Attorney General Wickersham has determined to urge prison sentences instead of fines for convicted corporation officials.

BANQUET FOR YOUNG

Des Moines Newspaper Men Felicitate Iowa's New Senator

PRESS CLUB MONTHLY DINNER

Judge McPherson and All State Officials Present, and An Interesting Program of Toasts Given—President Pierce Presided.

Des Moines, Nov. 21.—Men of all shades of political opinion united in felicitating Lafayette Young upon his appointment to the senate of the United States at a banquet given in his honor by the Des Moines Press club Saturday evening. The 100 and more guests who were present included, besides the members of the club, Judge Smith McPherson, a number of the attaches of his court, and all of the state house officials.

J. M. Pierce, president of the club, acted as toastmaster and the first toast to the new senator was given by Gov. B. F. Carroll on the subject "Realization." The governor's admonition to Senator Young to "remember now thy creator," was the hit of the evening. Harvey Ingham was next called upon, who extended the senator the glad hand from the club and from the newspaper fraternity. His subject was "Congratulations."

In his toast on "Expectation" Attorney General H. W. Byers imagined the feelings of a senator just starting out on his career. "Consolation," by Attorney James M. Parsons, and "Commendation" by Ora Williams completed the program of toasts which were followed by Senator Young's happy response on "Anticipation."

The banquet to Senator Young was given upon the occasion of the regular monthly dinner of the Press club.

BURNED IN OIL EXPLOSION

Harry Rorabaugh Comes to Frightful End While Repairing Furnace.

Des Moines, Nov. 21.—Harry Rorabaugh, 32 years old, a conductor in the employ of the Des Moines City Railway company, was burned to death in his home at 2058 East Grand avenue about 6 o'clock last evening when a crude oil heater, which he was repairing exploded and covered his entire body with the blazing oil. Rorabaugh was burned to a crisp almost instantly and when neighbors rushed to the scene and pulled the form from the wreckage it was burned beyond recognition.

Mrs. Rorabaugh and Margaret, the 7-year-old daughter, who were in another room of the residence, barely had time to escape from the rapidly spreading flames, which, fed by the escaping oil, had almost completely destroyed the residence before the arrival of the fire department.

PREFERRED DEATH TO ASYLUM

Walter Beckwith, a Young Woodbine Farmer, Shot Himself as Officer Was Standing Beside Him.

Woodbine, Ia., Nov. 21.—Walter Beckwith, a farmer living six miles northeast of Woodbine, shot himself fatally at his home in the presence of an officer who had gone to Beckwith's house to arrest him.

Beckwith, it is claimed, had been having domestic difficulties and some one, presumably a member of the family filed a complaint with the board of commissioners on insanity.

When the officer appeared for Beckwith the latter asked permission to go to his room and change his clothes. This was granted, but the officer went with him.

Entering the room Beckwith took a revolver from a dresser and fired a bullet into his neck before the officer could interfere.

Fire in Des Moines Packing House Started by Cigarette, Causes $30,000 Loss.

Des Moines, Nov. 21.—An expensive barbecue that had not been scheduled was caused by a small boy throwing a cigarette butt into a pile of hay at the Longman & Baird slaughter house on Southeast Eleventh street yesterday afternoon at 4:30. Two hundred and fifty carcasses of dressed beeves were consumed in the blaze, which entirely destroyed the plant. About $700 worth of hides were lost.

The total loss will reach nearly $30,000. The buildings were fully covered by insurance, but the beef was only partially covered.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

So powerfully did that, the most painful event of his life, obtrude itself upon his mind, that when the clergyman put the question, "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" and so on, the poor distracted bridegroom answered with startling distinctness, "Not guilty, so help me God!"—From Tuckerman's "Personal Recollections."

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD
ILLUSTRATIONS BY MAGNUS G. KETTNER

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Capt. Nathaniel Plum, of the sloop Typhoon, lands secretly on Beaver island, home of the Mormons. He is suddenly confronted by Obadiah Price, an old man and a member of the Mormon council, who tells him that he is suspected. Price ignores Nat's protestations that he has got the wrong man, and begins for the ammunition aboard the sloop. He binds Nat by a solemn oath to deliver a package to Franklin Pierce, president of the United States. Near Price's cabin Nat sees the frightened face of a young woman who disappears in the darkness, leaving an odor of lilacs. It develops that Plum's visit to the island is to demand settlement from the king, Strang, for the looting of his ship some time previously, supposedly by Mormons. Jukey, the mate, has been left in charge of the sloop with orders to bombard St. James if Nat does not return within a certain time. Price takes Nat in the darkness, to the king's home, and through a window he sees the king and his wives, among whom is the lady of the lilacs, whom Price says is the seventh wife. Plum calls at the king's office, where he is warned by a young woman that his life is in danger. Strang receives Plum cordially, professes indignation when he hears the captain's grievance, and promises to punish the guilty. Plum again receives warning of his danger. He rescues Neil, who is being publicly whipped. The king orders Arbor Croche, the sheriff and father of Winnsome, the girl who warned Nat, to pursue and kill the two men. Plum and Neil plan to escape on the Typhoon. Plum learns that Marion, the girl of the lilacs, is Neil's sister. She is not yet married to Strang. Plum suggests carrying her off on the ship. Neil approves.

Horror, not fear, sent an involuntary shiver through Nathaniel.

"They can't reach us!" assured Neil. There was the glitter of triumph in his eyes. "This was to have been my way of escape after I killed Strang. A quarter of a mile deeper in the swamp I have a canoe." He picked up the gun and box and began forcing his way through the dense alder along the edge of the stream. "I'd like to stay and murder those dogs," he called back, "but it wouldn't be policy."

For a time the crashing of their bodies through the dense growth of the swamp drowned all other sound. Five minutes later Neil stopped on the edge of a wide bog. The hounds were giving fierce tongue in the forest on their left and their nearness sent Nathaniel's hand to his pistol. Neil saw the movement and laughed.

"Don't like the sound, eh?" he said. "We get used to it on Beaver island. They're just about at the place where they tore little Jim Schredder to pieces a few weeks back. Schredder tried to kill one of the elders for stealing his wife while he was away on a night's fishing trip."

He plunged to his knees in the bog. "They caught him just before he reached the swamp," he flung back over his shoulder. "Two minutes more and he would have been safe."

Nathaniel, sinking to his knees in the mire, forged up beside him.

"Lord!" he exclaimed, as a breath of air brought a sudden burst of bloodcurdling cries to them. "If they'd speed them on us sooner—"

He shivered at the terrible grimace Neil turned on him.

"Had they slipped the leashes when we escaped, we would have been with poor Schredder now, Captain Plum. By the way"—he stopped a moment to wipe the water and mud from his face—" three days after they covered Schredder's bones with muck out there, the elder took Schredder's wife! She was too pretty for a fisherman." He started on, but halted suddenly with uplifted hand. No longer could they hear the baying of the dogs. "They've struck the creek!" said Neil. "Listen!"

After an interval of silence there came a long mournful howl.

"Treed—treed or in the water, that's what the howling means. How Croche and his devils are howling now!"

A curse was mingled with Neil's breath as he forced his way through the bog. Twenty rods farther on they came to a slime covered bit of water on which was floating a dugout canoe. Immense relief replaced the anxiety in Nathaniel's face as he climbed into it. At that moment he was willing to fight a hundred men for Marion's sake, but snakes and bogs and bloodhounds were entirely outside his pale of argument and he exhibited no hesitation in betraying this fact to his companion. For a quarter of a mile Neil forced the dugout through water viscid with slime and rotted substance before the clearer channel of the creek was reached. As they progressed the stream constantly became deeper and more navigable until it finally began to show signs of a current and a little later, under the powerful impetus of Neil's paddle, the canoe shot from between the dense shores into the open lake. A mile away Nathaniel discerned the point of forest beyond which the Typhoon was hidden. He pointed out the location of the ship to his companion.

"You are sure there is a small boat waiting for you on the point?" asked Neil.

"Yes, since early morning."

Neil was absorbed in thought for some time as he drove the canoe through the tall rice grass that grew thick along the edge of the shore.

"How would it be if I landed you on the point and met you tonight at Obadiah's?" he asked suddenly. "It is probable that after we get Marion aboard your ship I will not return to the island again, and it is quite necessary that I run down the coast for a couple of miles—for—" He did not finish his reason, but added: "I can make the whole distance in this rice so there is no danger of being seen. Or you might lie off the point yonder and I would join you early this evening."

"That would be a better plan if we must separate," said Nathaniel, whose voice betrayed the reluctance with which he assented to the project. He had guessed shrewdly at Neil's motive. "Is it possible that we may have another young lady passenger?" he asked banteringly.

There was no answering humor to this in Neil's eyes.

"I wish we might!" he said quietly.

"We can!" exclaimed Nathaniel. "My ship—"

"It is impossible. I am speaking of Winnsome. Arbor Croche's house is in the heart of the town and guarded by dogs. I doubt if she would go, anyway. She has always been like a little sister to Marion and me and she has come to believe—something—as we do. I hate to leave her."

"Obadiah told me about her mother," ventured Nathaniel. "He said that some day Winnsome will be a queen."

"I knew her mother," replied Neil, as though he had not heard Nathaniel's last words. He looked frankly into the other's race. "I worshipped her!"

"Oh-h-h!"

"From a distance," he hastened. "She was as pure as Winnsome is now. Little Winn looks like her. Some day she will be as beautiful."

"She is beautiful now."

"But she is a mere child. Why, it seems only a year ago that I was toting her about on my shoulders! And—by George, that was a year before her mother died! She is sixteen now."

Nathaniel laughed softly.

"Tomorrow she will be making love, Neil, and before you know it she will be married and have a family of her own. I tell you she is a woman—and if you are not a fool you will take her away with Marion."

With a powerful stroke of his paddle Neil brought the canoe in to the shore.

"There!" he whispered. "You have only to cross this point to reach your boat." He stretched out his long arm and in the silence the two shook hands. "If you should happen to think of a way—that we might get Winnsome—" he added, coloring.

The sudden grip of his companion's fingers made him flinch.

"We must!" said Nathaniel.

He climbed ashore and watched Neil until he had disappeared in the wild rice. Then he turned into the woods. He looked at his watch and saw that it was only 2 o'clock. He was conscious of no fatigue; he was not conscious of hunger. To him the whole world had suddenly opened with glorious promise and in the still depths of the forest he felt like singing out his rejoicing. He had never stopped to ask himself what might be the end of this passion that had overwhelmed him; he lived only in the present, in the knowledge that Marion was not a wife, and that it was he whom fate had chosen for her deliverance. He reasoned nothing beyond the sweet eyes that had called upon him, that had burned their gratitude, their hope and their despair upon his soul; nothing beyond the thought that she would soon be free from the mysterious influence of the Mormon king and that for days and nights after that she would be on the same ship with him. He had emptied the pockets of the coat he had given Neil and now he brought forth the old letter which Obadiah had rescued from the sands. He read it over and over again as he sat for a few moments in the cool of the forest and there was no trouble in his face now. It was from a girl. He had known that girl, years ago, as Neil knew Winnsome; in years of wandering he had almost forgotten her—until this letter came. It had brought many memories back to him with shocking clearness. The old folk were still in the little home under the hill; they received his letters; they received the money he sent them each month—but they wanted him. The girl wrote with merciless candor. He had been away four years and it was time for him to return. She told him why. She wrote what they, in their loving fear of inflicting pain, would never have dared to say. At the end, in a postscript, she had asked for his congratulations on her approaching marriage.

To Nathaniel this letter had been a torment. He saw the truth as he had never seen it before—that his place was back there in Vermont, with his father and mother; and that there was something unpleasant in thinking of the girl as belonging to another. But now matters had changed. The letter was a hope and inspiration to him and he smoothed it out with tender care. What a refuge that little home among the Vermont hills would make for Marion! He trembled at the thought and his heart sang with the promise of it as he went his way again through the thick growth of the woods.

It was half an hour before he came out upon the beach. Eagerly he scanned the sea. The Typhoon was nowhere in sight and for an instant the gladness that had been in his heart gave place to a chilling fear. But the direction of the wind reassured him. Casey had probably moved beyond the jutting promontory, that swung in the form of a cart wheel from the base of the point, that he might have sea room in case of something worse than a stiff breeze. But where was the small boat? With every step adding to his anxiety Nathaniel hurried along the narrow rim of beach. He went to the very tip of the point which reached out like the white forefinger of a lady's hand into the sea; he passed the spot where he had lain concealed the preceding day; his breath came faster and faster; he ran, and called softly, and at last halted in the arch of the cart wheel with the fear full-flaming in his breast. Over all those miles of sea there was no sign of the sloop. From end to end of the point there was no boat. What did it mean? Breathlessly he tore his way through the strip of forest on the promontory until all Lake Michigan to the south lay before his eyes. The Typhoon was gone! Was it possible that Casey had abandoned hope of Nathaniel's return and was already lying off St. James with shotted gun? The thought sent a shiver of despair through him. He passed to the opposite side of the point and followed it foot by foot, but there was no sign of life, no distant flash of white that might have been the canvas of the sloop Typhoon.

There was only one thing for him to do—wait. So he went to his hiding place of the day before and watched the sea with straining eyes. An hour passed and his still aching vision saw no sign of sail; two hours—and the sun was falling in a blinding glare over the Wisconsin wilderness. At last he sprang to his feet with a hopeless cry and stood for a few moments undecided. Should he wait until night with the hope of attracting the attention of Neil and joining him in his canoe or should he hasten in the direction of St. James? In the darkness he might miss Neil, unless he kept up a constant shouting, which would probably bring the Mormons down upon him; if he went to St. James there was a possibility of reaching Casey. He still had faith in Obadiah and he was sure that the old man would help him to reach his ship; he might even assist him in his scheme of getting Marion from the island.

Where the Women Come In.

Tie after tie the clerk placed before hard-to-please Percy. Red, yellow, blue, green, striped—all the colors of the rainbow. Some he liked and laid aside; others he returned to the salesman. But, to Percy's great interest, the salesman did not return all the "rejected" to the boxes whence they had come. Many he placed together in one capacious tray.

"Aren't you putting that back in the wrong box?" exclaimed Percy, at last, his curiosity aroused, as yet another rejected was tossed into the box of failures.

"Oh, no," replied the man. "We have orders, when five or six men turn down a tie, to take it out and put it aside."

"And is it then returned to the makers?" queried Percy.

"Oh, dear, no! We sell them to ladies who come in here to buy ties for their husbands."

Didn't Like Course Dinners.

A colored woman, native of the south, had been working for a flat dwelling family of moderate means in the East end, but resigned recently to accept a place bringing higher wages with a wealthy family who lived in a large house on Euclid heights and have their dinner served in courses every night just as if there was company.

This colored woman had been brought up to put everything on the table at once, with the exception possibly of the dessert, and did not take kindly to the course system.

A few days ago her former mistress met her on the street and inquired how she liked her new place.

"Oh, not ve'y well," she replied. "I don't like this hyah way of su'vin' things in cou'ses. The's too much shiftin' o' the dishes fo' the fewness o' the vittles."

On Second Thought.

"I guess our boy Josh will be back on the farm soon," said Mr. Corntossel.

"I thought he had a good situation in town," replied the summer boarder.

"Yes. But I judge it kind o' set him thinkin' when he found out that the value of one good hog was pretty near as much as two weeks' salary."

Matter of Pirnciple.

"Is he lazy?"

"I would hardly say that. You've heard the expression: "Unseemly haste?"

"Why, certainly."

"Well, all haste looks that way to him."

At the One Horse.

Jere L. Sullivan, the head of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance, said in Cincinnati, apropos of Labor day:

"Our American hotels are better than they used to be, and for this betterment my organization deserves no little credit.

"We have today no such hotels as the One Horse of Tin Can, where, if you asked for a bath, they used to give you a shovel and tell you to go down to the hollow and dam the creek.

"An English earl once visited the One Horse hotel. The landlord without ceremony led him outside, pointed to a window on the fifth floor, and said:

"'Thar's yer room.'"

All in Good Time.

Seven-year-old William had become the proud owner of a pet pig, and insisted upon having all the care of it himself. After a few weeks, as the pig did not seem to thrive, his father said to him:

"William, I'm afraid you are not feeding your pig enough. It does not seem to be fattening at all."

"I don't want him to fatten yet," William replied, knowingly. "I'm waiting until he gets to be as long as I want him, then I'll begin to widen him out."—Tit-Bits.

You Can Rely on Resinol to Do Its Work Quickly and Perfectly.

Have been troubled with dry Eczema for several months, and have tried many different remedies, but I have gotten more relief and better results with two applications of Ungt. Resinol than all other remedies. Will gladly recommend it whenever and wherever I can.

The Winning Candidate.

Two candidates for the same office came into a certain town one day. The one called at a house where a little girl came to the door. Said he: "Sissie, will you please bring me a glass of water?" Having brought the water, he gave her some candy and asked: "Did the man ahead of me give you candy?" "Yes, sir." Then he gave her a nickel and said: "Did he give you money?" "Yes, sir; he gave me ten cents." Then, picking her up, he kissed her and said: "Did he kiss you?" "Yes, sir, and he kissed mamma, too!"

A very fine and interesting program was given in the public school building yesterday afternoon by the pupils of the different rooms. The children are enjoying a vacation today and tomorrow.

The corn crop of Hancock county this year has been a good one and the picking is about all finished. The corn has dried out in good shape and the Hancock county farmer has abundant cause for thanksgiving.

Today is Thanksgiving and we all can probably find something to be thankful for. A man is poor indeed who cannot find some cause for thankfulness and it is well to set aside one day at least every year in which to ponder over our blessings And incidentally, we hope all our readers may have a bountiful feast of this world's good things. Be thankful.

Time after time, our attention has been called to the seemingly unusual amount of deviltry and nastiness which is evident in some of the pupils of our public schools, and if one third of what we hear is true, there are some young lads attending our school who ought to be treated to a severe chastisement or expelled from school and perhaps a proper place for some of them would be in a reform school. The stories we hear simply make a fellow's hair stand on end and are simply unbelievable. We do not say this as a criticism on our teachers. They are undoubtedly doing the best they can as their time is more than filled with work and at that, they are unable to do themselves or the pupils justice. Klemme needs another teacher and is abundantly able to have one. Then the principal could have a few minutes each day not entirely taken up with recitations.

HEALTH AND INCOME
Both Kept Up on Scientific Food.

Good sturdy health helps one a lot to make money.

With the loss of health one's income is liable to shrink, if not entirely dwindle away.

When a young lady has to make her own living, good health is her best asset.

"I am alone in the world," writes a Chicago girl, "dependent on my own efforts for my living. I am a clerk, and about two years ago through close application to work and a boarding-house diet, I became a nervous invalid, and got so bad off it was almost impossible for me to stay in the office a half day at a time.

"A friend suggested to me the idea of trying Grape-Nuts food which I did, making it a large part of at least two meals a day.

"Today, I am free from brain-tire, dyspepsia, and all the ills of an overworked and improperly nourished brain and body. To Grape-Nuts I owe the recovery of my health, and the ability to retain my position and income.

ARE NOT QUALIFIED

RIGHT OF WOMEN TO SELL INTOXICANTS IS DENIED BY SUPREME COURT.

HAPPENINGS OVER THE STATE

General News of Iowa Collected and Condensed from Many Sources that Will Prove of Interest to Our Readers.

Des Moines.—There is one business in Iowa that women cannot engage in. She is prohibited from selling booze under a ruling handed down by the supreme court. The decision is sweeping in its terms and prevents a woman handling liquor for sale even though she is a registered pharmacist. The ruling was occasioned by an appeal taken by Mayte S. Carragher of Floyd county, a registered pharmacist. She applied for a liquor permit and was refused on the ground that the state law provided that only qualified electors could sell intoxicating liquors. Her counsel contended that she had a right to vote on tax and bond propositions, but the high court ruled that this did not constitute her a qualified elector.

Woodbury Leads Them All.

Des Moines.—The biennial report of W. P. Barney, state food and dairy commissioner, shows that Woodbury county is the banner butter manufacturing county of the state, producing 6,952,704 pounds during the past two years.

The annual appropriation of not less than $7,000, more laws and deputies are a few of the things recommended for the state food and dairy department by Commissioner Barney in his report filed with Gov. Carroll.

Chief among his recommendations for new laws is his suggestion that the present state law licensing all dealers in milk in cities of 10,000 population or over be changed so as to include every incorporated town in the state. He declares that milk inspection and supervision over dealers is as important in the smaller towns of the state as in the cities.

As an indication of the rapid growth of the business in the department he submits figures showing the receipts of the department were more than doubled from May, 1910, to September, 30,1910, over the corresponding period of time in 1909. The receipts in 1909 were $4,072.44 and in 1910 $8,672.26, a gain of $4,599.82.

Polk county is second to Woodbury in the production of butter, with a total of 4,187,315 pounds. The fact that there are numerous big creameries in Sioux City and Des Moines accounts for this high total in these two counties.

The grand total of milk and cream received by the creameries of the whole state and the butter made is as follows: Pounds of milk, 365,346,824; pounds of cream, 252,037,119; pounds of butter, 93,911,906; pounds of butter sold in Iowa, 6,978,086.

The total number of cows used in producing the amount of milk and cream shown in the above figures was 714,639.

STATE CAPITAL CHAT.

The healthy condition of the state treasury moved the state board of control to ask for $1,214,300 in special appropriations in its biennial report; also for power in the board to transfer incorrigible boys and girls from industrial schools to the state reformatory; a law making non-resident insane in the state institutions liable for their care and maintenance; a minimum monthly allowance of $4,000 for the college for the blind, and an increase of $1 per capita in allowance for the institution for feeble minded children; an increase of $3 per month per capita for inmates of the Clarinda and Mt. A somewhat startling suggestion was made by Prof. Macy, of the chair of political science of Grinnell college who declares that Iowa Republicans should elect Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, as senator from this state to succeed Doliver, that the "forward movement in the Republican party" may go on. Macy says that there is nothing in the constitntion to prevent Beveridge being elected from Iowa providing the Indiana man, some time before his election, declares his legal residence to be Iowa.

COUNT TOLSTOI DEAD

Great Russian Genius Passed Away In Rude and Barren Hut

WIFE WAS WITH HIM AT END

Dead Philosopher Was 82 Years of Age, and Was Noted Over the Entire World as Russia's Greatest Reformer.

Astapova, Russia, Nov. 21.—Count Tolstoi died Saturday night.

Dr. Makovetsky and the other attending physicians and Countess Tolstoi were at his side when the end came.

It was recognized long before that his case was helpless and at 5 o'clock in the morning, after the countess had been summoned and other members of the family had gathered in an adjoining room, the physicians issued a bulletin announcing that the activity of the heart had almost ceased and that Tolstoi's condition was extremely dangerous.

Several of the physicians were greatly overcome by the approaching death of Russia's great writer.

Tolstoi accompanied only by Dr. Makovetsky, left his home at Pasnaya Poliana with the purpose of ending his days in solitude to which he more and more inclined in his latter years. His pilgrimage led him to the monastery at Shamardin in the province of Kalgula, where he remained as the guest of his sister, Marie, who is a nun in the cloister.

Learning that his retreat had been discovered, he insisted upon proceeding on his journey to the Caucasus, where he hoped to spend his last days close to the Tolstoian colony on the shores of the Black sea. But on the railroad journey he was overcome with exhaustion and the cold, and Dr. Makovetsky was compelled to have him transferred to the flag station at Astapova, where he was made as comfortable as possible in the rude wooden building.

For five days he had lain there suffering first from bronchitis and later from inflammation of the lungs. Specialists had been called, but despite their utmost efforts the heart of the great Russian responded but feebly to the restoratives and stimulants administered.

On Saturday the attacks of heart failure increased alarmingly and many hours prior to the end the physicians had given up all hopes. Countess Tolstoi was admitted to the sick room for the first time Friday night, but her husband failed to recognize her.

She had hastened to be beside him when she learned several days ago that his illness was serious, but the physicians had deemed it advisable that she be kept away from the count, fearing that her presence might cause the patient emotion.

Other members of the family were from time to time admitted to the presence of their father, and his daughter, Alexandra, has been in constant attendance.

Count Lyof Nikolaivitch Tolstoi, usually called Count Leo Tolstoi, novelist and social reformer, was born Aug. 28, 1828, at Yasnaya Poliana, in the province of Tula, Russia. When 23 years old he entered the army and served in the Caucasus and in the defense of Sebastopol against the British and French allied forces.

He first made a reputation in literature by a series of vivid sketches written from Sebastopol, and when he left the army soon after the Crimean war he devoted himself entirely to literature.

His "War and Peace," a tale of the invasion of Russia by Napoleon in 1812, is regarded in Russia as being a masterpiece, though his "Anna Karenia," which appeared in 1876, and "The Cossacks" found greater favor abroad, while his "Kruetzer Sonata," translated in 1890, also attracted wide attention.

Tolstoi wrote much on education and published several short stories and reminiscences of childhood and youth; but of recent years he had devoted himself to religious teaching.

He had made "Return Not Evil" the keystone of the Christian faith and said that the literal interpretation of the Sermon on the Mount was the only rule of the Christian life. The religious views of Tolstoi were set fortn in his "Christ's Christianity" and "My Religion."

Supposed Dead Man Reappears.

Clinton, Ia., Nov. 21.—Martin Gavin, thought to be dead and buried, reappeared here. The man, who is a police character, had been away several months. A body bearing a remarkable resemblance to him was found floating in the Mississippi river Sept. 15, and buried, after what was thought to have been positive identification.

FREE FORUM FOR THE WEST

TRANS-MISSISSIPPI COMMERCIAL CONGRESS IS OPENED.

Prominent Officials and Business Men Gather in San Antonio to Discuss Important Questions.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 22.—The Trans-Mississippi Commercial club congress, which has become known as the free forum for the west, was called to order here today for its Twenty-first annual session by President I. T. Pryor of San Antonio. He found surrounding and facing him a most remarkable gathering of leaders in the business and official life of the country, together with a number of eminent men from the Latin-American republics, for this congress is regarded as of the greatest importance because of its influence on governmental policies and commercial and industrial projects that affect especially the west.

In his opening address, President Pryor laid particular stress on the importance of the questions of conservation and of development of commerce and trade with Latin America, and it is certain that these matters will take up considerable of the time of the sessions. The latter topic will be discussed by John Barrett, director of the Pan American Union; Dr. Eugenio Dahne of Brazil, Don Eduardo Higinson of Peru, Minister Calvo of Costa Rica, Minister Caldron of Bolivia, and other Latin Americans, and by William Jennings Bryan. Thomas Burks of Seattle will talk of trade with the Orient, and the American merchant marine will be discussed by Capt. I. N. Hibbard of San Francisco and B. N. Baker of Baltimore.

One of the features of the congress is the struggle between San Francisco and New Orleans for an endorsement as to the official location of the Panama Canal exposition by the national congress in December. Gov. Sanders of Louisiana is directing the contest upon the part of Louisiana, and Gov. Gillett leads the delegation that advocates the claims of San Francisco.

Galveston has arranged to entertain the Commercial congress delegates, who will visit that city Saturday. The visitors will be taken over the sea wall and to the jetties and afterwards entertained with a sea food feast. Many of the delegates and congressmen from western states on their way to Washington will leave by water, sailing from Galveston.

There is an attractive exhibition of fruits and vegetables for which cash prizes are offered.

This afternoon H. C. Irish of the Missouri Botanical gardens, St. Louis, spoke on "The Home Flower Garden," and J. C. Blair of the University of Illinois talked of "Work with Smudge Pots." Other addresses will be heard tonight and tomorrow.

Prof. Walden

The following is from the Evening Herald, Norwalk, Ohio:

"The closing feature of the day's program at the Chautauqua was the performance of Walden, the magician, who mystified and amused in equal proportions with his funny patter and wonderful tricks. His sleight of hand work appears to be equal to that of Kellar and Hermann—there seems to be no end to his mysterious doings. For over an hour he kept the audience wondering how it was done where it came from, what was coming next and then quickly left them wondering how it had all been done."

CONFLICT OF ROADS

Sawyer, of Centerville, and Boland, of New York, Oppose I. C.

MAKE CLAIM OF OWNERSHIP

Dismiss All Employes of Iowa Central on Line From Albia to Centerville Which Was Used by Road for Years.

Albia, Ia., Nov. 28.—One of the most strenuous railway wars in the history of Iowa began Saturday with the announcement that the line which has been used by the Iowa Central between Albia and Centerville for many years was owned by Dr. J. L. Sawyer of Centerville and W. A. Boland, a New York capitalist, and the dismissing by them of every Iowa Central employe to be found upon the right-of-way.

Train crews not even were allowed to take their trains to Iowa Central territory but were discharged whenever a train was stopped, Mr. Sawyer and Mr. Boland placing other men in their place to handle it until it could be taken to Iowa Central tracks. Special police have been asked for by both sides, the one to prevent Iowa Central employes from trespassing upon the road claimed by the Sawyer-Boland combination and the other to prevent any injury to property which may occur. It is probable that a car run by motor will be operated on the line between the two places.

It has been the supposition here and along the line that the line from Albia to Centerville was owned by the Sage interests and leased to the Iowa Central. Dr. Sawyer and Mr. Boland, however, upon their arrival here in a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy special train from Centerville, announced that they were the owners of the line, and immediately took steps to prevent the Iowa Central from sending any trains over the track oy discharging all employes. They declared that the line had been proving a loss to them for some time past under the management of the Iowa Central officials and that they intended to improve the service.

What the management of the Iowa Central will do or whether it will be able to do anything at all in the affair is a subject of conjecture here. A prominent attorney declared that it would be able to do nothing, thus making Albia the terminal and shortening the line twenty-five miles.

A revolver was lying near the man with two chambers which had been exploded by the hammer of the gun. The coroner's jury was unable to decide as to whether the affair had been a murder and a suicide and returned an open verdict.

Conference Opens at Frankfort, Ky., and Remainder of Sessions Will Be Held at Louisville.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 29.—The popular election of United States senators, the income tax amendment to the constitution, conservation of natural resources by state legislation, uniform divorce laws and other subjects of nation-wide interest, will come up for discussion at the conference of governors which opened in this city today and close in Louisville December 3. Not only will the subjects be discussed, but resolutions will be adopted binding the members to urge the enactment or rejection of such legislation by the various state legislatures as may be decided on at the conference.

Governors or their representatives from every state in the Union are present, as well as a large percentage of the governors-elect who will take the oath of office January 1. Among the latter are John A. Dix of New York, Simeon E. Baldwin of Connecticut, Eugene Foss of Massachusetts and Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey.

Steps will be taken at this meeting to make the house of governors a permanent body, which will meet annually to discuss the enactment of uniform state legislation which will in no way conflict with the federal machinery.

The conference was opened formally at two o'clock this afternoon and the first session was given up to organization and other routine work. This evening all will take a special train to Louisville, where the remainder of the conference will be held in the auditorium of the Hotel Seelbach.

Tomorrow the conference will convene at 10:30 a. m. and listen to an address of welcome by Mayor Polesgrove of Louisville. This speech will be responded to by Governor Pothier of Rhode Island. Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey will then deliver an address on the objects of the conference, which will be followed by a general discussion on organization and the appointment of a committee to draft the constitution.

An address will then be made by Governor John Burke of North Dakota on "The Governor, His Power and Responsibility," which will be followed by a general discussion of the short ballot and the enlargement of the powers of the governor to permit of removing inefficient state officers. The day will be closed by an address by M. G. Bradford of Boston on the advisability of a governor's presence at legislative sessions.

Thursday will be given over to conservation, Friday to the income tax and Saturday to popular election of United States senators.

COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

SYNOPSIS.

Captain Plum, of the sloop Typhoon, secretly on Beaver island, stronghold of the Mormons. He is suddenly accosted by Obadiah Price, an elder of the church and a member of the king's council, who tells him that he is under arrest. Plum ignores Nat's protestations that he has got the wrong man, and that the ammunition aboard the Typhoon is Nat by a solemn oath to deliver a package to Franklin Pierce, president of the United States. Near the dock Nat sees the frightened face of a young woman who disappears in the lilacs, leaving an odor of lilacs. It develops that Plum's visit to the island is to get a settlement from the king, for the looting of his ship some time ago, supposedly by Mormons. Arbor Gate, has been left in charge of the island with orders to bombard St. James if Nat does not return within a certain time. Price takes Nat in the king's home, and from the window he sees the king and the lady among whom is the lady of whom Price says is the sevenfold Plum calls at the king's office and is warned by a young woman that his life is in danger. Strang receives him cordially, professes indignation when he hears the captain's grievance promises to punish the guilty. Nat receives warning of his danger from Neil, who is being pursued. The king orders Arbor Gate, sheriff and father of Winnsome, who warned Nat, to pursue the two men. Plum and Neil escape on the Typhoon. Plum finds Marion, the girl of the lilacs, on board. She is not yet married to Plum suggests carrying her with the ship. Neil approves. They include Winnsome, with whom Neil is in love, in the enterprise. Nat learns that the sloop is gone.

CHAPTER VI—Continued.

Neil go to the councilor's. Having decided, Nathaniel turned in the direction of the town, avoiding the main path which he and Obadiah had taken, but following in the forest enough to use it as a guide. He was confident that Arbor Gate and his sheriffs were confining their hunt to the swamp, but in spite of this belief he exercised extreme caution, stopping to listen now and then with one hand always near his gun. A quiet gloom filled the forest, broken by the tree tops he marked with the crown of the sun. Nathaniel's ears were with their strain of listening for the rumbling roar that would announce Strang's attack on St. James. Presently he heard a crackling in the brush ahead of him, a sound that broke from the strain of listening for the rumbling roar and in a moment had dodged into concealment behind the roots of an overturned tree, pistol in hand. Whatever was approaching came slowly, hesitating at each step—a cautious, stealthy advance, it struck Nathaniel had he cocked his weapon. Directly in front of him, half a stone's throw away, was a dense growth of brush and he could see the tops of the smaller bushes swaying. Twice the movement ceased and the second time there came a crashing of brush and a faint cry. For many minutes after there was absolute silence. Was the cry of an animal that he had heard—or of a man? In either case the creature who made it had entered the thicket and was lying there as still as if dead. For a quarter of an hour Nathaniel waited and listened. He could no longer have seen the movement of bushes in the gathering night gloom of the forest but his ears were strained to catch the slightest sound from the direction of the mysterious thing that lay within less than a dozen rods of him. Finally he drew himself out from the shelter of the roots and advanced step by step. Half way to the thicket a twig cracked loudly under his foot and the sound startled the dead silence of the forest with pistol-shot echoes. Then there came another cry from the hazel, a cry which was neither that of man nor animal but of both; and with an answering shout Nathaniel sprang forward to where in the edge of the thicket lay a face and outstretched arms and body. The girl was swaying on her feet. In her face there was a look that even in his instant's glance sent a chill of horror through the man, and as she staggered toward him, half falling, her lips weakly calling his name Nathaniel leaped to her and caught her close in his arms. For a moment something seemed to snap within him and flood his veins with fire. Closer he held the girl, and closer, as he knew that she was becoming limp in his arms. Her head was upon his breast, his face was crushed in her hair, he felt her throbbing and quivering against him and his lips were filled with the words that were struggling for freedom in his soul. But before there came the girl's own whispering breath—"Neil—where is Neil?" "He is gone—gone from the island!" she moaned. She had become a dead weight now in his arms. He knelt on the ground with her head still upon his breast, her eyes closed, her arms fallen to her sides. And as Nathaniel looked into her face from which all life seemed to have fled he forgot everything but the joy of this moment—forgot all in life but this woman against his breast. He kissed her soft mouth and the closed eyes until the eyes themselves opened again and gazed at him in a startled, half understanding way, until he drew his head far back with the shame of what he had dared to do flaming in his face.

And as for another moment he held her thus, feeling the quivering life returning in her, there came to him through that vast forest stillness the distant deep-toned thunder of a great gun.

"That's Casey!" he whispered close down to the girl's face. His voice was almost sobbing in its happiness. "That's Casey—firing on St. James!"

CHAPTER VII.

The Hour of Vengeance.

For perhaps 20 seconds after the last echoes of the gun had rolled through the forest the girl lay passive in Nathaniel's arms, so close that he could feel her heart beating against his own and her breath sweeping his face. Then there came a pressure against his breast, a gentle resistance of Marion's half conscious form, and when she had awakened from her partial swoon he was holding her in the crook of his arm. It had all passed quickly, the girl had rested against him only so long as he might have held a dozen breaths and yet there had been all of a lifetime in it for Nathaniel Plum, a cycle of joy that he knew would remain with him forever. But there was something bittersweet in the thought that she was conscious of what he had done, something of humiliation as well as gladness, and still not enough of the first to make him regret that he had kissed her, that he had kissed her mouth and her eyes. He loved her, and he was glad that in those passing moments he had betrayed himself. For the first time he noticed that her face was scratched and that the sleeves of her thin waist were torn to shreds; and as she drew away from him, steadying herself with a hand on his arm, his lips were parched of words, and yet he leaned to her eagerly, everything that he would have said burning in the love of his eyes. Still irresolute in her faintness the girl smiled at him, and in that smile there was gentle accusation, the sweetness of forgiveness, and measureless gratitude, and it was yet light enough for him to see that with these there had come also a flush into her cheeks and a dazzling glow into her eyes.

"Neil has escaped!" she breathed. "And you—"

"I was going back to you, Marion!" He spoke the words hardly above a whisper. The beautiful eyes so close to him drew his secret from him before he had thought. "I am going to take you from the island!"

With his words there came again that sound of a great gun rolling from the direction of St. James. With a frightened cry the girl staggered to her feet, and as she stood swaying unsteadily, her arms half reached to him, Nathaniel saw only mortal dread in the whiteness of her face.

"Why didn't you go? Why didn't you go with Neil?" she moaned. Her breath was coming in sobbing excitement. "Your ship is—at—St. James!"

"Yes, my ship is at St. James, Marion!" His voice was tremulous with triumph, with gladness, with a tenderness which he could not control. He put an arm half round her waist to support her trembling form and to his joy she did not move away from him. His hand was buried in the richness of her loose hair. He bent until his lips touched her silken tresses. "Neil has told me everything—about you," he added softly. "My ship is bombarding St. James, and I am going to take you from the island!"

Not until then did Marion free herself from his arm and then so gently that when she stood facing him he felt no reproof. No longer did shame send a flush into his face. He had spoken his love, though not in words, and he knew that the girl understood him. It did not occur to him in these moments that he had known this girl for only a few hours, that until now a word had never passed between them. He was conscious only that he had loved her from the time he saw her through the king's window, that he had risked his life for her, and that she knew why he had leaped into the arena at the whipping-post.

The words she spoke now came like a dash of cold water in his face.

"Your ship is not bombarding St. James, Captain Plum!" she exclaimed. Darkness hid the terror in her face, but he could hear the tremble of it in her voice. "The Typhoon has been captured by the Mormons and those guns are—guns of triumph—and not—" She caught her breath in a convulsive sob. "I want you to go—I want you to go—with Neil!" she pleaded.

"So Casey is taken!"

He spoke slowly, as if he had not heard her last words. For a moment he stood silent, and as silently the girl stood and watched him. She guessed the despair that was raging in his heart, but when he spoke to her she could detect none of it in his voice.

"Casey is a fool," he said, unconsciously repeating Obadiah's words. "Marion, will you come with me? Will you leave the island—and join your brother?"

The hope that had risen in his heart was crushed as Marion drew farther away from him.

"You must go alone," she replied. With a powerful effort she steadied her voice. "Tell Neil that he has been condemned to death. Tell him that—if he loves me—he will not return to the island."

"And I?"

From the distance she saw his arms stretched like shadows toward her.

"And you—"

Her voice was low, so low that he could hardly hear the words she spoke, but its sweetness thrilled him.

"And you—if you love me—will do this thing for me. Go to Neil. Save his life for me!"

She had come to him through the gloom, and in the luster of the eyes that were turned up to him Nathaniel saw again the power that swayed his soul.

"You will go?"

"I will save your brother—if I can!"

"You can—you can—" she breathed. In an ecstasy of gratitude she seized one of his hands in both of her own. "You can save him!"

"For you—I will try."

"For me—"

She was so close that he could feel the throbbing of her bosom. Suddenly he lifted his free hand and brushed back the thick hair from her brow and turned her face until what dim light there still remained of the day glowed in the beauty of her eyes. "I will keep him from the island if I can," he said, looking deep into them, "and as there is a God in heaven I swear that you—"

"What?" she urged, as he hesitated.

"That you shall not marry Strang!" he finished.

A cry welled up in the girl's throat. Was it of gladness? Was it of hope? She sprang back a pace from Nathaniel and with clenched hands waited breathlessly, as if she expected him to say more.

"No—no—you cannot save me from Strang! Now—you must go!"

She retreated slowly in the direction of the path. In an instant Nathaniel was at her side.

"I am going to see you safely back to St. James," he declared. "Then I will go to your brother."

She barred his way defiantly.

"You cannot go!"

"Why?"

"Because—" He caught the frightened flutter of her voice again. "Because—they will kill you!"

The low laugh that he breathed in her hair was more of joy than fear.

"I am glad you care—Marion." He spoke her name with faltering tenderness, and led her out into the path.

"You must go," she still persisted.

"With you—yes," he answered.

Officers Must Wear Mustache.

Some of the cavalry subalterns at Aldershot are smitten in a tender place by the enforcement of the order that all officers must wear a mustache. The regulation on the subject is explicit and dates from the time of Queen Victoria. It reads as follows:

"The hair of the head will be kept short. The chin and underlip will be shaved, but not the upper lip. Whiskers if worn will be of moderate length."

The fad for shaving the upper lip is a specialty of cavalry subalterns, who wish to distinguish themselves from their comrades of other branches of the service. Field Marshal Lord Grenfell had to issue an order calling attention to the regulation when he was in command in Ireland.

The regulation aims entirely at maintaining a smart appearance and dates from shortly after the Crimean war, when Queen Victoria objected to her soldiers wearing beards. In the navy the rule is that an officer must be either clean shaven or wear "a full set."—London Daily Mail.

Why Doctors Bear Charmed Lives.

The reason doctors do not catch disease is because they never think about it. They very seldom take any precautions to secure this amazing immunity, beyond, perhaps, a cold sponge bath regularly, smoking, a pinch of snuff, gargling the throat with some well-known disinfectant, or washing their hands in an anseptic solution before and after attending to a patient. A doctor may carry disease from one house to another without contracting it himself. An army surgeon had to cope single-handed with a terrible outbreak of cholera. When the rush was over, the medical man, absolutely exhausted sank onto a bed which a short time previously had been occupied by a bad cholera case and slept for 43 hours. Yet he did not contract the complaint, although he had taken no preventive measures. He simply didn't think about it. And that is the whole secret.

Bouncing.

"She's a bouncing girl, all right."

"Bouncing? I would call her slender."

"I wouldn't, I'd call her skinny; but she's bounced a half a dozen fellows who wanted to marry her for her father's money."

How a Severe Case of Kidney Trouble Was Finally Conquered.

Byron Bennette, 1018 St. Clair Ave., East Liverpool, O., says: "Six months I was helpless in bed with kidney trouble. Kidney secretions were painful, my head ached terribly and my body bloated. I ran down until I weighed but 80 pounds and everyone thought I had consumption. A specialist gave me up and so did my home physician. Surprising as it may seem, I was able to leave my bed after using six boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and for six years I have remained free from kidney trouble. I confidently believe Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life."

No Union.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at a luncheon at the Colony club in New York, urged on women the necessity for union.

"If we are to get the vote," she said, "we must stand together. Too many women face this question as they face all others—like the elderly belles at the charity ball.

"'What a flatterer Wooter Von Twiller is!' said the first belle.

"'Why, did he tell you you looked nice?' said the second.

"'No,' was the reply. 'He told me you did!'"

SANITATION IN SCHOOLS

Physical Health and Strength Are Essential to a Vigorous Mind.

Keeping the skin in good condition is so important to the general health that it should receive especial attention at school. The school lavatory as well as the home bathroom, should be furnished with Resinol Soap, because it removes the germ-laden dust of the playground and street atmosphere better than anything else. It prevents the advent of contagious skin troubles and keeps the complexion fresh, rosy and smooth as that of youth should be. No child should be hampered or disfigured with skin eruptions when a few applications of Resinol Ointment will cure them. Eczema, Acne, Rashes, Sores, Pimples and blotches are quickly cured with this easily applied remedy, and it should be kept in every home so that it can be used at the first appearance of skin troubles.

Students who shave will find the Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick the best. It is highly recommended by physicians and skin specialists to keep the face free from pimples and eruptions. Its soothing, healing lather counteracts any irritation or tenderness from shaving too close. Resinol Soap and Ointment can be obtained wherever the best toilet articles are sold.

Mother—I'm afraid Gwendoline is setting her heart on that young Penniless.

Father—You think so?

Mother—I am almost sure of it.

Father—Well, he is not a fit person for her to marry. He is as poor as a rat and has no prospects. Something must be done to set her against him.

Mother—I have thought of that and have hit upon what I think is an excellent plan.

Father—Yes? What is it?

Mother—We must tell her that we want her to marry him.

BABY'S SCALP CRUSTED

"Our little daughter, when three months old, began to break out on the head and we had the best doctors to treat her, but they did not do her any good. They said she had eczema. Her scalp was a solid scale all over. The burning and itching was so severe that she could not rest, day or night. We had about given up all hopes when we read of the Cuticura Remedies. We at once got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and followed directions carefully. After the first dose of the Cuticura Resolvent, we used the Cuticura Soap freely and applied the Cuticura Ointment. Then she began to improve rapidly and in two weeks the scale came off her head and new hair began to grow. In a very short time she was well. She is now sixteen years of age and a picture of health. We used the Cuticura Remedies about five weeks, regularly, and then we could not tell she had been affected by the disease. We used no other treatment after we found out what the Cuticura Remedies would do for her. J. Fish and Ella M. Fish, Mt. Vernon, Ky., Oct. 12, 1909."

Home Decorations for Christmas

by JULIA BOTTOMLEY

SOME people have the knack of arranging things. They take hold of a house or a room, be it ever so commonplace, and transform it with the materials we all have at hand, into something beautiful. I recall a lady who used to buy an ugly house, move into it, and begin making changes outside and in. In about two years the whole place was simply transformed and she did spend the time happily and busily. But her occupation was gone, so she would look up another place that needed regenerating and put that which she had completed on the market. She cashed in her ideas and went happily to work again. The little city in which she lives is beautiful and she is one of the chief educators of public tastes. She shows others how to improve their surroundings.

I know another woman gifted in managing interiors. She had little money—less time, for she was a wage earner; but she had the faculty of making things sweet around her. I want to tell you of the Christmas decorations which transformed her small home into a sort of bewitching Christmas bower, not to be forgotten and yet fashioned from just the same things we have at hand. This is her recipe:

Sometime before Christmas, say six weeks, buy a roll of dark red crape paper and one of olive green crape paper, also a sheet of yellow tissue paper. Buy some cheap bonnet wire from the milliner. Use a real poinsettia blossom for the pattern or buy one already made of paper, and proceed to make up two dozen poinsettia blossoms. First cut patterns, from a piece of wrapping paper, of the petals of the poinsettia,. Open the rolls of crape paper and stretch them. A roll of ten feet will stretch to fifteen and be improved thereby, for some purposes. To stretch the paper let some one hold one end for you while you pull the other gradually, or tack one end to the floor, stretch the paper, and tack the other end, allowing it to remain for a few hours.

Cut from the red paper, according to your wrapping paper patterns, the petals, which will be in three sizes. Cut a yard of the green paper into lengthwise strips, half inch wide, with which to wind the wire for stems. A piece of wire, six or eight inches long, is cut off. Four little wads of the yellow tissue paper the size of a large pea, are each covered with a little piece of the same paper, an inch square. This is brought over the wad and twisted into a little stem. Then little wads are fastened to the end of the pieces of wire by winding with a coarse thread or a fine spool wire. The latter is best. Place two or three small petals of the red paper around the end of the wire to which you have just fastened the little yellow wads and fasten them with thread or wire. Next place larger petals and finally the largest size, following the natural blossom, or the paper one bought for a guide, as nearly as possible. Wind the wire stem with green tissue paper. Pull the edges of the petals slightly to give them a natural look. As the paper poinsettia blossoms are finished put them in a hat box. In two or three evenings as many as may be needed, are easily made.

The Little Yule Log.
A Festoon of Red Tinsel Beads Strung on Baby Ribbon.

After the poinsettia is finished make little baskets of the red paper. For foundations use little card-board dishes such as confectioners use for Charlotte Russe, or those which may be bought for the purpose. Make handles of wire. Cover the basket inside and out with the red paper, pasting it to place and pulling the edges into ruffles. Make as many little baskets as there are guests-to-be. Cover the handles by wrapping the wire with narrow strips of the red paper. Finish with little bows made of baby ribbon or narrow strips of the paper either in red or green. Put the little baskets away with the poinsettia.

Next a few candle or electric light shades are to be made. As the crape paper costs no more when fire-proofed, one should specify the fireproofed variety when buying it. Gather your candle sticks together and place a red candle in each if red shades are to be used. Shades may easily be made of paper doilies in white or paper napkins, with red figures stamped on them, and white candles are better with these.

Cut out card-board disks five and one-fourth inches in diameter with circles cut from the center, two inches in diameter. These rest on the metal shade supports From the paper napkin or doily, cut a circle at the center three and one-half inches in diameter. With a needle and thread gather this up to fit the metal support. Place the doily over the card-board disk and tie the ends of the thread firmly about the metal.

The card-board dish may be covered with red paper pasted on.

The green crape paper remaining is used to cover a few of the cheap print baskets, such as grapes and other fruits come in. These are to be filled with Christmas greens.

As soon as the stores begin showing them, buy a few strands of red tinsel balls and two packages (about six yards) of silver tinsel. Two dozen of the small paper Christmas bells in red and two bolts of red baby ribbon.

One small well-shaped Christmas tree will be needed and then a lot of greenery-boughs that have been cut away in trimming trees, or trees that do not sell readily because not well shaped may be bought for a trifle or these may be procured in this country. The sweet smelling kind add a distinct pleasure to Christmas. Bring your boughs and tree home two or three days before Christmas. Cut the branches from the trunks. With small branches wound to wire with dark cord or heavy thread, make wreaths for pinning to the window curtains.

The door frames leading to the living room and dining room and the window casings are to be covered with greens.

Saw from the end of one of the tree trunks—(which will be from 4 to 6 inches in diameter) a piece 18 inches long for a miniature yule log. The red baby ribbon around each end and suspend from the chandelier or in a doorway. Hang a tiny bowl to represent an old-time kettle over it, using the baby ribbon. The short branches to the chandeliers but do not cover them too thickly with greens. Take the remaining greens and place them in the fruit baskets which you previously covered with green paper. Use holly with them. Set these wherever they look prettiest; n the windows, if the sills are deep enough. Pin a wreath to the curtains at each window. Now all your greens are placed and the red is to be added. The secret of using it effectively is to be sparing with it.

Bring out your poinsettia and place two or three blossoms in a group somewhere in the green about each door and window. Fasten one flower at the top of each wreath. Festoon your little red tinsel balls among the greens at the top of the door by which your guests enter tke living room. Use the remaining ones in groups of two on the Christmas tree.

Decorate the Christmas tree with the silver tinsel and in the manner to which you have been accustomed, for the sake of old times.

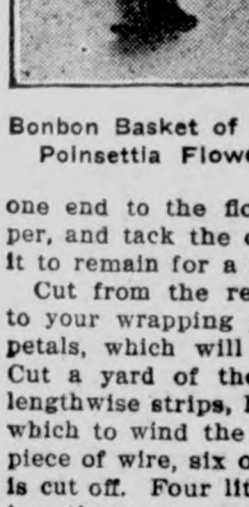
Place the remaining candles on the mantels, piano or on the dressing cases to be used by the guests.

Your decorating is done, and when the lights are lit and begin to glow through the red shades, you will regard the little scene with a heart throb of satisfaction. When the guests arrive all will be put in a lively good humor by the charm of their surroundings. Turn the living room and dining room over to them and proceed to enjoy anything and everything which you have planned or they suggest.

The Fool's Search



THEY are all mad; men, women, children, spinsters and bachelors, floorwalkers and clerks, drivers and delivery boys, it would seem there could be no madder, merrier time.

The funniest things happen, if one only had time to dwell on them and laugh over them, but such enjoyment is denied in these days of strain and struggle.

In a moment of thoughtless good-nature we promised to do the family shopping. Among the thousand and one commissions handed over in immediate response to the thoughtless good-nature was the order for purchase of "The Fool's Calendar." We set forth, a list three-times-forty long in our groaning, much-abused hand-bag, and entered the first shop come upon, in our sub-consciousness feeling that we, like the rest of the jostlers, fitted in pretty well with the title of that calendar. Down the aisle came a rattled-looking, hair-disturbed, generally disturbed gentleman whose province seemed the directing of frenzied fanciers to the respective departments of their fancy, but the Christmas spirit so possessed him he was not quite himself, not able to place his "Madames" and "Sirs." As short-skirted, rose-wreathed hatted, we steered his way, he glanced with wrinkled brow and questioning worry to what might be our demand. "Do you sell calendars here?" We asked in heat of hurry, to which he replied glibly, "Yes, Sir," and never knew he was not using the usual form of address to a woman. He led us then with rapid step to the calendar square, where spread out and uprose floor, roof and pillars of calendars, it would seem every time—chronicler for every taste. And then feeling very like a fool ourselves, we asked in a low voice, "Have you 'The Fool's Calendar?'" "No," says he, "But," and a gleam of keen intellect lights his eye, "We have 'Saints and Sinners.'"

Funny enough was the woman encountered in mid-afternoon entering the much-advertised, much-crowded book-room of a department store in haste to get at the forty-eight centers and thirty-niners; she was high and broad and muscular, an Amazon that need not have put on extra effort to make her way—but the spirit of Christmas—the modern—was strong upon her,—and as we passed her on the way out into blessed out-of-doors, even in our hurry we could not but notice her wild look, her panting breath, her elbows out on defensive and offensive the way in which she marched on, unswervingly, unrelentingly, like an avalanche, toward the bargain books. KATHERINE POPE

"Bound to a Cur."

Some One Must Do It.

J. Pierpont Morgan, at one of the sumptuous dinners that he gave in Cincinnati during the recent church congress, praised the power of advertising.

Mr. Morgan's eulogy concluded with an epigram quite good and quite true enough to be pasted in every businessman's hat.

"If a dealer," he said, "does not advertise his wares, it is ten to one that the sheriff will do it for him."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Wrote His Own Funeral Sermon.

Cedar Falls.—J. C. N. Abbott, aged 94 years and 2 months, passed away. He was the oldest man in Black Hawk county.

Mr. Abbott was a spiritualist, and had been for years. Just before he died he called his niece, Mrs. James Miller, to him and told her of a paper he had carefully laid away. She brought it and he told her it was his funeral address, which he wrote six years ago and had typewritten and laid aside. He wished Mrs. D. N. Hurd to read it at his funeral, as she was a long-time friend of the family. The pastor of the First Congregational church, Rev. Ernest E. Day, offered the prayer. He was a man of clear conviction, philosophical and logical in his reasoning and knew why he believed as he did. All of which is incorporated in this address.

Ministers' Trust Latest in Iowa.

Hampton.—There are meat trusts and doctors' trusts, and steel trusts, but the newest trust is that of the ministers. This trust is formed not so much for making money or saving souls, but to protect the people from impostors that infest the country. The ministers of this city have decided that they would not permit speakers other than of their own denomination to occupy their pulpits, nor permit outside collections to be taken up in their respective churches, nor give recommendations to book agents, except by vote of the Ministers' association.

Woman Dies From Burns.

Muscatine.—Mrs. Tompke Krause, a former resident of Muscatine, who gained considerable prominence following the alleged murder of her husband, met a tragic death in Adrian, Mich., according to word that has just been received by her son, Peter Johnson, 1070 Nebraska street. According to advices, she used kerosene to start a fire and her clothes became ignited. Her body was so severely burned that she died.

Yoke of Oxen in Iowa.

Glenwood.—A yoke of steers, driven on the streets of Glenwood recently by Wilbur Brown, who lately came here from Montana, has created quite a sensation. The steers are part buffalo and part Jersey, having the Jersey coloring and many of the buffalo characteristics. They are well broken and are quite a curiosity. Mr. Brown has offered to place them on exhibition at the coming short course, to be held in Glenwood.

Alta Preacher Cuts His Throat.

Alta.—In a fit of mental aberration Rev. J. O. Kingstrom, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor. When his young wife came downstairs she found him lying dead in a pool of blood. The young preacher was of very nervous temperment and had been in ill health. He had been pastor here for the last two years.

Need School Teachers.

Mason City.—School teachers are not numerous enough to meet the demands and in order to provide the schools with teachers Superintendent Fred Mahannah called a special examination in the hope that he could get some one to try for certificates. Several of the district schools of the country are without teachers.

Trappers Make Good Money.

Estherville.—From a nine days' trapping trip to Fourmile lake, east of the city, Rob Ellis, Frank Koehler, and Allen Aitcheson, residents of Estherville, realized a tidy sum of $180. During that time they caught 192 muskrats, 23 skunks, 7 mink and 2 civit cats. From one skunk den thirteen skunks were taken.

Golden Wedding.

Marshalltown.—Surrounded by their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel R. Strong, old time residents of this county, celebrated their golden wedding at their home near here. Mr. and Mrs. Strong have eight children living, nineteen grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

State Institute Research.

Glenwood.—A department of psychephysiological research has been established at the Iowa state institution for feeble minded, in charge of Dr. P. E. Lange. Iowa is the fourth state to take up this line of investigation. European institutions are in constant correspondence with Dr. Lange concerning his work.

Veteran of Civil War Expires.

Mason City.—Captain Henry I. Smith, a resident of this county since 1854, one of the early county treasurers, founder of the First National bank and its first president, with a war record of the highest order, died here at the age of 70 years, after suffering from a lingering disease since 1899.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING REDUCED

Much has been said about the high cost of living, its causes, and the possibilities of its reduction. But little has been said about the most costly leak: the false economy existing today in nearly every household.

Much foodstuffs are bought with but one point in view: "How cheap can I get it" without a thought of quality or "after cost." One of the most serious is baking powder.

By the use of perfect baking powder the housewife can derive as much economy as from any other article used in baking and cooking. In selecting the baking powder, therefore, care should be exercised to purchase one that retains its original strength and always remains the same, thus making the food sweet and wholesome and producing sufficient leavening gas to make the baking light.

Very little of this leavening gas is produced by the cheap baking powders, making it necessary to use double the quantity ordinarily required to secure good results.

You cannot experiment every time you make a cake or biscuits, or test the strength of your baking powder to find out how much of it you should use; yet with most baking powders you should do this for they are put together so carelessly they are never uniform, the quality and strength varying with each can purchased.

Calumet Baking Powder is made of chemically pure ingredients of tested strength. Experienced chemists put it up. The proportions of the different materials remain always the same. Sealed in air-tight cans, Calumet Baking Powder does not alter in strength and is not affected by atmospheric changes.

In using Calumet you are bound to have uniform bread, cake or biscuits, as Calumet does not contain any cheap, useless or adulterating ingredients so commonly used to increase the weight. Further, it produces pure, wholesome food, and is a baking powder of rare merit; therefore, is recommended by leading physicians and chemists. It complies with all pure food laws, both STATE and NATIONAL. The goods are moderate in price, and any lady purchasing Calumet from her grocer, if not satisfied with it, can return it and have her money refunded.

"Beer" In Kansas.

A certain Kansas editor always puts the word "beer," when printed in his paper, in quotation marks.

"Why do you do that?" a subscriber asked him.

"It is for the same reason," he replied, "that we put quotation marks around the word 'ghost.' We don't believe there are any ghosts."—Kansas City Journal.

NEWSPAPERS TAKING IT UP

Metropolitan Dailies Giving Advice How to Check Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble.

This is a simple home recipe now being made known in all the larger cities through the newspapers. It is intended to check the many cases of Rheumatism and dread kidney trouble which have made so many cripples, invalids and weaklings of some of our brightest and strongest people.

The druggists everywhere, even in the smallest communities, have been notified to supply themselves with the ingredients, and the sufferer will have no trouble to obtain them. The prescription is as follows: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce, and Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle. The dose is one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Recent experiments in hospital cases prove this simple mixture effective in Rheumatism. Because of its positive action upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys, it compels these most vital organs to filter from the blood and system the waste impurities and uric acid which are the cause of rheumatism. It cleanses the kidneys, strengthens them and removes quickly such symptoms as backache, blood disorders, bladder weakness, frequent urination, painful scalding and discolored urine. It acts as a gentle, thorough regulator to the entire kidney structure.

Those who suffer and are accustomed to purchase a bottle of medicine should not let a little inconvenience interfere with making this up, or have your druggist do it for you.

Preparing for the Trip

"It is almost time for me to be going," said Mrs. Binxley's caller, "for George will be waiting for me and mademoiselle will be there to give us our French lesson."

"I didn't know you were studying French," remarked Mrs. Binxley.

"Yes, we've been taking lessons for the last month. We sail July 1, you know."

"I should hardly think two months of French would benefit you perceptibly," observed Mrs. Binxley.

"But we are getting on beautifully," returned hed friend. "Mademoiselle is the dearest thing! How she does work with us! She will carry a chair out of the room, asking, in French of course, 'What am I doing now?' And we answer her, 'you take out the chair.' Then she will bring it back, inquiring, 'What am I doing now?' and we reply: 'You bring in the chair,' and so on. George says she has carried out and brought back everything in the room except the piano. It's a lovely way to learn a language, for we are not bothered with books."

"You are not going to engage in the business of moving furniture while you are abroad, are you?" asked Mrs. Binxley.

"Of course not, but think of all the words we are adding to our French vocabulary."

"If you are anxious to study French in that way, it seems to me it would be practical to have your teacher represent a dressmaker who has spoiled a garment for you and learn to express in a few emphatic and incisive words your intention to throw the dress back on her hands unless suitable alterations are made."

"But French dressmakers—modistes I suppose I should call them—never make misfits," suggested the caller.

"Don't they?" exclaimed Mrs. Binxley. "If you could see a princess gown that I bought in Paris, with a back seam that started on the right path, but was lured to one side, you would think French modistes do make misfits."

"Then I shall ask mademoiselle what to say when one wants changes made in a dress," said the caller. "My dear, if you had studied the language before you sailed you would have saved yourself both money and vexation."

"We had three months of French before we went over," replied Mrs. Binxley. "My husband had studied Latin in his youth, which he said was a great help to him in speaking French, and he was quite proud of his ability in that line—before he went to France. He hasn't mentioned it since."

"Didn't he know how to make use of his knowledge?"

"He had a perfect genius for saying the wrong thing," declared Mrs. Binxley. "He got us into trouble more than once. One night when we were traveling through the south of France Mr. Binxley went to the ticket office to have our tickets vised when the train stopped at Narbonne, I believe it was. I never did learn what he said, but several of the officials came to the window of our compartment as angry as so many hornets and all talking at once. I thought of the way the French people acted during their revolution and my blood ran cold."

"How did it end?" asked the caller.

"There was a little American woman asleep in one corner of our compartment who, awakened by the noise, spoke French so rapidly for a few minutes that she must have made even those natives dizzy. She seemed to have explained whatever it was and they slunk away without another word. I asked her what it was all about, but she was grumpy and sleepy and not inclined to conversation."

"Didn't you ask your husband what he had said to make those men so angry?"

"Yes, but he did not seem to know. He evidently had used the wrong words."

"I will have mademoiselle arrange a hypothetical argument with railway officials," remarked the caller, thoughtfully.

"I would," advised Mrs. Binxley, "and be sure to have her explain the difference between a 'jupe' and a 'jupon,' for you will need the words in shopping."

"This conversation reminds me of a dream I had last night," said the caller. "I thought I was in Paris and that mademoiselle, dressed as a tight-rope walker, was tripping gayly over a wire that reached from the Louvre to the Place de la Concorde. When she caught sight of me she swung by one toe, calling out: 'What am I doing now?'

"Thousands of people seemed to be waiting for my answer. As I did not know the French word for swinging and had forgotten the French word for toe, I woke in great trepidation.

"It gets on one's nerves dreadfully to study a foreign language."

MIX THIS FOR RHEUMATISM

Easily Prepared and Inexpensive and Really Does the Work, Says Noted Authority.

Thousands of men and women who have felt the sting and torture of that dread disease, Rheumatism, which is no respecter of age, persons, sex, color or rank, will be interested to know that it is one of the easiest afflictions of the human body to conquer. Medical science has proven it not a distinct disease in itself, but a symptom caused by inactive kidneys. Rheumatism is uric acid in the blood and other waste products of the system which should be filtered and strained out in the form of urine. The function of the kidneys is to sift these poisons and acids out and keep the blood clean and pure. The kidneys however, are of sponge-like substance, the holes or pores of which will sometimes, either from overwork, cold or exposure become clogged, and failing in their function of eliminating these poisons from the blood, they remain in the veins, decompose and settling about the joints and muscles, cause the untold suffering and pain of rheumatism and backache, often producing complications of bladder and urinary disease, and general weakness.

The following simple prescription is said to relieve the worst cases of rheumatism because of its direct action upon the blood and kidneys, relieving, too, the most severe forms of bladder and urinary troubles: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. The ingredients can be had from any prescription pharmacy, and are absolutely harmless and safe to use at any time.

ECOMONY IS URGED IN TAFT MESSAGE

PRESIDENT POINTS OUT NECESSITY OF CURTAILING EXPENSES TO LAWMAKERS.

ANNUAL DOCUMENT IS READ

Conservation, Ship Subsidy and Fortification of Panama Canal Leading Topics Discussed—Has Little to Say About Tariff.

Washington, Dec. 6.—Economy in government affairs is the keynote of President Taft's annual message read before both houses of congress today. The message approximates 40,000 words and is one of the longest ever submitted by a president.

Conservation of the public domain, ship subsidy, fortification of the Panama canal and the continuation of the present tariff board are the leading subjects touched upon. He also reviews the work of the various government departments and concurs in recommendation, tending toward the bettering of the service, made by several of the members of his cabinet.

Economy Is Urged.

In dwelling on the urgent need for economy in government expenditures, the president says: "Every effort has been made by each department chief to reduce the estimated cost of his department for the ensuing fiscal year ending June 30, 1912. I say this in order that congress may understand that these estimates thus made present the smallest sum which will maintain the departments, bureaus and offices of the government and meet its other obligations under existing law, and that a cut of these estimates would result in embarrassing the executive branch of the government in the performance of its duties. This remark does not apply to the river and harbor estimates, except to those for expenses of maintenance and the meeting of obligations under authorized contracts, nor does it apply to the public building bill nor to the navy building program. Of course, as to these congress could withhold any part or all of the estimates for them without interfering with the discharge of the ordinary obligations of these functions of its departments, bureaus and offices.

"Against the estimates of expenditures $640,494,013.12, we have estimated receipts for next year $680,000,000, making a probable surplus of ordinary receipts over ordinary expenditures of about $50,000,000, or taking into account the estimates for the Panama canal, which are $56,920,847.69, and which will ultimately be paid in bonds, it will leave a deficit for the next year of about $7,000,000, if congress shall conclude to fortify the canal."

Wants Forest Limitation Removed.

On the subject of conservation he devotes considerable space to forest, coal, oil and gas, phosphate lands and water power sites. As to the reservation of forest lands he says: "The law now prohibits the reservation of any more forest lands in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Colorado and Wyoming, except by act of congress. I am informed by the department of agriculture that the government owns other tracts of timber land in these states which should be included in the forest reserves. I recommend to congress that the limitation herein imposed be repealed.

"Congress ought to trust the executive to use the power of reservation only with respect to land most valuable for forest purposes. During the present administration, 62,250,000 acres of land largely non-timbered have been excluded from forest reserves, and 3,500,000 acres of land principally valuable for forest purposes have been included in forest reserves, making a reduction in forest reserves of non-timbered land amounting to 2,750,000 acres."

Wants Canal Fortified.

Regarding the Panama canal, the president asserts that unless unexpected obstacles arise the waterway will be completed well within time limit of January 1, 1915, and within estimate of cost, $375,000,000. Suggestions for levying of tolls and management are made, and regarding fortification of the canal, he says:

"Among questions arising for present solution is the decision whether the canal shall be fortified. I have already stated to the congress that I strongly favor fortification and I now reiterate this opinion and ask your consideration of the subject in the light of the report already before you made by a competent board.

"Failure to fortify the canal would leave the attainment of both these aims in the position of rights and obligations which we should be powerless to enforce and which could never in any way be absolutely safeguarded against a desperate and irresponsible enemy."

Ship Subsidy.

The president urges such action as he believes will increase American trade abroad, and says::

"Another instrumentality indispensable to the unhampered and natural development of American commerce is merchant marine. All maritime and commercial nations recognize the importance of this factor. The greatest commercial nations, our competitors, jealously foster their merchant marine. Perhaps nowhere is the need for rapid and direct mail, passenger and freight communication quite so urgent as between the United States and Latin America. We can secure in no other quarter of the world such immediate benefits in friendship and commerce as would flow from the establishment of direct lines of communication with the countries of Latin America adequate to meet the requirements of a rapidly increasing appreciation of the reciprocal dependence of the countries of the western hemisphere upon each other's products, sympathies and assistance.

"I alluded to this most important subject in my last annual message; it has often been before you and I need not recapitulate the reasons for its recommendation. Unless prompt action be taken the completion of the Panama canal will find this the only great commercial nation unable to avail in international maritime business of this great contribution to the means of the world's commercial intercourse."

Criticism of the Tariff.

In the space devoted to the tariff the president says:

"The schedules of the rates of duty in the Payne tariff act have been subjected to a great deal of criticism, some of it just, more of it unfounded, and too much misrepresentation. The act was adopted in pursuance of a declaration by the party which is responsible for it that customs bill should be a tariff for the protection of home industries, the measure of the protection to be the difference between the cost of producing the imported article abroad and the cost of producing it at home, together with such addition to that difference as might give a reasonable profit to the home producer. The basis for the criticism of this tariff is that in respect to a number of the schedules the declared measure was not followed, but a higher difference retained or inserted by way of undue discrimination in favor of certain industries and manufactures. Little, if any, of the criticism of the tariff has been directed against the protective principle above stated; but the main body of the criticism has been based on the attempt to conform to the measure of protection was not honestly and sincerely adhered to."

The president also refers to the appointment of a board of experts to investigate the cost of production of various articles included in the schedules of the tariff, and concludes:

"Whether or not the protective policy is to be continued, and the degree of protection to be accorded to our home industries, are questions which the people must decide through their chosen representatives. But whatever policy is adopted, it is clear that the necessary legislation should be based on an impartial, thorough and continuous study of the facts."

Recommends Parcels Post.

The adoption of the parcels post is again adopted. On this subject President Taft says: "With respect to the parcels post, I respectfully recommend its adoption on all rural delivery routes, and that 11 pounds—the international limit—be made the limit of carriage in such post. The same argument is made against the parcels post that was made against the postal savings bank—that it is introducing the government into a business which should be conducted by private persons and is paternalism. The postoffice department has a great plant and a great organization, reaching into the most remote hamlet of the United States, and with this machinery it is able to do a great many things economically that if a new organization were necessary it would be impossible to do without extravagant expenditures."

Department of Justice.

Discussing the affairs of the department of justice, the president says:

"I invite especial attention to the prosecutions under the federal law of the so-called 'bucket shops,' and of those schemes to defraud in which the use of the mail is an essential part of the fraudulent conspiracy, prosecutions which have saved ignorant and weak members of the public and are saving them hundreds of millions of dollars. The violations of the anti-trust law present perhaps the most important litigation before the department, and the number of cases filed shows the activity of the government in enforcing that statute.

"In a special message last year I brought to the attention of congress the propriety and wisdom of enacting a general law providing for the incorporation of industrial and other companies engaged in interstate commerce, and I renew my recommendation in that behalf."

The crying need in the United States of cheapening the cost of litigation by simplifying judicial procedure and expediting final judgment is pointed out and action looking to correction of these evils is urged.

The president recommends an increase in the salaries of federal judges.

Postal Affairs.

In regard to postal matters the president points with pride to its present efficient management and the recent reduction in the deficit. The present unrestricted franking privilege comes in for comment with a suggestion for the adoption of better methods for its regulation.

Abolish Navy Yards.

The president calls attention to certain reforms urged by the secretary of the navy which he recommends for adoption, and continues:

"The secretary of the navy has given personal examination to every navy yard, and has studied the uses of the navy yards with reference to the necessities of our fleet. With a fleet considerably less than half the size of that of the British navy, we have shipyards more than double the number, and there are several of these shipyards expensively equipped with modern mchinery, which, after investigation the secretary of the navy believes to be entirely useless for naval purposes. He asks authority to abandon certain of them and to move their machinery to other places, where it can be made of use."

Speaking of our foreign relations the president says: "During the past year the foreign relations of the United States have continued upon a basis of friendship and good understanding.

"The year has been notable as witnessing the pacific settlement of two important international controversies before the permanent court of The Hague.

"The arbitration of the fisheries dispute between the United States and Great Britain, which has been the source of nearly continuous diplomatic correspondence since the fisheries convention of 1818, has given an award which is satisfactory to both parties. This arbitration is particularly noteworthy not only because of the eminently just results secured, but also because it is the first arbitration held under the general arbitration treaty of April 4, 1908, between the United States and Great Britain, and disposes of a controversy the settlement of which has resisted every other resource of diplomacy and which for nearly ninety years has been the cause of friction between two countries whose common interest lies in maintaining the most friendly and cordial relations with each other.

President Taft makes a few recommendations for changes in the interstate commerce law and says:

"Except as above, I do not recommend any amendment to the interstate commerce law as it stands. I do not now recommend any amendment to the anti-trust law. In other words, it seems to me that the existing legislation with reference to the regulation of corporations and the restraint of their business has reached a point where we can stop for a while and witness the effect of the vigorous execution of the laws of the statute books in restraining the abuses which certainly did exist and which roused the public to demand reform."

Benny on Benevolence.

Benevolence is a great thing. When you have benevolence you cannot rest until you do something to make other people feel grateful to you. The other day my mamma went up into the attic to find a lot of old clothes to give to poor people who could not afford to buy any clothing for themselves. While she was hunting around she found a gold-headed cane worth $25 that grandpa had put up there 18 years ago, and forgot all about. Thus we see, dear friends, benevolence brings its own reward.—Benny.

An Unmistakable Hint.

"What was it?"

16 YEARS OF SKIN DISEASE

"For sixteen long years I have been suffering with a bad case of skin disease. While a child there broke out a red sore on the legs just in back of my knees. It waxed from bad to worse, and at last I saw I had a bad skin disease. I tried many widely known doctors in different cities but to no satisfactory result. The plague bothered me more in warm weather than in winter and being on my leg joints it made it impossible for me to walk, and I was forced to stay indoors in the warmest weather. My hopes of recovery were by this time spent. Sleepless nights and restless days made life an unbearable burden. At last I was advised to try the Cuticura remedies [Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills] and I did not need more than a tria to convince me that I was on the road of success this time. I bought two sets of the Cuticura Remedies and after these were gone I was a different man entirely. I am now the happiest man that there is at least one true care for skin diseases. Leonard A. Hawtof, 11 Nostrand Ave., Brooklyn, N .Y., July 30 and Aug. 8, '09."

Discouraging.

"George," said her husband's wife, "I don't believe you have smoked one of those cigars I gave you on your birthday."

"That's right, my dear," replied his wife's husband. "I'm going to keep them until our Willie wants to learn to smoke."

Time to Think Over Suicide.

He took paris green to commit suicide. Too big a dose to kill him. Eminent specialist happened to be called in, and started to fix him up. "No use," said paris green performer, "I'll do it anyhow after you have done with me." Doctor got mad. "If that's the way you feel about it, you fool," he said, "I'll not waste my time on you." Paris green performer much astonished and grieved. "Well," he said, "give me 24 hours to think it over." Doctor gave him 24 hours and went away. At the end of the time paris green performer telephoned: "I've thought it over and want to get well; come and see me some more."

YOUR STOMACH FEELS FINE.

Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sourness, Gas and All Stomach Misery Ended In Five Minutes.

This harmless preparation will promptly digest anything you eat and overcome a sick, sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Get from any drug store here in town a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain regulator for out-of-order stomachs, and besides it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

Remember, if your stomach feels out of order and uncomfortable now, you can get relief in five minutes by taking a little Diapepsin.

It is no use praying to be a sun if you are not burning the little lamp you have.

WHY?

Because it is right at the edge of Greater Jacksonville, the fastest growing city in the country. Jacksonville Heights farms begin one mile from where land is selling in town lots at the rate of $3,250.00 per acre.

Because it was practically the first of all the Florida colonies to develop and settle—on account of its unsurpassed soil, location, altitude and cheapest shipping facilities.

Because 2700 farms have been sold to date and a population of about 700 souls sprung up in one year—and the lands are now settling at the rate of 40 families per month.

Because the Purchasers of Jacksonville Heights Lands Have Made Good

Settlers and farmers have succeeded. Prices and values have advanced—four schools have been erected. Hard surface roads constructed. Telephone line established connecting up with Jacksonville local telephone. Hotel buildings erected. 210 farms fenced and being developed all in a little over one year.

Because it is the Closest Colony to the Best and Fastest Growing City in Florida

We opened up our sale on April, 1909, at $20.00 per acre. We have about 200 tracts left, now selling at the advanced price of $30.00 per acre subject to another advance January 1st, 1911.

Write today to Jacksonville Heights Improvement Company, 122 Hogan Street, Jacksonville, Florida, for full particulars.

Investigate the proposition and the personnel of the Company through any channel you wish.

We will only sell out our remaining tracts and we cannot enlarge; we can only sell what land we now have on hand.

All large tracts beyond us have been gobbled up by big syndicates.

Give Us a Rest

The political bosses in Iowa are not disposed to give the people a rest from politics and are now agitating a special primary for the selection of a successor to the late Senator Dolliver. The plan of putting it up to the voters is alright ordinarily but to tax an expense of $50,000 or more onto the state for a special primary looks like an expensive luxury. Let the legislature elect as provided by law; then let the people make their choice at the regular primary election in 1912. The progressives seem to be uniting on Byers and the standpatters on Young. Either man will do for the remainder of the Dolliver term. They are both boosters, but of course have largely different political views. It looks like the members of the legislature wanted to dodge the issue They ought to be near enough to their constituents to know how they should vote on the question.

If you are suffering from biliousness, constipation, indigestion, chronic headache, invest one cent in a postal card, send to Chamberlain Medicine Co., Des Moines, Iowa, with your address plainly on the back, and they will forward you a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. BIG FIRE LOSS

Charley Busch Loses His Large Barn and Nine Head of Fine Cattle—Origin of the Fire Is Unknown.

Charles F. Busch suffered a heavy loss by fire last Friday afternoon, when the large barn on his farm a mile southeast of town was totally destroyed, together with nine head of cattle which were in the barn at the time. Close to the barn were several sheds and a silo, which were saved by efforts of the neighbors and men from town who got to the scene as quickly as possible. The silo was badly burned but we understand that the ensilage was mostly saved. The sheds and the house caught fire several times but through the efforts of those present these buildings were saved. The origin of the fire is unknown. Charley had purchased the nine head of cattle at the Gibbs sale the day before and had just gotten them home the day of the fire.

The loss is fairly well covered by insurance.

I desire to publicly express my thanks to the neighbors and friends who so ably assisted me in saving my property on the day of the fire. Your kindness and assistance is deeply appreciated. Chas. F. Busch.

The Great Walden Coming Soon

One of Professor Walden's new illusions this year is the Magic Bricks. A most puzzling mystery. A case of where an object may occupy several places at the same time, and again be no place at all. A gentleman who witnessed a recent Walden performance in Florida assured us that the entertainment is one of the best in this line he ever saw, It is very entertaining for young and old.

Mr. Walden the past season traveled over 17,000 miles being in twenty-two different states. The press in all places speak in the most flattering terms of him.

See Walden at the Klemme Opera House, Thursday evening. Dec. 8th—Second number of High School Lecture Course. Don't miss it.

Most Important Happenings Told in Brief.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Elizabeth Allen, aged eighty-seven years, a wealthy widow, was found strangled to death at her home at Shirley, W. Va. A large sum of money which she had in the house is missing.

Edward A. Smith, brother-in-law of Philander C. Knox and a brother of the late Frank B. Smith, president of the Crucible Steel company, died of heart trouble in a taxicab in Pittsburg, Pa., while his son was hurrying him to a hospital.

Harry Lane Wilson, United States ambassador at Mexico City, has applied to the state department for leave of absence from his post. This is interpreted as indicative that conditions in Mexico are approaching a normal state.

Willie Hoppe, the world's champion at 18.1 and 18.2 balkline billiards, overwhelmingly defeated George Slosson in their championship tourney at New York City. Hoppe, by his victory, retains his championship, and with it a purse of $1,000 and the diamond championship medal.

E. M. Heigho, president of the Pacific, Idaho & Northern railroad, charged with manslaughter at Caldwell, Idaho, was acquitted.

Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the president, made her bow to American society under auspices and conditions which were matchless in their brilliance and enthusiasm. This latest bud in the historic bouquet of White House debutantes was formally presented at a tea given in the famous East room where so many notable social events have occurred.

When William J. Bryan's admirers attempted to hang his picture beside Taft's and Governor Haskell's in Oklahoma senate chamber, Lieut. Gov. Bellamy declared "never while I am in the chair," and the picture was turned to the wall on the floor.

Gov.-Elect Eugene N. Foss began his speaking campaign against the return of Henry Cabot Lodge to the United States senate at Provincetown, Mass.

Governor Carroll of Iowa, concealing his identity by means of a slouch hat and a coat collar turned up, plunged into a burning house at Des Moines and brought out a trunk highly valued by an aged woman.

GENERAL NEWS.

Leads to amazing revelations concerning the boodling operations of the racetrack lobby at Albany, N. Y., were opened by the joint legislative investigating committee. Based upon estimates made by members of the committee it seems likely that before the inquiry is closed it will be shown that more than $1,000,000 was raised by the racetrack interests in 1908 to defeat the Agnew-Hart law.

Fifteen persons were seriously injured when a Missouri Pacific passenger train was wrecked two miles east of Knobnoster, Mo. The wreck was caused by a broken rail.

Police Commissioner Flynn of New York announced that the body found in a trunk in the cellar of a West side house recently has been identified positively as that of Albert C. Calliar, the missing artist. The trunk was left by William Lewis, a waiter, who is missing.

The Ulster Unionist council of Belfast, Ireland, decided, in view of the Irish political crisis, to invite tenders for the immediate delivery of arms and ammunition.

The Berlin Academy of Sciences elected Prof. Lewis Boss, the astronomer and since 1876 director of Dudley observatory at Albany, N. Y., a corresponding member.

The country home of Mrs. C. L. Koch, just outside Quincy, Ill., was burned. It was a historic place and the old mahogany furniture it contained had been collected piece by piece by the late Doctor Koch.

Reports to the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor show increased receipts of cattle and sheep and a shortage of hogs at the seven leading interior markets.

$3.50 RECIPE CURES WEAK KIDNEYS, FREE

RELIEVES URINARY AND KIDNEY TROUBLES, BACKACHE, STRAINING, SWELLING, ETC.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a QUICK RECOVERY, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K-255 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

Through.

"You are an optimist?"

"I am," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "I not only hope for the best, but I make practical arrangements to get it."

Anything that interferes with good health is apt to keep cheerfulness and good humor in the background. A Washington lady found that letting coffee alone made things bright for her. She writes:

"Four years ago I was practically given up by my doctor and was not expected to live long. My nervous system was in a bad condition.

"But I was young and did not want to die so I began to look about for the cause of my chronic trouble. I used to have nervous spells which would exhaust me and after each spell it would take me days before I could sit up in a chair.

"I became convinced my trouble was caused by coffee. I decided to stop it and bought some Postum.

"The first cup, which I made according to directions, had a soothing effect on my nerves and I liked the taste. For a time I nearly lived on Postum and ate little food besides. I am today a healthy woman.

"My family and relatives wonder if I am the same person I was four years ago, when I could do no work on account of nervousness. Now I am doing my own housework, take care of two babies—one twenty the other two months old. I am so busy that I hardly get time to write a letter, yet I do it all with the cheerfulness and good humor that comes from enjoying good health.

"I tell my friends it is to Postum I owe my life today."

WENDLING IS GUILTY

Jury Declares Louisville Man Murdered Little Alma Kellner

GETS LIFE TERM SENTENCE

"They Should Either Send Me to th Electric Chair or Turn Me Free," Says Prisoner, When Verdict Is Announced.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 5.—Joseph Wendling was found guilty by a jury of the murder of 8-year-old Alma Kellner and his punishment fixed at life imprisonment. The jury was given the case at 6:20 o'clock Saturday afternoon and announced their verdict at 10:10. Wendling was talking to his wife, Mrs. Madeline Wendling when the verdict was announced. He remained perfectly calm.

"I either killed the little girl or I didn't," said Wendling. "They should either send me to the electric chair or turn me free."

The verdict came after a day spent in arguments by the attorneys and the reading of the instructions by Judge Gregory. Although there were four possible verdicts the jury might have returned under the instructions of the court, the verdict was merely "murder."

The evidence presented against Wendling was purely circumstantial. Since his arrest and throughout his trial he denied any knowledge of the fate of the Kellner child. Witnesses testified, however, that Wendling, then janitor of St. John's Catholic church was seen in the church the morning Alma Kellner last went there to mass. The child was never seen again and months later the charred and dismembered portions of her body were found hidden beneath the church music room.

Alma Kellner was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kellner, of this city, and a niece of Frank Fehr, millionaire brewer who spent much time and money in the search for the child, and in the prosecution of Wendling. Alma Kellner was last seen in St. John's Catholic church Dec. 8, 1909 where she had gone for mass. When she failed to return home after several hours her family became alarmed and notified the police.

On May 30 the mutilated body of a child was found in a cellar under the music room of the church. The body was accepted by the Kellner family as that of their child. Circumstantial evidence pointed to Joseph Wendling, former janitor of the church, who had disappeared on Jan. 14, as the murderer.

A search was started for him, which led to New Orleans, through Texas and finally to California where he was captured on June 30, the arrest being made in San Francisco.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE HEAD DIES

Natural Causes and Pneumonia Bring End to Mrs. Mary Baker Glover Eddy, 90 Years Old.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 5.—Mrs. Mary Baker Glover Eddy, the discoverer and founder of Christian Science, is dead. Announcement of the passing of the venerable leader, which occurred late Saturday night at her home at Chestnut hill, was made at the morning service of the mother church in this city yesterday.

"Natural causes" explains the death, according to Dr. George L. West, a district medical examiner, who was summoned a few hours after Mrs. Eddy passed away. Later Dr. West added that the more immediate cause probably was pneumonia.

"Hello, Obadiah! Hello—Hello!" He Called Cheerfully.

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

SYNOPSIS.

Capt. Nathaniel Plum, of the sloop Typhoon, lands secretly on Beaver island, stronghold of the Mormons. He is suddenly confronted by Obadiah Price, an eccentric old man and a member of the Mormon council, who tells him that he is suspected. Price ignores Nat's protestations that he has got the wrong man, and bargains for the ammunition aboard the sloop. He binds Nat by a solemn oath to deliver a package to Franklin Pierce, president of the United States. Near Price's cabin Nat sees the frightened face of a young woman who disappears in the darkness, leaving an odor of lilacs. It develops that Plum's visit to the island is to demand settlement from the king, Strang, for the looting of his ship some time previously, supposedly by Mormons. Casey, the mate, has been left in charge of the sloop with orders to bombard St. James if Nat does not return within a certain time. Price takes Nat in the darkness, to the king's home, and through a window he sees the king and his wives, among whom is the lady of the lilacs, whom Price says is the seventh wife. Plum calls at the king's office, where he is warned by a young woman that his life is in danger. Strang receives Plum cordially, professes indignation when he hears the captain's grievance, and promises to punish the guilty. Plum again receives warning of his danger. He rescues Neil, who is being publicly whipped. The king orders Arbor Croche, the sheriff and father of Winnsome, the girl who warned Nat, to pursue and kill the two men. Plum and Neil plan to escape on the Typhoon. Plum learns that Marion, the girl of the lilacs, is Neil's sister. She is not yet married to Strang. Plum suggests carrying her off on the ship. Neil approves. They agree to include Winnsome, with whom Price is in love, in the enterprise. Nat discovers that the sloop is gone. He meets Marion and tells her that Neil has left the island. The thunder of a gun is heard and Marion tells him his ship has been captured by the Mormons. She pleads with him to leave the island and prevent her brother from returning. She says nothing can save her from Strang.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

She surrendered to the determination in his voice and they moved slowly along the path, listening for any sound that might come from ahead of them. Nathaniel had already formed his plan of action. From Marion's words and the voice in which she had uttered them he knew that it would be useless for him as it had been for Neil to urge her to flee from the island. There remained but one thing for him to do, so he fell back upon the scheme which he had proposed to Marion's brother. He realized now that he might be compelled to play the game single-handed unless he could secure assistance from Obadiah. His ship and men were in the hands of the Mormons; Neil, in his search for the captured vessel, stood a large chance of missing him that night, and in that event Marion's fate would depend on him alone. If he could locate a small boat on the beach back of Obadiah's; if he could in some way lure Marion to it— He gave an involuntary shudder at the thought of using force upon the girl at his side, at the thought of her terror of those first few moments, her struggles, her broken confidence. She believed in him now. She believed that he loved her. She trusted him. The warm soft pressure of her hand as it clung to his arm in the blackening gloom of the forest was evidence of that trust. She looked into his face anxiously, inquiringly when they stopped to listen, like a child who was sure of a stronger spirit at her side. She held her breath when he held his, she listened when he listened, her feet fell with velvet stillness when he stepped with caution. Her confidence in him was like a beautiful dream to Nathaniel and he trembled when he pictured the destruction of it. After a little he reached over and as if by accident touched the hand that was lying on his arm; he dared more after a moment, and drew the warm little fingers into his great strong palm and held them there, his soul thrilled by their gentle submissiveness. And then in another breath there came to still his joy a thought of the terrible power that chained this girl to the Mormon king. He longed to speak words of encouragement to her, to instil hope in her bosom, to ask her to confide in him the secret of the shadow which hung over her, but the memory of what Neil had said to him held his lips closed.

They had walked in silence for many minutes when the girl stopped.

"It is not very far now," she whispered. "You must go!"

"Only a little farther," he begged.

She surrendered again, hesitatingly, and they went on, more slowly than before, until they came to where the path met the footway that led to Obadiah's.

"Now—now you must go," whispered Marion again.

In this last moment Nathaniel crushed her hand against his breast, his body throbbing with a wild tumult, and a half of what he had meant not to say fell passionately from his lips.

"Forgive me for—that—back—there—Marion," he whispered. "It was because I love you—love you—" He freed her hand and stood back, choking the words that would have revealed his secret. He lied now for the love of this girl. "Neil is out there waiting for me in a small boat," he continued, pointing beyond Obadiah's to the lake. "I will see him soon, and then I will return to Obadiah's to tell you if he has left for the mainland. Will you promise to meet me there—tonight?"

"I will promise."

"At midnight—"

"Yes, at 12 o'clock."

This time it was Marion who came to him. Her eyes shone like stars.

"And if you make Neil go to the mainland," she said softly, "when I meet you I will—will tell you—something."

The last word came in a breathless sob. As she slipped into the path that led to St. James she paused for a moment and called back, in a low voice: "Tell Neil that he must go for Winnsome's sake. Tell him that her fate is shortly to be as cruel as mine—tell him that Winnsome loves him, and that she will escape and come to him on the mainland. Tell him to go—go!"

She turned again, and Nathaniel stood like a statue, hardly breathing, until the sound of her feet had died away. Then he walked swiftly up the foot path that led to Obadiah's. He forgot his own danger in the excitement that pulsated with every fiber of his being, forgot his old caution and the fears that gave birth to it—forgot everything in those moments but Marion and his own great happiness. Neil's absence meant nothing to him now. He had held Marion in his arms, he had told her of his love, and though she had accepted it with gentle unresponsiveness he was thrilled by the memory of that last look in her eyes, which had spoken faith, confidence, and perhaps even more. What was that something she would tell him if he got Neil safely away? It was to be a reward for his own loyalty—he knew that, by the half fearing tremble of her voice, the sobbing catch of her breath, the strange glow in her eyes. With her brother away she would confide in him? Would she tell him the secret of her slavedom to Strang? Nathaniel was conscious of no madness in the wild hope that filled him; nothing seemed impossible to him now. Marion would meet him at midnight. She would go with him to the boat, and then—ah, he had solved the problem! He would use no force. He would tell her that Neil was in his canoe half a mile out from the shore and that he had promised to leave the island for good if she would go out to bid him good-by. And once there, a half a mile or a mile away, he would tell her that he had lied to her; and he would give her his heart to trample upon to prove the love that had made him do this thing, and then he would row her to the mainland.

It was the sight of Obadiah's cabin that brought his caution back. He came upon it so suddenly that an exclamation of surprise fell unguarded from his lips. There was no light to betray life within. He tried the door and found it locked. He peered in at the windows, listened, and knocked, and at last concealed himself near the path, confident that the little old councilor was still at St. James. For an hour he waited. From the rear of Obadiah's home a narrow footway led toward the lake and Nathaniel followed it, now as warily as an animal in search of prey. For half a mile it took him through the forest and ended at the white sands of the beach. In neither direction could Nathaniel see a light, and keeping close in the shadows of the trees he made his way slowly toward St. James. He had gone but a short distance when he saw a house directly ahead of him, a single gleam of light from a small window telling him that it was inhabited and that its tenants were at home. He circled down close to the water looking for a boat. His heart leaped with sudden exultation when he saw a small skiff drawn upon the beach and his joy was doubled at finding the oars still in the locks. It took him but a moment to shove the light craft into the sea and a minute later he was rowing swiftly away from the land.

Nathaniel was certain that by this time Neil had abandoned his search for the captured Typhoon and was probably paddling in the direction of St. James. With the hope of intercepting him he pulled an eighth of a mile from the shore and rowed slowly toward the head of the island. There was no moon, but countless stars glowed in a clear sky and upon the open lake Nathaniel could see for a considerable distance about him. For another hour he rowed back and forth and then beached his boat within a dozen rods of the path that came down from Obadiah's.

It was 10 o'clock. Two more hours! He had tried to suppress his excitement, his apprehension, his eagerness, but now as he went back into the darkness of the forest they burst out anew. What if Marion should not keep the tryst? He thought of the spies whom Neil had said guarded the girl's home—and of Obadiah. Could he trust the old councilor? Should he confide his plot to him and ask his assistance? As the minutes passed and these thoughts recurred again and again in his brain he could not keep the nervousness from growing within him. He was sure now that he would have to fight his battle without Neil. He saw the necessity of coolness, of judgment, and he began to demand these things of himself, struggling sternly against those symptoms of weakness which had replaced his confidence of a short time before. Gradually he fought himself back into his old faith. He would save Marion—without Neil, without Obadiah. If Marion did not come to him by midnight it would be because of the guards against whom Neil had warned him, and he would go to her. In some way he would get her to the boat, even if he had to fight his way through Arbor Croche's men.

With this return of confidence Nathaniel's thoughts reverted to his present greatest need, which was food. Since early morning he had eaten nothing and he began to feel the physical want in a craving that was becoming acutely uncomfortable. If Obadiah had not returned to his home he made up his mind that he would find entrance to the cabin and help himself. A sudden turn in the path which he was following, however, revealed one of the councilor's windows aglow with light, and as he pressed quietly around the end of the building the sound of a low voice came to him through the open door. Cautiously he approached and peered in. A large oil lamp, the light of which he had seen in the window, was burning on a table in the big room but the voice came from the little closet into which Obadiah had taken him the preceding night. For several minutes he crouched and listened. He heard the chuckling laugh of the old councilor—and then an incoherent raving that set his blood tingling. There is a horror in the sound of madness, a horror that creeps to the very pit of one's soul, that sends shivering dread from every nerve center, that causes one who is alone with it to sweat with a nameless fear. It was the voice of madness that came from that little room. Before it Nathaniel quailed as if a clammy hand had reached out from the darkness and gripped him by the throat. He drew back shivering in every limb, and the voice followed him, shrieking now in a sudden burst of insane mirth and dying away a moment later in a hollow cackling laugh that seemed to curdle the blood in his veins. Mad! Obadiah Price was mad! Step by step Nathaniel fell back from the door. He felt himself trembling from head to foot. His heart thumped within his breast like the beating of a hammer. For an instant there was silence—a silence in which strange dread held him breathless while he watched the glow in the door and listened. And after that quiet there came suddenly a cry that ended in the exultant chattering of a name.

At the sound of that name Nathaniel sprang forward again. It was Marion's name and he strained his ears to catch the words that might follow it. As he listened, his head thrust half in at the door, Obadiah's voice became lower and lower, until at last it ceased entirely. Not a step, not a deep breath, not the movement of a hand disturbed the stillness of the little room. By inches Nathaniel drew himself inside the door. His heavy boot caught in a sliver on the step but the rending of wood brought no response. It was the quiet of death that pervaded the cabin, it was a strange, growing fear of death that entered Nathaniel as he now hurried across the room and peered through the narrow aperture. The old councilor was half stretched upon the table, his arms reaching out, his long, thin fingers gripping its edges, his face buried under his shoulders. It looked as if death had come suddenly to him during some terrible convulsion, but after a moment Nathaniel saw that he was breathing. He went over and placed a hand on the old man's twisted back.

"Hello, Obadiah! Hello—hello!" he called cheerfully.

Haunted by Wills.

"The wills I have witnessed sometimes rise up to haunt me," said the nurse. "Such pathetic little testaments many of them are. They are mostly by people in the free wards. They haven't much to will away, these non-paying patients, but what few trifles they do possess are precious, and there is some person still more precious to inherit them.

"Making a will is postponed in most cases until the hospital stage of sickness is reached, but if a man is able to think at all he imagines the minute he strikes a hospital bed that his time has come and making his will is the natural corollary of that conclusion. He writes it on any old sheet of paper and the nurses witness it. To a roommate he bequeathes his clothes, to another pal his pipe, and maybe there are a few books to be distributed among friends. Sometimes there is evidence of considerable spite in these hospital wills.

"'I've got a wife somewheres,' said an accident patient not long ago, 'Also I've got a collection of stuffed toads and a lot of carpenter tools, but damme if she shall ever touch one of 'em. I'll see to that in my will.'

"He did see to it, but he got well afterward, so maybe he will have time to effect a more amicable arrangement before he gets scared into writing another will."

Gibbs & Son's Sale

From Wallace Farmer:

It is somewhat of a puzzle to understand just why the pure-bred Shorthorns and Herefords sold on December 1st by Messrs. A. Gibbs & Son, of Klemme, Iowa, were not appreciated in keeping with the grade cattle which they also sold the same day. It is evident that there are yet localities in Iowa where the gospel of registered stock has not penetrated to any noticeable extent. The sale was to close up a partnership, the senior Gibbs retiring from active work, and the junior member of the firm, Mr. C. E. Gibbs, will continue the farm and the breeding of registered stock. Lack of demand at anywhere near remunerative prices caused the major part of the Short-horns to remain on the farm. The Herefords and the bulls of both breeds were disposed of at just fair prices. The highest price paid was $150, for the good Scotch herd bull, Secret Victor, going to a Meservey party. The Durocs advertised were all disposed of at very good prices. Mr. Gibbs Jr. having retained a number of first-class brood sows, will continue the work of breeding both Durocs and Short-horns. The Gibbs farm is one of the most highly improved and best arranged stock farms to be found in Iowa. We anticipate a bright future for Mr. Gibbs Jr., and we also look for the stock interests of the country to be much benefitted by his efforts.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS PLAY EVER WRITTEN

"A WONDERFUL CREATURE IN WHITE GARMENTS AND WITH GOLDEN WINGS, BEARING A LILY."

SOFT and low, melodious, penetrating, the tones of a bell break the stillness that has fallen upon the little audience. Cowled monks step noiselessly to the sides of a wooden stage and draw the curtains. Lighted candles shine brightly in contrast to the darkened amphitheater. A great robed figure, august and majestic, wearing a triple crown, moves to the fore. He is attended by a court who sing and dance and toss up censers until he lifts his hand. They they fall mute and the silence spreads instantly to the people below, who had stirred and leaned forward in the intensity of their interest when the curtain parted disclosing the magnificent scene. It is a Miracle play—the first Christmas play—and it is staged in the cathedral of a medieval town in northern England. The great robed figure is the representation of God Himself. The singers are attendant angels. The scene is—heaven.

God speaks. In sonorous Latin is disclosed the order of creation and God's will toward man. Monotonously the words roll forth, and almost endlessly it seems to the awed listeners. But at last it does end and there follows a strange interruption, ludicrous, almost sacrilegious. An ugly creature, clad in goatskins and with two ram's horns on its head, capers forward, a clown, a buffoon. With strange grimaces and sinister contortions it asks and receives leave to become a curse and a plague upon men, then it departs as it came, grotesque and out of place, disappearing beneath the stage—the devil going down to hell. An organ peals from out the half gloom, the angels dance and sing and toss their censers and the first scene closes as it opened.

Outside the cathedral the old town is deserted, its streets snow-covered and silent. All its inhabitants, the visitors within its gates and the people from far and near around it are gathered within the cathedral to witness the first Christmas play. It is a solemn occasion; one meant to convey its impressiveness and teach its lesson for a distinct purpose. The cathedral is only part finished and the artisans and craftsmen who are completing it will draw from tonight's production of the Miracles inspiration for their work of decorating and carving and building.

From far lands and near these workmen have gathered. Skilled men from across the seas have been hired and brought here to exercise their skillfulness. Others have come because of their love for the art they represent, anxious for an opportunity to let it speak in the scrolls and figures and images of this sacred place. Still others are there from a sense of religious duty, and yet others to do penance for their sins by manual labor in such a cause.

All these sit within the cathedral. With them are the people of the town, the hinds and yokels of the surrounding hills, the tradesmen and craftsmen of the little village, together with their wives and sweethearts. Little children are there, half-frightened at times, then merry, and again saddened by the pathos they scarcely understand. It is a typical crowd of the time and the season, but such an one as was never before gathered, for Christmas has hitherto been celebrated differently in Merry England.

For days the preparations for the Miracle play have gone forward. About the partly finished cathedral there has been no sound of hammer or chisel or knife. In place of the workmen busy about the building have been monks decorating the interior with holly boughs and yew and Christmas green. The stage has been put in place, the curtain arranged and the trappings gotten into working order. It was pioneer work, and to our modern eyes it would seem strangely crude, but in that time it was destined to be a marvel for many days to come.

Somewhat of the grotesque again appears in the second act of the Christmas play, but it is short, the first two being chiefly preludes to that which is of the greatest interest and most pertinent to the season—scenes portraying the coming of Christ. The second act tells of the Fall. It is tedious, but thought by the monks to be necessary for the setting of the real story that is to be told.

Finally, the curtain is drawn for the third, and by the dim rays of a lamp Mary is disclosed, in her humble cottage, spinning. She sings as she works and all is quiet and peaceful. Suddenly the light on the stage increases, a rustling is heard and a wonderful creature in white garments and with golden wings appears, bearing a lily and crying, "Ave Maria, Gratia Plena!" Timid and confused, Mary rises but does not answer. Gabriel comforts her and sings about his glad message. Then Mary kneels and gives thanks to God and the angel disappears, leaving the room half darkened again. Clearly and joyfully there sounds through the church the voice of Mary singing the "Magnificat," while from the audience come the sounds of women weeping as the curtain falls.

Next is shown a shepherds' camp in the hills of Judea. It is wonderfully realistic, a fact which the countrymen present acknowledge in low murmurs of appreciation. Real sheep are bleating in the fold and the shepherds lounge about talking of the day's work. The simplest things of their life engross them—the death of a lamb, the whereabouts of a sheep that has disappeared.

As their talk ceases and they fall asleep, soft notes issue from the hidden organ. The stage is darkened now and the scene, with the dying melodies echoing through the cathedral, most impressive. Then a ray of light breaks and grows in splendor across the stage and Gabriel is seen, on a platform so arranged that he appears to be in the clouds. The shepherds awake, frightened and confused, sheltering their eyes from the brilliant light. But Gabriel heartens them by waving his lily and calling upon them to be of good cheer, and then suddenly a choir of angels gather about him, singing "Gloria in Excelsis," and the shepherds fall down and worship. Still kneeling as Gabriel and his heavenly choir disappear, the shepherds chant a familiar carol, partly in Latin, partly in English, and the chords of the organ sound again, soft and low and distant, while the voices of the people take up the melody down in the body of the church.

When the curtain is again drawn there is shown the stable at Bethlehem, the star shining above it. Mary is there, kneeling, and Joseph leans upon his staff. Before the ox and the ass is the manger, and in it, on the straw, clothed in jeweled robes, lies the child Jesus. The shepherds have followed the star and bow in dumb show while solemn music is chanted from a distance.

Then enters a magnificent array—the three kings come to do worship to the new-born Prince of Peace. As the chant dies down the roll of drums and the shrill of fifes and trumpets announce the royal cortege and the kings pass in stately review, each doing his obeisance to the child in its lowly cradle, each presenting it with some costly gift, each laying his crown at the feet of the Savior. Then the royal figures and their retainers join the humble shepherds, kneeling and worshiping in silence. Soft and low, then rising higher, comes again the melody of the distant angel choir, then it diminishes and dies away as the curtain closes and the lights go out.

THE PLAY WAS GIVEN IN AN UNFINISHED CATHEDRAL

So ended the first Christmas play ever written.

Always Polite.

Dorothy and Helen exchanged presents.

Dorothy wrote:

"Dearest Helen, the sofa-cushion you sent me was perfectly lovely. Did you work it yourself? It was awfully swell of you to remember me, and I am sure that our friendship becomes bound by further ties because of your thoughtful gift. With an abundance of love."

Helen wrote:

"Dearest Dorothy, your beautiful gift reached me this morning, and it was just the sweetest remembrance! It was the very thing I needed most, and whenever I use it I shall be sure to think of you. I know you made it with your own sweet hands, and for that reason I will cherish it all the more. With best love."

Dorothy said: "Didn't she show horrible taste?"

What World Lost?

"It was the worst calamity that ever happened to me," sighed the pale, intellectual high-browed young woman. Tribute to Painter's Skill.

One of the still life paintings by Jan van Huysen in the museum at The Hague was recently injured, but it is believed the perpetrator was neither vandal nor thief.

The picture represents a basket of fruit on which a number of insects have gathered. On a pale yellow apple, which is the centerpiece in the cluster of fruit, is a large fly, painted so true to nature, so say the officials of the gallery, that the canvas was injured by some one who endeavored to "shoo" it and brought his cane or hand too close to the canvas. "A tribute to the painter's genius," says the letter recording the fact, "for which the work had to suffer."

SAVED OLD LADY'S HAIR

"My mother used to have a very bad humor on her head which the doctors called an eczema, and for it I had two different doctors. Her head was very sore and her hair nearly all fell out in spite of what they both did. One day her niece came in and they were speaking of how her hair was falling out and the doctors did it no good. She says, 'Aunt, why don't you try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment?' Mother did and they helped her. In six months' time the itching, burning and scalding of her head was over and her hair began growing. Today she feels much in debt to Cuticura Soap and Ointment for the fine head of hair she has for an old lady of seventy-four.

"My own case was an eczema in my feet. As soon as the cold weather came my feet would itch and burn and then they would crack open and bleed. Then I thought I would flee to my mother's friends, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I did for four or five winters, and now my feet are as smooth as any one's. Ellsworth Dunham, Hiram, Me., Sept. 30, 1909."

EAGER TO WORK.

Health Regained by Right Food.

The average healthy man or woman is usually eager to be busy at some useful task or employment.

But let dyspepsia or indigestion get hold of one, and all endeavor becomes a burden.

"A year ago, after recovering from an operation," writes a Michigan lady, "my stomach and nerves began to give me much trouble.

"At times my appetito was voracious, but when indulged, indigestion followed. Other times I had no appetite whatever. The food I took did not nourish me and I grew weaker than ever.

"I lost interest in everything and wanted to be alone. I had always had good nerves, but now the merest trifle would upset me and bring on a violent headache. Walking across the room was an effort and prescribed exercise was out of the question.

"I had seen Grape-Nuts advertised, but did not believe what I read at the time. At last when it seemed as if I was literally starving, I began to eat Grape-Nuts.

"I had not been able to work for a year, but now after two months on Grape-Nuts I am eager to be at work again. My stomach gives me no trouble now, my nerves are steady as ever, and interest in life and ambition have come back with the return to health."

Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

BOYS' SHOES, $2.00, $2.50 AND $3.00. BEST IN THE WORLD.

The benefits of free hides, which apply principally to sole leather, and the reduced tariff on sole leather, now enables me to give the wearer more value for his money, better and longer wearing $3, $3.50 and $4 shoes than I could give him previous to the tariff revision.

If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, the superior workmanship and the high grade leathers used, you would then understand why Dollar for Dollar I Guarantee My Shoes to hold their shape, look and fit better and wear longer than any other $3.00, $3.50 or $4.00 shoes you can buy.

Do you realize that my shoes have been the standard for over 30 years; that I make and sell more $3.00, $3.50 and $4.00 shoes than any other manufacturer in the United States? Quality counts. It has made W. L. Douglas shoes a household word everywhere.

"Looker-On" writing for the Marshalltown Times Republican has the following to say about Klemme in a recent issue: "Some one has said that a town is nothing but a big family, all with the same family characteristics. The bad citizen is the black sheep of the small family and if this theory is true the first family that some years ago settled the little town of Klemme must have been a mighty polite lot of people. Several traveling men speak of the universal courtesy extended them in that thriving berg. Not that this is contrary to the rule in many Iowa towns but it must be an unusual case in Klemme."

Walden & Co., the Magicians, held forth in Klemme opera house last Thursday evening to a packed house. Walden in magic was very good and Heverly, the hand-cuff king, gave a good exhibition of skill in breaking locks, escaping from straight jacket, etc, all of which seemed to be highly enjoyed by the audience. The trunk mystery was a good one, and is still a profound mystery so far as we are concerned. This was the second number of our high school lecture course. The next number comes in January and will be announced in these columns in a few weeks.

Shoeless he climbed the stairway, opened the door of the room, entered and closed it after him without being detected. Just as he was about to get into bed, his wife, half aroused from her slumber, turned and sleepily said: "Is that you, Fido?" The husband, telling the rest of the story, replied: "For once in my life I had real presence of mind. I licked her hand."—Ex.

For ng time Obadiah did not move, when he did it was to reach out a groping hand to find Nathaniel. hange had come into his face when lifted it again, the mad fire had burned itself out of his eyes, old chuckling laugh came from een his lips.

"A little weakness, Nat—a little kness," he gasped faintly. "I have now and then. Excitement—great itement—" He straightened him- for a moment and stood, swaying from the table, then collapsed a chair, his head dropping upon breast.

Without arousing him from the stu- into which he had fallen, Na- aniel again concealed himself in shadows outside the cabin where could better guard himself against possible approach of Mormon vis- rs. But he did not remain long. struck a match and saw that it nearly 11 and a sudden resolu- turned him back to the cabin r. He believed that Obadiah would easily arouse himself from the nge stupor into which he had fal- . Meanwhile he would find food then conceal himself near the h to intercept Marion.

As he mounted the step he heard the second time since landing on the island the solemn tolling of great bell at St. James, and as he used for an instant to listen, peal on peal followed the first until its brazen thunder rolled in one long coming echo through the forests of e Mormon kingdom. There came a rill cry at his back and he whirled out to see the councilor standing the center of the big room, his arms outstretched, his face lifted as it had been raised in prayer at the tolling of e same bell the night before—but s time it was not prayer that fell om his lips.

"Nat, ye have returned in the hour vengeance! The hand of God is descending upon the Mormon king- dom!"

His words came in a gasping, but triumphant cry.

"And tomorrow—tomorrow—" He stepped forward, his voice crooning a wild joy. "Tomorrow—I—shall—be—king!"

As he spoke the cabin trembled, a tremor passed under them, and the tolling of the bell was lost in a sudden tumult that came like the bursting crash of low thunder.

"What is it?" cried Nathaniel. He leaped into the room and caught Obadiah by the arm. "What is it?"

"The hand of God!" whispered the old man again. "Nat—Nat—" It was his old self that stood grimacing and twisting his hands before Nathaniel now. "Nat—a thousand armed men are off the coast! The Lamanites of the mainland are descending upon the Mormon kingdom as the hosts of Israel upon Canaan! Strang is doomed—doomed—doomed—and tomorrow I shall be king!" His voice rose in a wailing shriek. He darted to the door and his cackling laugh rang with the old madness as he pointed into the north where a lurid glow had mounted high into the sky.

"The signal fire—the bell!" he gurgled chokingly. "They are calling the Mormons to arms—but it is too late—too late! Ho, ho, it is too late, Nat—too late!" He staggered back, gripping his throat, and fell upon the floor. "Too late—too late," he moaned, groveling weakly, as if struggling for breath. "Too late—Nat—Marion—"

A shiver passed through his body and he lay quite still.

"I Want to Speak with Marion."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Six Castle Chambers.

In an instant Nathaniel was upon his knees beside the prostrate form of the old councilor.

Obadiah's eyes were open but unseeing; his face was blanched to the whiteness of paper; an almost imperceptible movement of his chest showed that he still breathed. Nathaniel lifted one of the limp hands and its clammy chill struck horror to his heart. Tenderly he lifted the old man and carried him to the cot at the end of the room. He loosened his clothes, tore off the low collar about his throat, and felt with his hand to measure the faint beating of life in the councilor's breast. For a few moments it seemed to grow fainter and fainter, and a choking lump rose in his throat as he watched the pallor of death fixing itself on the councilor's shriveled face. What strange chord of sympathy was it that bound him to this old man? Was it the same mysterious influence that had attracted Marion to him? He dropped upon his knees and called the girl's name softly but it awakened no response in the sightless eyes, no tremor in the parted, unquivering lips. Very slowly as the minutes passed there came a reaction. The pulsations of the weakened heart became a little stronger, he could catch faintly the sound of breath coming from between the old man's lips.

With a gasp of relief Nathaniel rose to his feet. Through the door he saw the red glare in the northern sky and heard the great bell at St. James ring a wilder and more excited alarm. For a few moments he stood in silent, listening inaction, his nerves tingling with a strange sensation of impending peril. Obadiah's madness, the mysterious trembling of the earth beneath his feet, the volcano of fire, the clanging of the bell and the councilor's insane rejoicing had all come so suddenly that he was dazed. What great calamity, what fearful vengeance, was about to come upon the Mormon kingdom? Was it possible that the fishermen and settlers of the mainland had risen, as Obadiah had said, and were already at hand to destroy Strang and his people? The thought spurred him to the door. The blood rushed like fire through his veins. What would it mean to Marion—to Neil?

In his excitement he started down the path that led to the lilac hidden home beyond the forest. Then he thought again of Obadiah and his last choking utterance of Marion's name. He had tried to speak of her, even with that death-like rattling of the breath in his throat; and the memory of the old councilor's frantic struggle for words brought Nathaniel quickly back to the cabin. He bent over Obadiah's shriveled form and spoke the girl's name again and again in his ears. There came no response, no quiver of life to show that the old man was conscious of his presence. As he worked over him, bathing his face and chest in cool water, the feeling became strong in him that he was fighting death in this gloomy room for Marion's sake. It was like the whispering of an invisible spirit in his ears—something more than presentiment, something that made his own heart grow faint when death seemed winning in the struggle. His watchfulness was acute, intense, desperate. When, after a time, he straightened himself again, rewarded by Obadiah's more regular breathing, the sweat stood in beads upon his face. He knew that he had triumphed. Obadiah would live, and Marion—

He placed his mouth close to the councilor's ear.

"Tell me about Marion," he said again. "Marion—Marion—Marion—"

He waited, stilling his own breath to catch the sound of a whisper. None came. As he bent over him he saw through the open door that the red glare of fire had faded to a burnt out glow in the sky. In the deep silence the sullen beating of the bell seemed nearer, and he could hear the excited barking of dogs in St. James. Slowly the hope that Obadiah might speak to him died away and he returned to the door. It still lacked an hour of midnight, when Marion had promised to come to him. He was wildly impatient and to his impatience was added the fear that had filled him as he hovered over Obadiah, a nameless, intangible fear—something which he could not have analyzed and which clutched at his heart and urged him to follow the path that led to Marion's. For a time he resisted the impulse. What if she should come by another path while he was gone? He waited nervously in the edge of the forest, watching, and listening for footsteps.

In his careless way he promptly made up his mind. He would go boldly to the cabin and tell that Neil was waiting. He felt sure that the alarm sounding from St. James had drawn away the guards and that there would be nothing to interfere with his plan if she had already left the cabin he would return quickly to Obadiah's. In his eagerness he began to run. Once a sound stopped him—the distant beating of galloping hoofs. He heard the shout of a man, a reply farther away, the quick, excited yelping of a dog. His blood danced as he thought of the gathering of the Mormon fighters, the men and boys racing down the black trails from the inland forests, the excitement in St. James. As he ran on again he thought of Arbor Croche mustering the panting, vengeful defenders; of Strang, his great voice booming encouragement and promise, above the brazen thunder of the bell; he saw in fancy the frightened huddling groups of women and children and beyond and above all the coming of the "vengeance of God"—a hundred beats, a thousand men—and there went out from his soul if not from his lips a great cry of joy. At the edge of the forest he stopped for a moment. Over beyond the clearing a light burned dimly through the lilacs. The sweet odor of the flowers came to him gently, persuasively, and nerved him into the open. He passed across the open space swiftly and plunged into a tangle of bushes close to the lighted window.

He heard a man's voice within, and then a woman's. Was it Marion? Cautiously Nathaniel crept close to the log wall of the cabin. He reached out, and hesitated. Should he look—as he had done at the king's window? The man's voice came to him again, harsh and angry, and this time it was not a woman's words that he heard but a woman's sobbing cry. He parted the bushes and a glare of light fell on his face. The lamp was on a table and beside the table there sat a woman, her white head turned from him, her face buried in her hands. She was an old woman and he knew that it was Marion's mother. He could not see the man.

Where was Marion? He wormed himself back out of the bushes and walked quickly around the house. There was no other light, no other sign of life except in that one room. With sudden resolution he stepped to the door and knocked loudly.

For a full half minute there was silence, and he knocked again. He heard the approach of a shuffling step, the thump, thump, thump of a cane, and the door swung back. It was the man who opened it, a tall giant of an old man, doubled as if with rheumatism, and close behind him was the frightened face of the woman. An involuntary shudder passed through Nathaniel as he looked at them. They were old—so old that the man's shriveled hands were like those of a skeleton; his giant frame seemed about to totter into ruin, his eyes were sunken until his face gave the horror of a death mask. Was it possible that these people were the father and mother of Marion—and of Neil? As he stepped to the threshold they timidly drew back from him. In a single glance Nathaniel swept the room and what he saw thrilled him, for everywhere were signs of Marion; in the pictures on the walls, the snowy curtains, the cushions in the window seat—and the huge vase of lilacs on the mantle.

"I am a messenger of the king," he said, advancing and closing the door behind him. "I want to speak with Marion."

As if the immemorial charges against her of keeping us awake o' nights and of eating canary birds whenever she gets the chance were not enough, the doctors have just discoveredthat for years she has been responsible for the spread of diphthetria. Dr. G. J. Awburn of Manchester, England, having traced an epidemic of this disease in a suburb of that city to a pet cat belonging to one of his patients, has found, after much clever investigation, that all cats are peculiarly susceptible to diphtheritic affections of the throat. He has therefore recently been warning all families who own cats to watch them carefully, and, if they develop coughs, to forbid their being hugged and petted. Dr. Awburn further recommends that if the cough persists and the cat begins to grow thin to have the animal destroyed at once. The only really safe way, he says, is to let the first wheeze be pussy's death warrant.

Good Doctrine

No town in this state or in any other place for that matter. can expect to thrive and prosper without the concentrated effort of its citizens and the judicious expenditure of money. The towns in our state today that are prosperous are the ones that have donated liberally to enterprises which employ labor. Thus it is and always will be that the liberal and broad guaged town will thrive while the tight fisted ones are struggling for the necessities of life. It is within the power of every town to increase her population. With which class do you desire to be rated? Do you wish it to go out to the world that you lack the energy necessary to protect your own interest? If not, get to work and do something that will increase your own wealth and make your neighbor more contented. —Ex.

Many persons find themselves affected with a persistent cough after an attack of influenza. As this cough can be promp ly cured by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. it should not be allowed to run on until it becomes troublesome. Sold by all dealers.

A good many fish are being taken out of Eagle Lake by cutting holes in the ice. The water is very shallow and as soon as a hole is cut the fish come up for air and are easily caught They might just as well be taken out as the lake is low and will soon be frozen dry.

Henry Ward found the skull and horns complete of a buffalo in Eagle Lake last week. Johnson Brown also found two skulls. It is evident that some time in the past the buffalo have used the lake pretty freely, and the low state of the water this year discloses the skeletons of animals either killed by the Indians or that became mired in the peat beds and died. These skulls are in good state of preservation.

RAILROAD IS LIABLE

Burlington Loses in a Novel Suit at Centerville

$1,000 AWARDED TO PLAINTIFF

Jury Decides That Company Must Pay for Injuries Done Passenger By Another Passenger While Riding on Train.

Centerville, Ia., Dec. 17.—A novel case, believed to be the first of its kind tried in Iowa and one that establishes a precedent in the responsibility of railway companies to their passengers, was that of P. Starr against the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway company, which was decided in his favor by the jury finding for him and giving him $1,000 damages.

While riding on a train from Sedan to Moulton, Starr became engaged in a controversy with Ollie Guffey, a fellow passenger, who is alleged to have been drinking, and Guffey assaulted Starr, injuring him considerably. The contention of the plaintiff's attorneys was that the railroad company was responsible for the comfort and safety of its passengers and in not ejecting Guffey from the train or in preventing him from being a menace to fellow passengers, had made itself liable for damages. The jury so found and gave Starr $1,000.

The case is considered of much importance as establishing a precedent, as it is expected it will be appealed and in all probability sustained in the supreme court. The injury to Starr took place before the enactment of the present law forbidding drinking on trains, so that the case was decided on the general ground of the responsibility of railroads to their patrons.

Teachers' Pension Bill.

Clinton.—A movement has originated in Clinton providing for the pensioning of teachers in the Iowa public schools who have grown old in the service, and at the forthcoming meeting of the Iowa legislature, a bill will be introduced by Clinton legislators providing for such a pension.

The proposed bill has been discussed in Clinton and other Iowa cities for some time, but until teachers of Clinton county took the initiative no steps had been taken to bring it before the legislature. A meeting of the principals of the city schools was held in the office of Superintendent O. P. Bostwick, a staunch advocate of the idea, and it was decided to have a prospectus of the bill prepared at once for submission to the legislature in January.

The Clinton teachers are confident of the success of their proposition to reward aged teachers. No time will be lost in preparing the prospectus.

Profit on $200 Land.

Marshalltown.—A gross profit of 13 per cent on $200 acre land out of a small acreage of corn has been shown by Bart St. Clair, a farmer living south of Conrad. Last year was a poor season for seed corn, but despite this fact Mr. St. Clair planted 69½ acres to corn, and harvested from the field 5,425 bushels, an average of 78 bushels to the acre. The entire crop sold for 33 1-3 cents per bushel, yielding the owner $1,817, or a gross return per acre of $26.15.

Bell Falls; Farmer Hurt.

Nevada.—Dana Warren, a farmer who lives south of this city, met with an accident which now promises to prove fatal. In the dooryard hung an old-fashioned dinner bell. Mrs. Westerman is a widow and was paying for the home by taking in washing. A subscription was raised and the house will be rebuilt.

Preacher Signs Beer Petition.

New Hampton.—Rev. Gottfried Fritchel, pastor of the Lutheran church, has created a sensation by signing a petition for saloons. "I am not favoring the misuse of intoxicating beverages," he says. "It seems to me if I should have refused to sign the petition I would have assisted the prohibition movement which I conscientiously cannot do. It is my personal conviction that prohibition is against personal liberty and that it does not eliminate the misuse of intoxicants. Prohibition has no foundation in scripture."

Raise Telephone Rates at Fairfield.

Fairfield.—Following closely on the announcement that the local offices of the Iowa Telephone company and the Jefferson County Telephone company were to be combined, the latter corporation has notified subscribers that its rates will be increased 50 cents a month for most of its service beginning Jan. 1. The Bell company had little local business except long distance calls. The independent company gives as its reasons for the move increased service and growth in its expenses.

Gowrie.—More than $500 in prizes are to be offered at the annual meeting of the Northern Iowa Poultry and Corn association, which is to be held here Jan. 2 to 6. This contest is free to every boy and girl. The Iowa State college short course is held at the same time and place and special classes will be conducted for the boys and girls who wish to attend the short course.

Big Sum in Improvements.

Iowa City.—Improvement reports issued at Iowa City show that the university town's expenditures in this regard for a year total nearly one million dollars. The expenditures are itemized as follows: State University of Iowa buildings, $435,000; business buildings, $110,000; public improvements, $129,000; railroad improvements, $30,000; residences, $175,000; total, $879,000.

He was too late to save Marion! His brain reeled with the thought. Too late—too late—too late. He panted the words. They came with every gasp for breath. Too late! Too late! His heart pumped like an engine as he strained to keep up his speed. He passed a man and a boy hurrying with their rifles to St. James and made no answer to their shout; a galloping horse forged ahead of him and he tried to keep up with it; and then, at the top of the long hill that sloped down to the stronghold of the Mormon kingdom something seemed to sweep his legs from under him, and he fell panting on the ground. For a few moments he lay there looking down upon the city. The great bell at the temple was now silent. He saw huge fires burning for a mile along the coast, hundreds of lights were twinkling in the harbor, there came up to him softly, subdued by distance, the sound of commotion and excitement far below.

His eyes rested on the beacon above the prophet's home, burning like a ball of fire over the black canopy of tree tops. Marion was there! He rose to his feet again and went on, reason and judgmen. returning to him—telling him that he was about to play against odds; that his work was to be one of strength and generalship and not of madness. As he picked his way more slowly and cautiously down the slope a new hope flashed upon him. Was it possible that the discovery of the approach of the mainlanders had served to save Marion? In the excitement that followed the calling of the Mormons to arms and the preparations for the defense would Strang, the master of the kingdom, the bulwark of his people, waste priceless time in carrying out the purpose for which he had sent for Marion? Hardly did hope burn anew in his breast when there came another thought to quench it. Why had the king sent for Marion on this particular night and at this late hour? Why, unless at the approach of his enemies he had feared that he might lose his beautiful victim, and in his overmastering passion had called her to him even as his people assembled in defense of his kingdom.

There was desperate coolness in Nathaniel's approach now. Whatever had happened he would do what Neil had threatened to do—kill Strang. And whatever had happened he would take Marion away with him if it was only her dead body that he carried in his arms. To do these things he needed strength. He advanced more slowly and drew deeper and deeper drafts of air into his exhausted lungs. At the edge of the grove surrounding the castle he paused to listen. For the first time it occurred to Nathaniel that the prophet might have assembled some of his fighters to the defense of his harem, which he knew would be one of the first places to feel the vengeance of the outraged men of the mainland. But he heard no voices ahead of him. There were no fires to betray the approach of the enemy. Not even the barking of a dog gave warning of his stealthy advance. Soon he could make out a light in the king's house. A few steps more and he saw that the door was open, as it had been on his first visit to the castle. He dodged swiftly from bush to bush, darted under the window through which he had seen Marion, leaped lightly up the broad steps and sprang into the great room, his pistol cocked in his hand.

The room was empty. He listened, but not a sound came to his ears except the rustling of a curtain in the breeze. The huge lamp over the table was burning dimly. The five doors leading from the room were tightly closed. Nathaniel held his breath, tried to still the tumultuous pounding of his heart as he waited for a sound of life—a step beyond those doors, a woman's voice, a child's cry. But none came. The stillness of desertion hovered about him. He went to one of the five doors. It was not locked. He opened it silently, with the caution of a thief, and there loomed before him a chaos of gloom.

"Hello!" he called gently. "Hello—Hello—"

There was no answer. He struck a match and advanced step by step, holding the yellow bit of flame above his head. It disclosed the narrow walls of a hall and an open door leading into another room. The match sputtered and went out and he lighted another. On a little table just outside the door was a half burned candle and he replaced his match with this. Then he went in.

At a glance he knew that he had entered a woman's room, redolent with the perfume of flowers. On one side was a bed and close beside it a cradle with a child's toys scattered about it. The tumbled coverlets showed that both had been recently used. About the room were thrown articles of wearing apparel; a trunk had been dragged from a closet and was half packed; everywhere was the disorder of hurried flight. For a few moments the depth of his despair held Nathaniel motionless. The castle was deserted—Marion was gone! He ran back into the great room, no longer trying to still the sound of his footsteps, and opened a second door. The same silence greeted him, the same disorder, the same evidence that the wives and children of the Mormon king had fled. He went into a third room—and then a fourth.

For an instant he paused at the threshold of this fourth chamber. A light was burning in the room at the end of the hall. The door was closed with the exception of an inch or two.

"Marion!" he called softly, and listened intently.

He went on when there was no reply, and pushed open the door.

A candle was burning on a stand in front of a mirror. The room was as empty as the others. But there was no disorder here. The bed was unused, the garments in the open closet had not been disarranged. On the floor beside the bed was a pair of shoes and as Nathaniel saw them his heart seemed to leap to his throat and stifled the cry that was on his lips. He took one of them in his hand, his whole being throbbing with excitment. It was Marion's shoe—incrusted with mud and torn as he had seen it in the forest. With her name falling from his lips in a pleading cry he now searched the room and on the stand in front of the mirror he found a lilac colored ribbon, soiled and crumpled. It was Marion's ribbon—the one he had seen last in her hair, and he crushed it to his lips as he ran back into the great room, calling out her name again and again in the torture of helplessness that now possessed him.

Mechanically, rather than with reason, he went to the fifth and last door. His candle had become extinguished in his haste and after he had opened the door he stopped at the threshold of the black hall to light it again. There was a moment's pause as he searched his pockets for a match, a silence in which he listened as he searched, and suddenly as he was about to strike the sulphur tipped splint there came to his ears a sound that held him chained to the spot. It was the sobbing of a woman; or was it a child? In a moment he knew that it was a woman; and then the sobbing ceased.

There was nothing but darkness ahead of him; no ray of light shone under the door; the chamber itself was in utter gloom. As quietly as possible he relighted his candle. A glance assured him that this hall was different from the others; it was deeper, and there were two doors at the end instead of one. Through which of these doors had come the sound of sobbing he had heard?

He approached and listened. Each moment added to his excitement, his fears, his hopes, but at last he opened the door on the left. The room was empty: there was the same disorder as before; the same signs of hurried flight. It was the room on the right! His heart almost stopped its beating as he placed his hand on the latch, lifted it, and pulled the door in. Kneeling beside the bed he saw a woman. She had turned toward the light and in the dim illumination of the room Nathaniel recognized the beautiful face he had seen at the king's castle the preceding day—the face of the woman who had sent him to find the prophet, who had placed her gentle hand on Marion's head as he had looked through the window. There was no fear in her eyes as she saw Nathaniel. Something more terrible than that shone in their glorious depths as she rose to her feet and stood before him, her face lined with grief, her mouth twitching in agony. She stood with clenched hands, her bosom rising and falling in the passion of the storm within her; and she sobbed even as Nathaniel paused there, unmanned in this sudden presence of a distress greater than his own; sobbed in a choking, tearless way, waiting for him to speak.

"Forgive me," he spoke gently. "I have come—for—Marion." He felt that he had no reason to lie to this woman. His face betrayed his own anguish as he came nearer to her. "I want Marion," he repeated. "My God, won't you tell me—?"

She struggled to calm herself as he spoke the girl's name.

"Marion is not here," she said. She crushed his hands against her bosom and a softer look came into her eyes; her voice was low and sweet, as it had been the morning he asked for Strang. As she saw the despair deepening in the man's face a great pity swept over her and she stretched out her arms to him with an aching cry, "Marion is gone—gone—gone," she moaned, "and you must go, too! O, I know you love her—she told me that you loved her, and I love Strang, my king! We have both lost—lost—and you must go—as—I—shall—go!" She turned away from him with a cry so heart-breaking in its pain that Nathaniel felt himself trembling to the soul. In another instant she had faced him again, fighting back a strange calm into her face.

HIS ELOQUENCE WAS USELESS

Colonel Morgan's Futile Attempt to Persuade Cleveland to Grant Pardon to a Murderer.

Col. Franklin Pierce Morgan of Washington and New York never made but one great speech, and the story of it is pathetic. His audience was Grover Cleveland, then president of the United States, and his purpose was to secure a pardon for a murderer named O'Neil, in whom the colonel had become interested. "I'll never forget that day," said the colonel in telling about the incident. "I had told Dan Lamont the day before that I intended to ask Cleveland to pardon O'Neil, who was a creature of the dark places at times, but a pretty good fellow at that. Cleveland had taken the precaution to send to the department of justice and get the papers in the case. I got up early the next morning, had a massage and was feeling tip-top. I got in to see Cleveland and I spoke 20 minutes. Never in my life, before or since, have I been as eloquent as I was pleading for that fellow O'Neil. The end of every sentence I uttered brushed the edges off a cloud. I concluded my argument, confident that I had swept the president off his feet. 'Mr. Morgan,' he said, 'is that all you have to say on behalf of your friend?' Mind you, he said 'friend.' 'Yes, Mr. President,' said I; 'I think that's all.' 'Mr. Morgan,' he replied, 'never as long as I am in the White House shall that consummate scoundrel—consummate scoundrel, mark you—get out of the penitentiary.' 'What's the use of eloquence, anyhow?" concluded the colonel.

Do Birds Return to Old Nests?

Whether birds, especially migratory ones, return to the same nests year after year is a question of much interest to the naturalist. Swallows that summer in England do not winter north of Africa, but an observer at High Halden, Kent, England, has recorded that one returned on April 12 to a nest it occupied last year. It was recognized by a ring that had been placed on its leg. To gain a better knowledge of bird habits, more than 2,000 British birds were last year marked with inscribed aluminum rings, and twice as many more will be similarly tagged this year.

Canada Needs Rat-Traps.

According to Consul General Jones at Winnipeg, Canada is in great need of rat traps. Farmers in the grain belt are becoming anxious over the invasion of rodents and are willing and able to pay a good price for a trap that will combine durability and efficiency.

Stepmother of Mint Julep.

Romance and poetry have delighted to weave garlands with which to celebrate and perpetuate the glory of the blue grass in old Kentucky, famed for its fine horses, beautiful women and mint.

Kentucky has been designated as the home of the mint julep, and its colonels have become famous all over the world for the easy and graceful way in which they drink whisky with a little dash of sugar and a sprig or two of mint in order, chiefly to overcome the necessity for a large amount of water in the beverage. The true Kentuckian doesn't want his whisky drowned.

It transpires, however, that the real home of the mint and the mint julep is right here in Missouri, whose crop of mint last year amounted to 7,653 pounds, or enough to make 1,224,320 juleps. This amount includes the marketed product only, no account having been taken of the countless thousands of juleps which were compounded during the year with a base of the undiluted moonshine whisky that never paid a cent of tax.—St. Louis Star.

The Modern Way.

A couple of young men on the Market street viaduct the other evening offered a new version of an old saw. After they had passed a couple of auburn-haired damsels one of the young men took his stand at the curb and gazed up and down the bridge.

"What are you looking for?" inquired his companion.

Pointing to the red-headed girls, the young man answered: "I'm trying to see a white automobile."—Youngstown Telegram.

WONDERED WHY.

Found the Answer Was "Coffee."

Many pale, sickly persons wonder for years why they have to suffer so, and eventually discover that the drug—caffeine—in coffee is the main cause of the trouble.

"I was always very fond of coffee and drank it every day. I never had much flesh and often wondered why I was always so pale, thin and weak.

"About five years ago my health completely broke down and I was confined to my bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could hardly take sufficient nourishment to sustain life.

"During this time I was drinking coffee, didn't think I could do without it.

"After awhile I came to the conclusion that coffee was hurting me, and decided to give it up and try Postum. I didn't like the taste of it at first, but when it was made right—boiled until dark and rich—I soon became fond of it.

"In one week I began to feel better. I could eat more and sleep better. My sick headaches were less frequent, and within five months I looked and felt like a new being, headache spells entirely gone.

"My health continued to improve and today I am well and strong, weigh 148 pounds. I attribute my present health to the life-giving qualities of Postum."

A Minnesota doctor has discovered a new disease. There is absolutely no cure for it but he knows a remedy that will alleviate the pain. What ails our Iowa doctors that they have not discovered this disease? They have watched Charley Miller so closely that they have let this disease get away from them. The disease attacks the stomach much like appendicitis but it does no good to remove it or the appendix either, as the pain remains. They took one man's stomach out and made him one out of a foot ball drawn over an old bustle, but the pain was there just the same. The Minnesota man attaches a mouse trap to the bustle and when the pain starts the trap catches it. He has a patent on his device.—Britt Tribune.

It is told of Victor Moore that, out on a fishing boat, he began to complain of a thirst which was consuming his vitals. One of his companions, unknown to him, attached a bottle of beer to his line. Soon the actor felt a tug and began to draw in what he thought was the biggest fish of the day. When the bottle came up he opened it, smelled and tasted it suspiciously and then drank the contents at a gulp. Then running to the front he shouted:

"Captain, stop the ship, quick!"

"Why, what's the matter?" inquired the astonished skipper.

"Heave over the anchor, I tell you," shrieked Moore. "The ship is passing over a brewery."

Spanish Salad.

Soak some large Spanish onions for a few hours, changing the water frequently; chop them and add to them a good bit of chopped parsley; make a dressing of oil and vinegar and pour over the onions; serve on lettuce leaves.

Eggless Pancakes.

One cup of sour milk or buttermilk, a little solt, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of melted lard, enough flour to make a soft batter.

Mock Pate Foie Gras Sandwiches.

Parboil one-half pound calf's liver; pat dry on a cloth; cut in dice, and fry gently with a little bacon, four mushrooms and three shallots, all minced fine. When done—and it must not be allowed to overcook, which toughens it—put into a mortar and pound to a smooth paste. Season with salt, pepper, a piece of grated nutmeg and powdered mace, then rub through a sieve and spread. A few chopped truffles improve the flavor.

About Aluminum.

Though aluminum takes first rank among metals for lightness, combined with toughness and durability, it is hardly what one would expect to prove useful as a textile material, but the articles now made from it include neck-cloths, pompadours, shoes, belts, neckties, shawls and hats. Straps and lacings for shoes are among the newest productions. Sleeves or screens from aluminum have proven especially valuable in sugar refining, as it quickly becomes coated with acid, resisting oxide; and it can be woven alone into fabrics for other purposes.

The best results, however, are obtained by employing the aluminum yarn—smooth or twisted—as warp, with colored silk threads for weft. When this cloth is made into cloaks or theatrical costumes the effect is very striking, and the body of a beautiful woman is said to look as though dipped in silver. Fabrics and cloths from glass and silk threads woven together attracted much attention when exhibited in Paris some ryeas ago.

The kickers on the farm are not so hard to get along with as the kickers in town. On the farm there is the kicking cow, and our long-eared friend, the mule, while in town there is the old mossback who wants all the municipal improvements without paying for them. The cow may be sold for beef, the mule traded for a shotgun, but nothing but a funeral will get rid of a town kicker.—Ex.

NO DANGER OF WAR

President Taft, in Washington Speech, Allays Rumors

SITUATION AT THE CANAL

Declares That Though Conflict Is Not Expected, "Big Ditch" Should Be Put in Shape to Be Protected.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 19.—President Taft, addressing the members of the American Society for the Judicial Settlement of International Disputes at the closing banquet Saturday night, allayed "the so-called war scare which has furnished pabulum for the newspapers in the last few days," He said there is not the slightest reason for such a sensation because the United States is at peace with all the nations of the world and is quite likely to remain so.

He said his purpose in outlining the preparedness of the United States for war "at a peace meeting" was to show by contrast the great worthiness of the movement for a permanent court of arbitral justice and universal peace. The president summarized the condition of the national defenses and urged that a policy of "wise preparedness" be pursued. He emphasized the fact that the American people never would consent to the maintenance of a standing army sufficient to cope with that of the greater powers.

He urged the retention of the present regular army, the establishment of a national militia, the adopting of the pending volunteer bill to go into operation should war be declared, and the adopting of a law now before congress providing for a force of additional officers who will be "able at time of peace to render efficient service in drilling the militia of the state," and finally the accumulation of guns and amunition "to equip and arm the force we could collect under the colors in an emergency."

The president said the United States had excellent coast defenses for every important harbor that an enemy would enter.

"The fact that we fortify the canal will not prevent us from discharging all international obligations that we may have in respect to it, but it will enable us to defend ourselves in its possession against the act of very irresponsible force or nation. It will not prevent our maintaining its neutrality if that is wise, and right."

FILES LIEN ON NEW ROAD

Atlantic, Northern & Southern Embarrassed for Lack of Funds Resulting From Litigation.

Atlantic, Ia., Dec. 19.—Shugart & Barnes of Des Moines, grading contractors, filed a mechanics' lien against the Atlantic, Northern & Southern railway for the sum of $79,144.74. This company did the grading on the road, which is supposed to be completed by Jan. 1. Their entire bill is $129,869.84. They have been paid $5,000. The lien will not prevent the completion of the road, but it indicates that the road is in close conditions financially. The A., N. & S. is a private road being built by subscriptions and taxes in the townships of Montgomery and Cass counties between here and Villisca. The managers of the road state that they are temporarily embarrassed by the inability to get funds. The taxes which have been voted them are tied up in the courts. Other taxes have been voted, but do not come due until Jan.

Consent Petitions Filed.

Des Moines, Dec. 19.—The mulct saloon petition, giving the saloons consent to operate in Des Moines for a period of five years after July 1, contains 7,908 signers. The brewery petition, giving consent for the manufacture of liquor for a like period, contains the same number of signers. That is a majority of 1,617, figured on the basis of a total of 12,581 votes cast at the last election. The saloon and brewery petitions must be signed by a majority of the voters.

English Women Smoke Pipes.

The latest fancy of the woman-smoker is a pipe—not the tiny affair that suffices for the Japanese, but a good-sized brier or a neat meerschaum. The pipe is boldly carried along with a gold card case and chain-purse. For some time now the cigarette has given place to a cigar, small in size and mild in quality. Women said they were tired of the cigarette, and wanted a bigger smoke. —London Mail.

Cripple Rides Bicycle.

George Anstey, aged 12, a cripple, of Leicester, England, is one of the most remarkable cyclists in the country. Both his legs are withered and useless, but the Leicester Cripples' Guild has provided him with a two-wheeled pedalless machine, with a padded tube covering the axle bar. Across this he lies face foremost, and with wooden clogs strapped to his hands he propels himself along the streets and roads in a marvelously rapid manner. He has complete control of the machine, his hands acting as pedals, steering gear, and brake combined.

Pretty Good Definition.

We hear some funny things in Fleet street sometimes, and the following definition of the height of aggravation, by a gentleman in rather shaky boots, whom we encountered in a well-known hostelry the other day, struck us as being particularly choice.

"The 'eight of haggravation, gentlemen," said this pothouse humorist, setting his pewter on the counter and looking round proudly, with the air of one about to let off a good thing, "the 'eight of haggravation—why, trying to ketch a flea out o' yer ear with a pair of boxin' gloves."—London Tit-Bits.

An Alaskan Luncheon.

Runners of woven Indian basketry, with white drawnwork doilies at each of the 12 covers, were used on an oval mahogany table. The doilies were made at Sitka. In the middle of the table a mirror held a tall central vase of frosted glass, surrounded by four smaller vases, all filled with white spring blossoms. The edge of the mirror was banked with the same flowers. Four totem poles were placed on doilies in the angles made by the runners.

Place cards were water colors of Alaskan scenery. Abalone shells held salted nuts, and tiny Indian baskets held bonbons. The soup spoons were of horn, several of the dishes used were made by Alaskan Indians, and the cakes were served on baskets.

The menu was as follows: Poisson a la Bering Sea (halibut chowder), Yukon climbers (broiled salmon, potatoes Julienne), snowbirds avec auroraborealis (roast duck with jelly), Shungnak river turnips, Tanana beets, Skagway hash (salad), Fairbanks nuggets (ripe strawberries arranged on individual dishes around a central mound of powdered sugar), arctic slices (brick ice cream), Circle City delights (small cakes), Klondike nuggets (yellow cheese in round balls on crackers), Nome firewater (coffee). —Woman's Home Companion.

Lightning Change.

The Manager—Can you make quick changes and double in a few parts?

The Actor—Can I? Say, you know the scene in "Love and Lobsters," where the hero and the villain are fighting, and a friend rushes in and separates 'em? Well, I played all three parts one night when the other two fellows were ill.

Not Altogether Dead.

Mr. Robert Butler of Marlborough, England, has had the peculiar experience of hearing his death announced. He was attending the poor law conference at Exeter when one of the delegates moved that, in consequence of the death of Mr. Butler, which they all regretted, another gentleman, whom he named, should be appointed to fill his place as one of the representatives of Wiltshire on the central committee. Mr. Butler rose from his place on the platform and announced to the conference, amid much amusement, that, so far as he was aware, he was still alive and in good health, and would be pleased to continue in the office if the conference desired.

Bankers and Bank Notes.

Four men, three of whom were connected with brokerage concerns in the Wall street district, were discussing United States paper currency and the disappearance of counterfeits. "We are so sure nowadays," said one of the party, "as to the genuineness of bills that little attention is paid to them in handling, except as to denomination." To prove his assertion he took a $10 yellowback from his pocket, and, holding it up, asked who could tell whose portrait it bore. No one knew, and by way of coaching the broker said it was the first treasurer of the United States. Again no one knew the name. "Why, It's Michael Hillegas," said the man proudly. "But in confidence, I'll tell you, I didn't know it five minutes ago."—New York Tribune.

Vivid at Least.

Dr. Hiram C. Cortlandt, the well-known theologian of Des Moines, said in a recent address:

"Thomas A. Edison tells us that he thinks the soul is not immortal; but, after all, what does this great wizard know about souls? His forte is electricity and machinery, and when he talks of souls he reminds me irresistibly of the young lady who visited the Baldwin locomotive works and then told how a locomotive is made.

"'You pour,' she said, 'a lot of sand into a lot of boxes, and you throw old stove lids and things into a furnace, and they you empty the molten stream into a hole in the sand, and everybody yells and swears. Then you pour it out and let it cool and pound it, and then you put it in a thing that bores holes in it. Then you screw it together, and paint it, and put steam in it, and it goes splendidly; and they take it to a drafting room and make a bluep rint of it. But one thing I forgot—they have to make a boiler. One man gets inside and one gets outside, and they pound frightfully; and then they tie it to the other thing, and you ought to see it go!'"

Largest of Whales.

The largest whale of its type of which there is scientific record was captured recently off Port Arthur, Tex. He measured sixty-three feet in length, and was estimated to be about three hundred years old. Captain Cob Plummer, mate of a United States pilot boat, sighted the monster in the shoals off the jetties, and the crew of his vessel captured the mammal. The huge body was towed ashore, exhibited and much photographed before being cut up.

Rat Bounty Excites Merriment.

Seattle, fearing the introduction of bubonic plague by rats, has offered a bounty of ten cents a rat. This moves Tacoma, safe from infection from the sea, to raucous laughter, and the Ledger says that the bounty, "though not intended for rodents of Tacoma, Everett, Bellingham and other populous and busy centers, has been finding its way into the pockets of non-residents of Seattle for non-resident rats. But the joke would be on us if it were found that our rat population had found its way into the Seattle census."

Two Very Old Ladies.

We have heard a great deal lately about long-lived people, but it is probable that the oldest two people in the world today are Frau Dutkievitz and another old lady named Babavaslika.

The former lives at Posem, in Prussian Poland, and was born on February 21, 1785. She is therefore one hundred and twenty-five years old. The latter, however, is nine months her senior, having been born in May, 1784.

She is still a fairly hale old woman, and for nearly one hundred years worked in the fields. Her descendants number close on 100, and these now make her a joint allowance. She lives at the village of Bavelsko, whose neighborhood she has never quitted during the whole of her long life. She remembers events which happened at the beginning of last century much more clearly than those of the last 40 years.—Dundee Advertiser.

Too Ardent a Lover.

Georgotto Fontano, an embroiderer who lives in the Rue Sevres in Paris, has found herself condemned to a month's imprisonment for what seems to her a harmless act.

She was going home from a concert a few evenings ago when she decided she would like to see her fiance. As he happens to be a fireman whose station is in her own neighborhood it occurred to her it would be very easy to summon him to her side by breaking the glass of the fire alarm and sounding a call.

She did so anr in a few moments fire engines came from several directions, all laden with firemen, of course, but alas! her fiance was not among them, and more than that all the firemen were angry, and before she knew what had happened she was taken to a magistrate, who proceeded to make the course of true love run unsmoothly by sending her to prison for a month in spite of her tears and protests that she thought it would be a simple way of bringing her fiance to her side.

That Suit for Libel

Against the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Gave a Splendid Chance to Bring Out Facts

A disagreement about advertising arose with a "weekly" Journal.

Following it, an attack on us appeared in their editorial columns; sneering at the claims we made particularly regarding Appendicitis.

We replied through the regular papers and the "weekly" thought we hit back rather too hard and thereupon sued for libel.

The advertisement the "weekly" attacked us about claimed that in many cases of appendicitis an operation could be avoided by discontinuing indigestible food, washing out the bowels and taking a predigested food Grape-Nuts.

Observe we said MANY cases not all.

Wouldn't that knowledge be a comfort to those who fear a surgeon's knife as they fear death?

The "weekly" writer said that was a lie.

We replied that he was ignorant of the facts.

He was put on the stand and compelled to admit he was not a Dr. and had no medical knowledge of appendicitis and never investigated to find out if the testimonal letters to our Co. were genuine.

A famous surgeon testified that when an operation was required Grape-Nuts would not obviate it. True.

We never claimed that when an operation was required Grape-Nuts would prevent it.

The surgeon testified bacteria [germs] helped to bring on an attack and bacteria was grown by undigested food frequently.

We claimed and proved by other famous experts that undigested food was largely responsible for appendicitis.

We showed by expert testimony that many cases are healed without a knife, but by stopping the use of food which did not digest, and when food was required again it was helpful to use a predigested food which did not overtax the weakened organs of digestion.

When a pain in the right side appears it is not always necessary to be rushed off to a hospital and at the risk of death be cut.

Plain common sense shows the better way is to stop food that evidently has not been digested.

Then, when food is required, use an easily digested food. Grape-Nuts or any other if you know it to be predigested (partly digested before taking).

We brought to Court analytical chemists from New York, Chicago and Mishawaka, Ind., who swore to the analysis of Grape-Nuts and that part of the starchy part of the wheat and barley had been transformed into sugar, the kind of sugar produced in the human body by digesting starch (the large part of food).

Some of the State chemists brought on by the "weekly" said Grape-Nuts could not be called a "predigested" food because not all of it was digested outside the body.

The other chemists said any food which had been partly or half digested outside the body was commonly known as "predigested."

Splitting hairs about the meaning of a word.

It is sufficient that if only one-half of the food is "predigested," it is easier on weakened stomach and bowels than food in which no part is predigested.

To show the facts we introduce Dr. Thos. Darlington, former chief of the N. Y. Board of Health, Dr. Ralph W. Webster, chief of the Chicago Laboratories, and Dr. B. Sachs, N. Y.

If we were a little severe in our denunciation of a writer, self-confessed ignorant about appendicitis and its cause, it is possible the public will excuse us, in view of the fact that our head, Mr. C. W. Post, has made a lifetime study of food, food digestion and effects, and the conclusions are indorsed by many of the best medical authorities of the day.

Is it possible that we are at fault for suggesting, as a Father and Mother might, to one of the family who announced a pain in the side: "Stop using the food, greasy meats, gravies, mince pie, cheese, too much starchy food, etc., etc., which has not been digested, then when again ready for food use Grape-Nuts because it is easy of digestion?"

Or should the child be at once carted off to a hospital and cut?

We have known of many cases wherein the approaching signs of appendicitis have disappeared by the suggestion being followed.

No one better appreciates the value of a skilful physician when a person is in the awful throes of acute appendicitis, but "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Just plain old common sense is helpful even nowadays.

This trial demonstrated Grape-Nuts food is pure beyond question.

It is partly predigested.

Appendicitis generally has rise from undigested food.

It is not always necessary to operate.

It is best to stop all food.

When ready to begin feeding use a predigested food.

It is palatable and strong in Nourishment.

It will pay fine returns in health to quit the heavy breakfasts and lunches and use less food but select food certainly known to contain the elements nature requires to sustain the body. May we be permitted to suggest a breakfast of fruit, Grape-Nuts and cream, two soft boiled eggs, and some hot toast and cocoa, milk or Postum?

The question of whether Grape-Nuts does or does not contain the elements which nature requires for the nourishment of the brain, also of its purity, will be treated in later newspaper articles.

Good food is important and its effect on the body is also important.

Christmas Eve

Christmas eve! And a blustery night—
Snow-flurries almost blinding the sight;
Eddying winds shift to and fro
And toss from the chimneys smoke-clouds low.

On the street is heard a noisy throng
Of pleasure-bent shoppers, hurrying along,
Laden with bundles and baskets and toys
To gladden the hearts of girls and boys.

Let the wintry winds moan on, and sigh
Through the forests, and sing their lullaby;
'Neath holly-wreathed branch and mistletoe
I rest and sleep while the tempests blow.

Christmas eve! And the sound of bell,
Yuletide harmonies, break and swell,
And sing of a Babe in Bethlehem,
Born in a manger—Saviour of men!

Christmas in Odd Corners

Yuletide Recollections of a Traveler

IT has been my lot to spend many of my Christmases in foreign lands. I recall one dismal holiday spent in a filthy post-house on the Great Post Road at Nijni Udinsk, now, in these days of the trans-Siberian railway, a place of some importance.

I was alone, on my way from Petersburg to Irkutsk. On the previous day I had overtaken a convoy of prisoners in chains, and as on the morning of the Russian Christmas day I was sitting by the high brick stove, I saw the Cossacks and their despairing charges arrive.

I remember walking and talking with several of them in that wilderness of newly fallen snow. Most of them were, or said they were, victims of the unscrupulous agents provocateurs of the government, and all seemed bitter against the czar and his advisers—as indeed they well might be.

Another Christmas of the Greek calendar I spent in Servia—in Belgrade, the capital of that gallant little state, the powder-magazine of the Balkans. It was a cold, bright, sunny day, and an air of festivity was everywhere. The service in the cathedral, attended by the king and his cabinet, was a brilliant affair, and after a stroll in the delightful Kalemegdan garden, overlooking the Danube, I lunched with my friend the minister of justice and his charming American wife. The streets were hung with flags, exchanges of presents and flowers were universal, and many were the quaint Serb customs.

The twenty-fifth of December three years ago I spent wearily in the stuffy restaurant car of the Nord express between Paris and Petersburg. Again, I was alone and I remember, as we steamed out of Vilna station to the great plain towards Dunaburg, the chef of that celebrated express produced his triumph—an English pudding, with a small piece of holly stuck in the top. My fellow passengers, being all foreigners, failed to appreciate it. But I did.

Another memorable holiday was that I passed in the reindeer-skin hut of a Laplander half-way between Alexandrovsk and Kandalaksha. I was traveling by sled. I had left Kirkenaes, on an arm of the Arctic ocean, a month before and was now working my way south toward Archangel.

I produced a bottle of much-shaken port wine, in honor of the occasion, and poured out a glass for my host. He was very suspicious of it, and compelled me to swallow mine first. Then he sipped his, and pulled a wry face. His wife tasted it, and sniffed suspiciously, and afterward the servants, but all declared it was some horrid English decoction—some medicine, it must be, they said. They had never before tasted wine. They had never seen a bunch of grapes, never a rose, and never even a tree.

One Yuletide dinner I ate at Ciro's, at Monte Carlo, where the fooling was fast and furious, and with my friends I watched "the tables" afterward, supping across at the Hotel de Paris, and receiving a present from the monster tree.—William Le Queux.

A Tripe Famine.

"I want to get two pounds of tripe," said the lady, entering the shop.

"Sorry, ma'am," replied the keeper, "but we haven't any tripe today."

"No tripe? Why, it's in season."

"No, ma'am, there's no tripe being shot just now."

"No tripe being shot! Why, what are you talking about?"

"I—I should say, ma'am, that the fisheries commission won't allow tripe to be caught now."

"Are you crazy, man? I don't want fish! I want tripe."

"Well, what in thunder is tripe, ma'am?"

"Why—why, I don't know just what it is, but if you haven't got any I'll try some other place."

"How is the new filing system? Success?" asked the agent of the merchant to whom he had sold a "system" a few days before.

"Great!" said the merchant.

"Good!" said the agent, rubbing his hands. "And how is business?"

"Business?" echoed the merchant. "Oh, we have stopped business to attend to the filing system."

Fresh Air in Winter

In winter, it is hard to get fresh air in certain rooms. Some rooms in a house are usually colder than others, and if you open the windows it is hard again to heat the room properly.

If you keep the windows closed you don't get fresh air; if you keep them open you cannot quickly reheat the room. The

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

solves the difficulty. You can leave the windows in a room open all day in winter, and when you close them apply a match to a Perfection Oil Heater and heat the room to any temperature you desire in a few minutes.

The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in japan or nickel. It burns for nine hours. It has a cool handle and a damper top. It has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be quickly clenaed. An indicator always shows amount of oil in the font.

The filler-cap does not need to be screwed down. It is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and consequently, it can always be easily unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection Oil Heater is strong, durable, well made, built for service, yet light and ornamental.

Bank Examiner Resigns

Bank Cases Reversed

Attorneys interested have received a brief notice from the clerk of the supreme court stating that Judge Clark's decision favoring the banks who held forged paper from the defunct Corwith State Bank has been reversed by the higher court.

Cashier Standring had forged several thousand dollars worth of notes and sold or disposed of them as collateral to other banks. The district court's decision was that these claims should be preferred over the claims of depositors.

The supreme court reverses this decision and says the claims of the depositors should have the preference. After the opinion is received in full from the clerk of the supreme court other details can be given. However it is not probable the banks who held the forged paper will allow the matter to rest, but will endeavor to get another hearing of the case.—Kanawha Record.

Shortage of Cars Serious.

Fort Dodge.—The car Shortage in Northern Iowa is certainly growing quite serious. Elevator men, stock men and other heavy shippers are forced to await their turn before the railroads can give them cars. Every road through Fort Dodge has experienced a car famine this fall.

The railroads are making an effort to relieve the situation. The Illinois Central brought 100 empty cars here Monday from the yards at Tara. The movement of loaded cars Sunday was 1,237, as against 850 on that date a year ago. Because of the straightening out of the congestion on the eastern divisions of the road, traffic is being moved more rapidly. G. W. Barry, superintendent of the Dubuque division and formerly superintendent of the Cherokee-Omaha division, is responsible for the clearing away of the congestion.

Several of the railroads of northern Iowa are having a water famine. The Northwestern between Eagle Grove and Ames is running two tenders behind every engine to furnish enough water for the run. Wells at Jewell Junction, Gladbrook and Paullina are dry.

Stock Raisers Given Damages.

Audubon.—A lawsuit that is without precedent in Iowa has just been tried in the district court here, entitled Hensley & Santee against the Rock Island Railroad company. The plaintiffs, stock raisers of Audubon county, fattened 1,000 sheep for the Chicago market. They asked for cars in which to ship them, the agent at Exira, the shipping point, promising that the cars would be on the track Jan. 4. The plaintiff claimed that the cars were not provided, that the weather became stormy, that the special feed that the shippers had prepared for the sheep became exhausted and that the sheep deteriorated in condition. They also claimed that when cars were sent to them, which was nearly two weeks later, the condition of the Chicago market, which had fallen, combined with the alleged loss in flesh which the sheep had shown, compelled them to suffer a loss of $1,430, for which suit was brought. The trial of the case consumed three days. The jury, after being out two hours, returned a verdict for the plaintiffs in the sum of $1,046. The company will appeal.

Marean, day switchman in the Rock Island yards at this place, while kicking the coupling drawbar between a box car and engine accidentally got his right foot caught between as the engine and car came together, nearly crushing his foot. As it was all the flesh from his ankle to his toes was scraped off.

Hunter's Arm Is Blown Off.

Cedar Rapids.—Enos Raim, proprietor of a saloon, went out with a hunting party to procure game for a supper, the proceeds of which were to be given to Ray Pickerell, a bartender who recently lost a limb by the accidental discharge of a gun. Raim is minus his right forearm as a result of an explosion while trying to extract a shell from his shotgun.

Mrs. Heikes Granted $35,000 Alimony.

Audubon.—Probably the largest judgment ever recorded in a divorce action in the state of Iowa has just been rendered in the district court here in the case of Mrs. John R. Heikes against John R. Heikes, in which the plaintiff asked for a legal separation and alimony, alleging statutory offenses and was given $35,000.

SYNOPSIS.

Captain Plum of the sloop Typhoon secretly on Beaver island, stronghold of the Mormons. Obadiah Price, a councilor, confronts him, as he expected, and bargains for Marion aboard the sloop. He takes a solemn oath to deliver a daughter of Franklin Pierce, president of the United States. Near Price's cabin Plum sees a frightened face of a young woman disappears in the darkness, the perfume of lilacs. It develops that Marion is to demand settlement of the island is to demand settlement of the king, Strang, for the looting of the ship by Mormons. Price shows Plum to Strang's palace, and through a window sees the lady of the lilacs, who proves to be Marion is the king's seventh wife. Plum learns from the king's office Nat is warned by a woman that his life is in danger. Strang professes indignation when told of Plum's grievance and promises to right the matter. Nat rescues Neil, who has been unjustly whipped, and the king orders Sheriff Arbor Croche, to put an end to the two men. Plum learns from Neil that the girl of the lilacs, is a prisoner. The two men plan to escape from the island and take Marion and Neil with them. Arbor Croche, the daughter of Arbor Croche, and friend of Neil. Nat discovers that the sloop is gone. Marion tells him that she has been seized by the Mormons and begs him to leave the island, declaring that nothing can save her from the fate to which she is doomed to marry Obadiah Price raving mad. Recovering from the blow Nat that Strang is doomed. Plum learns that Mormons are descending on the island and learns that Marion has been taken to the castle by Strang.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

"Marion," she breathed softly. "I would help you—I would help her—" For a moment her pale face was filled with a light that seemed to have shone from the face of God. "Don't you understand?" she repeated, scarcely above a whisper. "I have been Strang's one great love—until Marion came into my life. I have lost—you have lost all. And it is the more bitter because I love you, and Strang—"

With a cry Nathaniel sprang to her feet. The candle fell from his hand, and went out on the floor, and left them in darkness.

"She loves me! You say that she loves me?"

The woman's voice came to him in a sob filled with the sweetness of pity.

"I have said so tonight—in this room. I told me that she loved you as I never thought that she could love any one in this world. O, my God, is there a balm for your heart, if it is true! And Strang—my Strang has forgotten his love for me!"

Nathaniel reached out his arms. He found the woman and for a time held her hands in his, while a silence fell upon them. He could hear the sobbing of her breath and her fingers tightened about his. His heart seemed bursting with a hatred of this man who called himself a prophet of God; a hatred that burned furiously even as his being was thrilled with the wild joys of the words he had just heard.

"Where is Marion?" he pleaded.

"I don't know," replied the woman. "They took her away alone. The others have gone to the temple."

"You think she is at the temple?" he inquired insistently.

"One of the others came back a little while ago. She said that Marion was not there."

"Where is Strang?"

At the time he felt the woman tremble.

"Strang—"

She drew her hands away from him. There was a strange quiver in her voice.

"Then where is Strang?"

There came no reply.

"Woman—where is he?"

"I don't know."

"Is he at the temple?"

"I don't know."

He could hear her stifled breath; he could almost feel her trembling. He began to reach out there in the darkness. What a woman was this whose love the Mormon king had broken!

"Listen," he said gently. "I am going to find Marion. I am going to take her away. Tomorrow you shall have Strang again—if he is alive!"

There was no answer and he moved quickly back to the door. He closed it after him as he entered the hall. In the big room he paused for a moment under the hanging lamp to examine his pistol and then went out. The grove in which the castle stood was absolutely deserted. So far as he could see not even a guard was posted over the property of the king. Nathaniel had become too accustomed to surprises of Beaver island to be startled at this. He could see by the lights flaring along the harbor that the castle was in an isolated position easy of attack. From what Marion's wife had told him and the evidences of panic in the chambers of the harem he believed that the Mormon king had abandoned the castle to its fate and that the approaching conflict would center about the temple.

Was Marion at the temple? If so he realized that she was beyond his reach. But the woman had said that she was not there. Where could she have gone? Why had not Strang taken her with his wives? In a flash Nathaniel thought of Arbor Croche and Obadiah—the two men who always knew what the king was doing. If he could find the sheriff alone—if he could only nurse Obadiah back into sane life again! He thrust his pistol into its holster. There was but one thing for him to do and that was to return to the old councilor. It would be madness for him to go down to St. James. He had lost—Strang had won. But his love for Marion was undying. If he found her Strang's wife it would make no difference to him. It would all be evened up when he killed the king. For Marion loved him—loved him—

He turned his face toward Obadiah's, his heart singing the glad words which the woman had spoken to him back there in the sixth chamber.

And as he was about to take the first step in that long race back to the mad councilor's he heard behind him the approach of quick feet. He crouched behind a clump of bushes and waited. A shadowy form was hurrying through the grove. It passed close to him, mounted the castle steps and in the doorway turned and looked back for an instant in the direction of St. James.

Nathaniel's lips quivered; the pounding of his heart half choked him; a shriek of mad, terrible joy was ready to leap from his lips

There in the dim glow of the great lamp stood Strang, the Mormon king.

CHAPTER IX.

The Hand of Fate.

Like a panther Nathaniel crouched and watched the man on the steps. His muscles jerked, his hands were clenched; each instant he seemed about to spring. But he held himself back until Strang had passed through the door. Then he slipped along the log wall of the castle, hugging the shadows, fearing that the king might reappear and see him in time to close the door. What an opportunity fate had made for him! His fingers itched to get at Strang's thick bull-like throat. He felt no fear, no hesitation about the outcome of the struggle with this giant prophet of God. He did not plan to shoot, for a shot would destroy the secret of Marion's fate. He would choke the truth from Strang; rob him of life slowly, gasp by gasp, until in the horror of death the king would reveal her hiding place—would tell what he had done with her.

Then he would kill him!

There was the strength of tempered steel in his arms; his body, slender as an athlete's, quivered to hurl itself into action. Up the steps he crept so cautiously that he made no sound. In the intensity of his purpose Nathaniel looked only ahead of him—to the door. He did not see that another figure was stealing through the gloom behind him as cautiously, as quietly as himself. He passed through the door and stood erect. Strang had not seen him. He had not heard him. He was standing with his huge back toward him, facing the hall that led to the sixth chamber—and the woman. Nathaniel drew his pistol. He would not shoot, but Strang might be made to tell the truth with death leveling itself at his heart. He groped behind him, found the door, and slammed it shut. There would be no retreat for the king!

And the man who turned toward him at the slamming of that door, turned slowly, coolly, and gazed into the black muzzle of his pistol looked, indeed, every inch of him a king. The muscles of his face betrayed no surprise, no fear. His splendid nerve was unshaken, his eyes unfaltering as they rose above the pistol to the face behind it. For fifteen seconds there was a strange terrible silence as the eyes of the two men met. In that quarter of a minute Nathaniel knew that he had not guessed rightly. Strang was not afraid. He would not tell him where Marion was. The insuperable courage of this man maddened Captain Plum and unconsciously his finger fell upon the trigger of his pistol. He almost shrieked the words that he meant to speak calmly:

"Where is Marion?"

"She is safe, Captain Plum. She is where the friends who are invading us from the mainland will have no chance of finding her."

Strang spoke as quietly as though in his own office beside the temple Suddenly he raised his voice.

"She is safe, Captain Plum—safe!"

His eyes wavered, and traveled beyond Nathaniel measured that glance It had gone to the door He heard a movement, felt a draft of air, and in an instant he whirled about with his pistol pointed to the door In another instant he had fired and the huge form of Arbor Croche toppled headlong into the room. A roar like that of a beast came from behind him and before he could turn again Strang was upon him. In that moment he felt that all was lost. Under the weight of the Mormon king he was crushed to the floor; his pistol slipped from his grasp; two great hands choked a despairing cry from his throat He saw the prophet's face over him, distorted with passion, his huge neck bulging, his eyes flaming like angry garnets. He struggled to free his pinioned arms, to wrench off the death grip at his throat, but his efforts were like those of a child against a giant In a last terrible attempt he drew up his knees inch by inch under the weight of his enemy; it was his only chance—his only hope. Even as he felt the fingers about his throat sinking like hot iron into his flesh and the breath slipping from his body he remembered this murderous knee-punch of the rough fighters of the inland seas and with all the life that remained in him he sent it crushing into the abdomen of the Mormon king It was a moment before he knew that it had been successful, before the film cleared from his eyes and he saw Strang groveling at his feet; another moment and he hurled himself on the prophet. His fist shot out like a hammer against Strang's jaw. Again and again he struck until the great shaggy head fell back limp. Then his fingers twined themselves like the links of a chain about the purplish throat and he choked until Strang's eyes opened wide and lifeless and his convulsions ceased. He would have held on until there was no doubt of the end, had not the king's wife—the woman whose misery he had shared that night—suddenly flung herself with a piercing cry, between him and the blackened face, clutching at his hands with all her fragile strength.

"My God, you are killing him—killing him!" she moaned.

Her eyes blazed as she tore at his fingers.

"You are killing him—killing him!" she shrieked. "He has not destroyed Marion! You said you would take her and leave him—for me—" She struck her head against his breast, tearing the flesh of his wrists with her nails.

Nathaniel loosened his grip and staggered to his feet.

"For you!" he panted. "If you had only come—a little sooner—" He stumbled to his pistol and picked it up. "I am afraid he is—dead!"

He did not look back.

Arbor Croche barred the door. He had not moved since he had fallen. His head was twisted so that his face was turned to the glow of the lamp and Nathaniel shuddered as he saw where his shot had struck. He had apparently died with that last cry on his lips.

There was no longer a fear of the Mormons in Nathaniel. He believed the king and Arbor Croche dead, and that in the gloom and excitement of the night he could go among the people of St. James undiscovered. A great load was lifted from his soul, for if he had not been in time to save Marion he had at least delivered her after a short bondage. He had now only to save Marion and she would go with him, for she loved him—and Strang was no more.

He hurried through the grove toward the temple. Even before he had come near to it he could see that a great crowd had congregated there. The street which he passed was deserted. No lights shone in the houses. Even the dogs were gone. For the first time he understood what it meant. The whole town had fled to that huge log stronghold for protection. Buildings and trees shut out his view seaward but he could see the flare of great fires mounting into the sky and he knew that those who were not at the temple were guarding the shore.

THEY KNEW THAT BAD ROAD

Mark Twain Tells How Three Natives Dodged Task of Hauling Stage Through Mud.

Mark Twain was a firm believer in the national movement for good roads, and had many a tale to tell about the incredibly bad roads of some sections. A Hartford man recalled the other day this experience of the famous humorist's: "I once had 30 miles"—so Mark Twain began—"to go by stage in Mississippi. The roads were terrible, for it was early spring. The passengers consisted of five men and three women—three large, well-developed women, swathed in shawls and veils, who kept to themselves, talking in low tones on the rear seat. Well, we hadn't gone a mile before the stage got stuck two feet deep in the black mud. Down jumped every man of us, and for ten minutes we tugged and jerked and pulled till we got the stage out of the hole. We had hardly got our breath back when the stage stuck again, and again we had to strain our hearts out to release her. In covering 15 miles we got stuck eight times, and in going the whole 30 we lifted that old stage out of the mud 17 times by actual count. We five male passengers were wet, tired and filthy when we reached our destination, and so you can imagine our feeling when we saw the three women passengers remove, as they dismounted, their veils, their shawls and their skirts, and, lo and behold! they were three big, hearty, robust men. As we stared at them with bulging and ferocious eyes, one of them said: 'Thanks for your labor, gents. We knowed this road and prepared for it. Will you licker?'"

An exchange very sensibly remarks that parents oftentimes wonder who or what has ruined their boys. They have been in school every day but the teacher either does not teach them any lessons of morality or else his teaching is a failure. The truth is, the boys are on the street from the time school closes until late at night. The street corner is the best place in the world for teaching vice, profligacy and crime. Nearly all the bad language and idle vicious habits of boys are taught on the streets at late hours of the night. Teachers may be able to accomplish a little in counteracting these evil influences but much of their labor is in vain until parents co-operate with them in keeping their boys off the street.

Women War on Disease.

If exophthalmic goitre, the origin of which has up to the present baffled the medical world, is ever proved to be a microbic disease, a great portion of the credit for the discovery, says the London Mail, will be due to the women workers in the laboratories of the Royal hospital in Gray's Inn road.

In recent years the surgeons of the Royal Free hospital have made a special study of goitre cases from the operative standpoint, and from the material thus gained the laboratory staff have been able to go thoroughly into the numerous theories current as to its cause. As a result microscopic changes in the tissues of goitres have been observed which almost conclusively prove that some as yet undiscovered microbe is the active cause of the disease.

The success of the experiment of having women on the house staff, begun in 1901, is shown in the annual increase in the number of patients treated since that date. At the annual meeting, it was stated that more than 100,000 out-patients had been treated in the past year.

Permanently Soured.

The lawyer was examining the veniremen as to his qualifications to sit on the jury.

"You know, Mr. Swaddleford," he said, "the meaning of the phrase, 'reasonable doubt,' do you not?"

"Yes, sir."

"If the testimony in this case should cause you to entertain a doubt as to the guilt of the defendant do you think you could give him the benefit of it?"

"No, sir; I couldn't."

"Why not?"

"Because, sir," snapped the venireman, "I've been givin' old Doc Cook the benefit of all the doubts and when I found out he's the worst faker in the business I ain't got no patience with nobody! That's why."

"That is all, Mr. Swaddleford."

"You may stand aside," said the court.

Servants in Nobleman's Clothes.

Mr. W. M. Webb explained how fashions were perpetuated by the gradual acquisition of a gentleman's castoff clothes by his servants. A powdered footman of today was wearing the costume of a gentleman of George II.'s time, and the lord mayor's coachman now was dressed exactly like a nobleman of the time of George III. A page boy, with his three rows of buttons, wore what was known in the early years of last century as the "Dutch skeleton dress," a very fashionable suit for sons of the upper —London Standard.

HIS LAPSE of MEMORY

When she saw the girl in the doorway the girl kneeling before the fireplace exclaimed: "Why, Isabel! How did you get in?"

"I ran right in," exclaimed the newcomer, sinking into a chair, "because I was sure I smelled something burning. I supposed the house was on fire. The maid was scrubbing the front steps and she must have thought me crazy. What on earth are you building a fire for on a hot day like this?"

The girl at the fireplace threw a handful of letters on the little flame which she had kindled. "Oh, this isn't a fire," she said. "It's a funeral."

"So that's it!" laughed Isabel. "Well, who is the man? And, Edith, why couldn't you have told me of your engagement in some other manner than this—letting me run into the house as though I were a thief or a maniac, just because you are having one of those bonfires which we always have on such occasions?"

"You're wrong on the first guess," said Edith as she threw the last letter on the fire and turned to face her caller. "I've half a mind to tell you about it," she mused, "for it is an interesting story. If you'll promise never to tell—"

"I promise."

"Well, then, Isabel, do you remember anything about Jack Wheeler and me?"

"What kind of memory do you think I have?" laughed Isabel. "Do I remember! Have I recovered yet from the nervous strain of trying to console Jack when you finally made him understand that you wouldn't marry him? And didn't I absolutely refuse to believe that he was engaged to some one else, until the wedding cards were out? It's two years ago, of course, but he was so madly in love with you that—"

"It happened yesterday afternoon," said Edith, interrupting the remarks of her friend. "I dropped in at Amy's and who should be there but Jack's wife! It was positively her first appearance in Chicago. It seems that her mother and Amy's mother were little girls together, or something like that. Anyway, there she was. Amy acted as if she wanted to laugh, or as if she were waiting for something very dramatic to happen. Jack's wife, however, seemed unconscious that I was anybody in particular."

"What is she like?" asked Isabel.

"She's a nice little thing," said Edith with the manner of one determined to be just. "But she isn't the kind of girl you would think Jack would admire."

"M-m-m," said Isabel, as she bent down, ostensibly to fasten her shoe, but really to hide a smile.

"No, she isn't the kind of girl you would think Jack would like. But she is very well bred and rather pretty in a quiet, demure way. We talked about the things that every one always talks about. Then in some way the conversation turned to names. I made my stock remark about the conveniences of having a name as odd as mine. Jack's wife then made her longest speech.

"'You know my name was Smith,' she said, 'and for that reason any name of more than two syllables always seems strange to me. And you know your name is enough to surprise nearly any one on the first hearing.' I agreed with her. Then she said: 'I've had a lurking fear that I didn't spell it right on the announcement cards. You see, Jack didn't write his list out for me, but simply told me the names.'

"She seemed so earnest about it that I assured her the name was spelled correctly. As a matter of fact, it was. Then I laughed and said it was my first name, which certainly is common enough, that had been her undoing—she had changed my name to Edna.

"Well, what do you suppose she replied? 'That is a joke on Jack,' she said, 'for I asked him what your first name was and he said it was either Edna or Edith, he couldn't remember which. Then he thought a minute and said it was Edna.'"

"She must be a little cat," declared Isabel.

"I wonder," said Edith. "Still, she seemed so unconscious and so demure that I can hardly believe it. The chances are that Jack really did say that to her."

"Well, where do the letters come in?" demanded Isabel.

"Oh," said Edith, "they haven't much to do with it. You see, the way she said it was so perfect that I came away telling myself that it must all be a mistake about Jack's having been fond of me; that time had exaggerated to me the importance of that affair. So this morning I went down to the storeroom and hunted around for a box of old letters that I knew was there. I hadn't thought about them for months and why I didn't destroy them long ago I don't know.

"I've spent hours reading them over, every one. And now I have burned them all, as your own eyes can testify. But in strict confidence, between ourselves, I don't mind telling you that at one time—and that not so very long ago—Jack Wheeler knew my name. And if it wasn't for shattering the faith of his little wife I'd advise her to call in a brain specialist for Jack. His sudden loss of memory must be a bad symptom."

"M-m-m," said Isabel. "There's nothing the matter with Jack. It's only that he has married a cat and an actress combined."

COMING OF WIRELESS PHONES

Some Recent Experiments Have Proven It a Practical and Wonderful Invention.

The Japanese have been the first nation to officially recognize the wireless telephone. The Occidentals are setting the pace for the world. Uncle Sam is not far behind, for congress has appropriated $30,000 this year for wireless telephones for the army and Rear Admiral Cowles, chief of the bureau of equipment of the United States navy, has submitted to congress a plan for equipping the vessels with wireless phones.

The inventor, Mr. Collins, is an alumnus of the old University of Chicago, and has been experimenting with wireless telephony since 1899. He patented his invention just after the dawn of the twentieth century and continued to develop and improve it until in July, 1908, he made his long distance test from his laboratory Newark, N. J., to Philadelphia, where another instrument was located in the Land Title building.

Since that time the growth of the wireless telephone idea has been phenomenal. Mr. Collins has perfected a tuning device that insures secrecy of conversation. He has improved the entire system until today his wireless telephone is ready for general commercial use.

The most notable tests of the Collins wireless telephone were made by the inventor in July, 1908, as above stated. The Scientific American states:

"The longest distance wireless telephone tests yet made on this side of the Atlantic were between Newark N. J., and Philadelphia, Pa., a distance of 81 miles, as wireless waves travel.

"The system by which this has been accomplished is due to A. Frederick Collins, a pioneer in the wireless telephone field. The first of his series of tests took place between his laboratory in Newark, where he has a high-power sending station, and the Singer building in New York city, about twelve miles away, when spoken words were clearly and loudly transmitted across the intervening space. The following day the distance was increased to 35 miles, when the receiving station was located at Mr. Collins' country home at Congers, N. Y., and then, amplifying the power of the sending station and bringing the instruments into sharp resonance, the Newark-Philadelphia tests were made the following Tuesday at midnight, from the top of the Land Title building."

Dogs as Draft Animals.

It is curious that though the Anglo-Saxons are a dog-loving people, we do not use our dogs for draft purposes. In the last century, as we have recorded, the oldest postmaster used dogs to draw the cart. And nowadays the seaside knows the goat that draws the baby chaise. But the dog, for some obscure reason, is ruled out of such service. Not that we neglect his service in hunting, as a watchman or as a detective. But he is no longer asked to drag a barrow as he is in France, Belgium and Germany.

Yet so soon as an arctic expedition is planned the dog is called in to pull the sledge, says the London Graphic. And you may notice the curious difference between the northern dog (with the touch of the wolf still evident) and the cultured dog of the London drawing room. Take the pug out on a chain and he hangs back. But put a chow-chow on a chain and he pulls violently forward. His instinct is to work against the collar. It is still something of a mystery why the dog is not permitted to work for his living between the shafts in England.

Sad but True.

"A few of us manage to carve our names on the tablet of fame," remarked old uncle Hankypank.

"Well?" said the player-up.

"But most of us never carve them on anything more important than a mud turtle."

FIRE KILLS 34

LIVES WIPED OUT WHILE FIGHTING FLAMES IN CHICAGO STOCKYARDS.

CHIEF HORAN AMONG DEAD

RESCUERS FACE FEARFUL ODDS TO RECOVER BODIES OF COMRADES.

Tornado of Flame Sweeps Morris Plant, Leaving Death and Ruin in Its Wake—Explosion of Ammonia Traps Firemen, Burying Them Under Tons of Wreckage—Loss Heavy.

Chicago.—Fire Chief James Horan and 30 members of his fire-fighting force were killed while engaged in an onslaught against a tornado of flame that swept into rubbish the new beef-house of the packing plant of Morris & Co., at the Union stockyards.

News Spreads; Great Crowd.

The news spread over Chicago like wildfire that the fire chief had been killed surrounded by a squad of his heroes, who perished with him. Messages of sympathy and concern flew over the telephone and telegraph wires.

The biggest crowd that ever was known to collect in the stockyards at one time witnessed the struggles of the firemen after daybreak and the spreading of the news of the fire and its fatalities.

Watchman Discovers Fire.

A watchman who was making his rounds through the structure discovered the fire. He saw flames in what is known as the hide storeroom in the basement. He at once telephoned an alarm and fled from the building. The flames spread rapidly and with the arrival of the first companies of firemen a general alarm was sounded which brought over 15 companies of firemen to the scene.

Fire broke out at 4 a. m. and a spectacular battle with the flames ensued until, at 5 a. m., a terrific explosion of ammonia in the beef cold storage section of the building sent a heavy canopy crashing down on a squad of firemen who were directing their operations from a loading platform.

Send Many Calls for Help.

The fatalities all occurred in one place on the loading platform. When the blaze first was discovered and an alarm turned in the first of the fire department forces to arrive on the scene sent in a 4-11 call for help. Following this came special call after special call, until fifty streams of water were trained on the blaze.

A stubborn fight occurred between the flames and the firemen. The fire spread to many parts of the building despite the efforts of the men who sought to check it.

Sharp Blast, Then Death.

The fight had continued for an hour when the crash came. Away up in the roof of the structure, near a point directly over the loading platform on which stood Fire Chief Horan, Burroughs, his second assistant, Lieutenant Fitzgerald and nearly a score of others, there was a sudden, sharp loud report like the instantaneous rending of a high-pressure boiler.

Portions of the masonry of the building fell away like a child's house of toy building blocks. A large part of this fell on the canopy over the loading platform, tearing the latter away and bearing it to the platform itself which was crushed like an eggshell with its human freight of fire-fighting men.

There were scores of firemen standing on the outskirts of where the bricks fell. Many of these were injured, some of them painfully.

Chief's Body Recovered.

Fire Chief Horan's body was recovered after repeated efforts to move the smoldering debris under which he was buried and removed to the home of his brother, Daniel J. Horan, Sixty first street and Prairie avenue.

The flames spread so rapidly that the firemen were powerless to save the plant. The entire stockyards district was threatened.

The fire was the most disastrous that the department has had to contend with since the Iroquois fire and the holocaust at the Seventy-first street crib.

News of the fire and explosion spread rapidly through the stockyards district and friends and relatives of the firemen gathered around the building, imploring the fire fighters for news of their friends. Policemen from a number of neighboring stations were taxed to keep them from running into the burning building.

Had Money in Lumps.

Charles H. Rosenberg of Bavaria had lumps on his shoulders, elbows, and hips when he arrived here from Hamburg on the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria. In fact, there was a series of smaller lumps along his spine, much like a mountain range, as it is presented on a bas-relief map.

The lumps were about the size of good Oregon apples, and as Rosenberg passed before the immigration doctor for observation, the doctor said softly to himself, "See that lump." Then he asked Mr. Rosenberg to step aside.

"You seem like a healthy man," said the doctor, "but I cannot pass you until I know the origin of those lumps on your body." "Ah, it is not a sickness," laughed the man from Bavaria. "Those swellings is money."

Taking off his coat he broke open a sample lump and showed that it contained $500 in American bank notes. He informed the doctor that he had $11,000 in all, with which he was going to purchase an apple orchard in Oregon.

He was admitted to the country.—New York Tribune.

Why He Laughed.

Miss Mattie belonged to the old south, and she was entertaining a guest of distinction.

On the morning following his arrival she told Tillie, the little colored maid, to take a pitcher of fresh water to Mr. Firman's room, and to say that Miss Mattie sent him her compliments, and that if he wanted a bath, the bathroom was at his service.

When Tillie returned she said:

"I tol' him, Miss Mattie, en' he laughed fit to bus' hisself."

"Why did he laugh, Tillie?"

"I dunno."

"What did you tell him?"

"Jus' what you tol' me to."

"Tillie, tell me exactly what you said."

"I banged de doah, and I said, 'Mr. Firman, Miss Mattie sends you her lub, and she says, 'Now you can get up and wash yo'self!'"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Where He Was Queer.

The negro, on occasions, displays a fine discrimination in the choice of words.

"Who's the best white-washer in town?" inquired the new resident.

"Ale Hall am a bo'nd a'tist with a whitewash brush, sah," answered the colored patriarch eloquently.

"Well, tell him to come and whitewash my chicken house tomorrow."

Uncle Jacob shook his head dubiously.

"Ah don' believe, sah, ah'd engage Ale Hall to whitewash a chicken house, sah."

"Why, didn't you say he was a good whitewasher?"

"Yes, sah, a powe'ful good whitewasher, sah; but mighty queer about a chicken house, sah, mighty queer!"—Mack's National Monthly.

MAKE UP YOUR MIND.

If you'll make up your mind to be Contented with your lot
And with the optimists agree
That trouble's soon forgot,

You'll be surprised to find, I guess,
Despite misfortune's darts,
What constant springs of happiness
Lie hid in human hearts;

What sunny gleams and golden dreams
The passing years unfold,
How soft and warm the lovelight beams
When you are growing old.

Thanks to Burnt Cork.

"Gosh! But the colored race is a-comin' to the front fast!" whispered innocent Uncle Hiram, at the vaudeville show as the black-face comedian was boisterously applauded.

"Yes, indeed," smiled the city man; "anyone can see that that fellow is a self-made negro."

Lo, the Rich Indian.

The per capita wealth of the Indian is approximately $2,130, that for other Americans is only a little more than $1,300. The lands owned by the Indians are rich in oil, timber and other natural resources of all kinds. Some of the best timber land in the United States is owned by Indians.

The value of their agricultural lands runs up in the millions. The ranges which they possess support about 500,000 sheep and cattle, owned by lessees, bringing in a revenue of more than $272,000 to the various tribes besides providing feed for more than 1,500,000 head of horses, cattle, sheep and goats belonging to the Indians themselves. Practically the only asphalt deposits in the United States are on Indian lands.—Red Man.

No Slang for Her.

"Slip me a brace of cackles!" ordered the chesty-looking man with a bored air, as he perched on the first stool in the lunchroom.

"A what?" asked the waitress, as she placed a glass of water before him.

"Adam and Eve flat on their backs! A pair of sunnysiders!" said the young man in an exasperated tone.

"You got me, kid," returned the waitress. "Watcha want?"

"Eggs up," said the young man. "'E-g-g-s,' the kind that come before the hen or after, I never knew which."

"Why didn't you say so in the first place?" asked the waitress. "You'd a had 'em by this time."

"Well, of all things——" said the young man.

"I knew what he was drivin' at all the time," began the waitress as the young man departed. "But he's one of them fellers that thinks they can get by with anything. He don't know that they're using plain English now in restaurants."

The League of Politeness.

The League of Politeness has been formed in Berlin. It aims at inculcating better manners among the people of Berlin. It was founded upon the initiative of Fraulein Cecelie Meyer, who was inspired by an existing organization in Rome. In deference to the parent organization the Berlin league has chosen the Italian motto, "Pro gentilezza." This will be emblazoned upon an attractive little medal worn where Germans are accustomed to wear the insignia of orders. The idea is that a glaance at the "talisman" will annihilate any inclination to indulge in bad temper or discourteous language. "Any polite person" is eligible for membership.

The "Country Churchyard."

Those who recall Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard" will remember that the peaceful spot where "the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep" is identified with St. Giles', Stoke Poges, Buckinghamshire. In the prosaic pages of a recent issue of the Gazette there appears an order in council providing that ordinary interments are henceforth forbidden in the churchyard.

Economy.

The late former Governor Allen D. Candler of Georgia was famous in the south for his quaint humor.

"Governor Candler," said a Gainesville man, "once abandoned cigars for a pipe at the beginning of the year. He stuck to his resolve till the year's end. Then he was heard to say:

"'By actual calculation, I have saved by smoking a pipe instead of cigars this year $208. But where is it?'"

Moslem Traditions.

Ramadan is the month exalted by Moslems above all others. In that month the Koran—according to Moslem tradition—was brought down by Gabriel from heaven and delivered to men in small sections. In that month, Mohammed was accustomed to retire from Mecca to the cave of Hira, for prayer and meditation. In that month Abraham, Moses and other prophets received their divine revelations. In that month the "doors of heaven are always open, the passages to hell are shut, and the devils are chained." So run the traditions.—The Christian Herald.

A Medical Compromise.

"You had two doctors in consultation last night, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"What did they say?"

"Well, one recommended one thing and the other recommended something else."

"A deadlock, eh?"

"No, they finally told me to mix 'em!"

Hard on the Mare.

Twice, as the bus slowly wended its way up the steep Cumberland Gap, the door at the rear opened and slammed. At first those inside paid little heed; but the third time demanded to know why they should be disturbed in this fashion.

"Whist," cautioned the driver, doan't spake so loud; she'll overhear us."

"Who?"

"The mare. Spake low! Shure, Oi'm desavin th' crayture. Everry toime she 'ears th' door close, she thinks won o' yez is gettin' down ter walk up th' hill, an' that sort o' raises her sperrits."—Success Magazine.

Exaggeration.

On her arrival in New York Mme. Sara Bernhardt, replying to a compliment on her youthful appearance, said: "The secret of my youth? It is the good God—and then, you know, I work all the time. But I am a great-grandmother," she continued, thoughtfully, "so how can these many compliments be true? I am afraid my friends are exaggerating."

Mme. Bernhardt's laugh, spontaneous as a girl's, prompted a chorus of "No, no!"

"Yes," said the actress, "unconscious exaggeration, like the French nurse on the boulevard. Our boulevards are much more crowded than your streets, you know, and, although we have numerous accidents, things aren't quite as bad as the nurse suggested.

"Her little charge, a boy of six, begged her to stop a while in a crowd, surrounding an automobile accident. 'Please wait,' the little boy said, 'Want to see the man who was run over.' No; hurry,' his nurse answered. 'There will be plenty more to see further on.'"

Economy in Art.

"Of course," said Mr. Sirius Barker, "I want my daughter to have some sort of an artistic education. I think I'll have her study singing."

"Why not art or literature?"

"Art spoils canvas and paint and literature wastes reams of paper. Singing merely produces a temporary disturbance of the atmosphere."

Home Thought.

"It must have been frightful," said Mrs. Bossim to her husband, who was in the earthquake. "Tell me what was your first thought when you awakened in your room at the hotel and heard the alarm."

"My first thought was of you," answered Mr. Bossim.

"How noble!"

"Yes. First thing I knew, a vase on the mantel caught me on the ear, then a chair whirled in my direction and when I jumped to the middle of the room four or five books and a framed picture struck me all at once."

Even after saying that, he affected to wonder what made her so angry for the remainder of the evening.—Mack's National Monthly.

New Process of Staining Glass.

The art of coloring glass has been lost and refound, jealously guarded and maliciously stolen so many times in the history of civilization that it seems almost impossible to say anything new on glass staining. Yet a process has been discovered for making the stained glass used in windows which is a departure from anything known at the present time. What the Venetians and the Phoenicians knew of it we cannot tell.

The glass first receives its design in mineral colors and the whole is then fired in a heat so intense that the coloring matter and the glass are indissolubly fused. The most attractive feature of this method is that the surface acquires a peculiar pebbled character in the heat, so that when the glass is in place the lights are delightfully soft and mellow.

In making a large window in many shades each panel is separately moulded and bent and the sections are assembled in a metal frame.

Our Voices.

I think our conversational soprano as sometimes overheard in the cars arising from a group of young persons who have taken the train at one of our great industrial centers, for instance, young persons of the female sex, we will say, who have bustled in full dressed, engaged in loud, strident speech, and who, after free discussion have fixed on two or more double seats, which having secured, they proceed to eat apples and hand round daguerreotypes—I say, I think the conversational soprano, heard under these circumstances, would not be among the allurements the old enemy would put in requisition were he getting up a new temptation of St. Anthony.

There are sweet voices among us we all know, and voices not musical it may be, to those who hear them for the first time, yet sweeter to us than any we shall hear until we listen to some warbling angel in the overture to that eternity of blissful harmonies we hope to enjoy. But why should I tell lies? If my friends love me, it is because I try to tell the truth. I never heard but two voices in my life that frightened me by their sweetness.—Holmes.

What About Brain Food?

This Question Came Up in the Recent Trial for Libel.

A "Weekly" printed some criticisms of the claims made for our foods. It evidently did not fancy our reply printed in various newspapers, and brought suit for libel. At the trial some interesting facts came out.

Some of the chemical and medical experts differed widely.

The following facts, however, were quite clearly established:

Analysis of brain by an unquestionable authority, Geoghegan, shows of Mineral Salts, Phosphoric Acid and Potash combined (Phosphate of Potash), 2.91 per cent of the total, 5.33 of all Mineral Salts.

This is over one-half.

Beaunis, another authority, shows "Phosphoric Acid combined" and Potash 73.44 per cent from a total of 101.07.

Considerable more than one-half of Phosphate of Potash.

Analysis of Grape-Nuts shows: Potassium and Phosphorus, (which join and make Phosphate of Potash), is considerable more than one-half of all the mineral salts in the food.

Dr. Geo. W. Carey, an authority on the constituent elements of the body, says: "The gray matter of the brain is controlled entirely by the inorganic cell-salt, Potassium Phosphate (Phosphate of Potash). This salt unites with albumen and by the addition of oxygen creates nerve fluid or the gray matter of the brain. Of course, there is a trace of other salts and other organic matter in nerve fluid, but Potassium Phosphate is the chief factor, and has the power within itself to attract, by its own law of affinity, all things needed to manufacture the elixir of life."

Further on he says: "The beginning and end of the matter is to supply the lacking principle, and in molecular form, exactly as nature furnishes it in vegetables, fruits and grain. To supply deficiencies—this is the only law of cure."

The natural conclusion is that if Phosphate of Potash is the needed mineral element in brain and you use food which does not contain it, you have brain fag because its daily loss is not supplied.

On the contrary, if you eat food known to be rich in this element, you place before the life forces that which nature demands for brain-building.

In the trial a sneer was uttered because Mr. Post announced that he had made years of research in this country and some clinics of Europe, regarding the effect of the mind on digestion of food.

But we must be patient with those who sneer at facts they know nothing about.

Mind does not work well on a brain that is broken down by lack of nourishment.

A peaceful and evenly poised mind is necessary to good digestion.

Worry, anxiety, fear, hate, &c., &c., directly interfere with or stop the flow of Ptyalin, the digestive juice of the mouth, and also interfere with the flow of the digestive juices of stomach and pancreas.

Therefore, the mental state of the individual has much to do (more than suspected) with digestion.

This trial has demonstrated:

That Brain is made of Phosphate of Potash as the principal Mineral Salt, added to albumen and water.

That Grape-Nuts contains that element as more than one-half of all its mineral salts.

A healthy brain is important, if one would "do things" in this world.

A man who sneers at "Mind" sneers at the best and least understood part of himself. That part which some folks believe links us to the Infinite.

Mind asks for a healthy brain upon which to act, and Nature has defined a way to make a healthy brain and renew it day by day as it is used up from work of the previous day.

Nature's way to rebuild is by the use of food which supplies the things required.

Estimated that Iowa Crop Can Be Increased that Amount

EMPLOY PRACTICAL METHODS

Iowa General Assembly Will Be Asked for Increased Appropriation for Extension and Short Course Work at Ames

Des Moines.—One of the important measures coming before the legislature this winter will be a bill providing for a largely increased appropriation for the extension and short course work of the agricultural college at Ames. The backers of this measure are in hopes the present appropriation of $32,000 per annum can be increased to $100,000 and are confident that the returns upon such an expenditure would be so pronounced and so beneficial to the state as a whole that there will be little difficulty in inducing future legislatures to renew the appropriation.

The movement had its inception in the agricultural committee of the Des Moines Commercial Club over a year ago. On this committee are such men as James Atkinson, editor of the Homestead, Keller Bell, of the Farmers' Cooperative Produce Company; Charles Clark, editor of the Register and Farmer; John Simpson, secretary of the State Fair; E. T. Meredith, publisher of Successful Farming. The committee was interested through statistics gathered by Secretary Botsford, of the Commercial Club of results obtained by short course farmers as compared with the average farm results of the state. Since the plan was adopted others have become interested. Among these are the Western Grain Growers' Association, the Iowa League of Commercial Clubs, the Iowa Corn Growers' Association, the Iowa Bankers' Club, the Iowa Small Grain Association, the industrial departments of all of the Iowa railroads and many others.

The short course and extension work of agricultural colleges was first developed in Iowa about ten years ago by Professor P. G. Holden. At this time about $32,000 per annum is expended for this work in Iowa. Illinois has taken up the work and is spending about $200,000 per annum. Wisconsin is spending about $85,000. Kansas is spending vastly more than Iowa. In those states the demands of the rural population are being met and rural population is not decreasing as in Iowa. In Iowa the demands of the rural population are not being nearly satisfied and the tendency is toward larger farms and a decreased rural population. It is the firm belief of those back of the movement that it is the one practical solution of the problem of increasing rural population. They believe that it will result in better farming, larger yields and the consequent decrease in the size of the farm unit with a corresponding increase in rural population. They believe that it will result in soil preservation, the reduction of the investment necessary to productive and remunerative farming and a lessening in the labor of the farmer.

Searching investigation has disclosed the fact that the successful farmers of Iowa are following the methods taught by the extensions department; that the production of farms where practical methods as taught in the school and the short course are followed, is larger, that the profits are bigger.

To illustrate: A tabulation was made of the results obtained on 311 farms in Iowa conducted by men who have attended one or more short courses. These included farmers in nearly every county in the state. The figures are for the 1909 crop season. These farmers had an average of 63 bushels of corn to the acre. The average for the state was 32.9 bushels. They had 54 bushels of oats to the acre, the average was 27.4 for the state. They had 36 bushels of wheat to the acre. The average was 20.5 for the state. There were yields that went as high as 91 bushels of corn. Meritt Green, in Marshall county, reported an average of over 40 bushels of winter wheat in a ninety-acre field. Fred McCulloch, of Iowa county, reported better than 62 bushels of oats. Quite a testimonial for the short course. But there is more to it than the figures would imply. It costs about $11 an acre to produce corn in Iowa. This would make the average net for the state $5.50 the acre. The average for the 311 short course farmers, after adding $2 more per acre for picking and hauling, would be $18.50 per acre, or more than three times as much. In other words the short course farmer with ten acres of $100 Iowa land, is producing as much corn as the average Iowa farmer is with 30 acres of $100 land. The saving is not only in the labor, but in the investment. A multiplication of results such as are given here can have but one tendency, to-wit, to decrease the size of the farm unit in Iowa, which is now about 159 acres. In this compilation the prevailing price of 50 cents for the 1909 season was used.

In the season of 1909-10 there were 93 applications to the extension department at Ames for short courses. Of these but twenty-two were granted. The reason was that the college did not have the funds or the men. It is claimed that if the college had $100,000 for this work it could reach every county in the state every year and give consecutive experimental demonstrations on the county farms in each county as well as short courses. As it is but twenty-two counties are reached and the work is not carried on consecutively year after year, but is conducted with a view to getting around to all of the neighborhoods desiring the short course as often as is possible. Last year about 5,500 farmers were reached. There are 209,000 farms in Iowa. If a short course could be held in each county 25,000 farmers could be reached each year on the basis of the attendance in 1909. But with the guarantee of a consecutive and well planned course from year to year, it is reasonable to presume that the attendance would be largely increased and that the major portion of the farmers of Iowa would soon be enlisted in the work. If but 10 per cent of the results obtained by the 311 farmers cited herein could be obtained, it would mean an increase of $2,000,000 per annum in the value of the corn crop alone, taking an average of 9,000,000 acres planted as a basis. The returns would be proportionate for small grains, hogs, cattle, dairy products, etc., for all of the departments are taught at the short course. And what is more important is that the results are lasting and come year after year, once the farmer starts along the improved lines.

Many readers of this article have attended the lectures given on the seed corn, soils, dairy, small grain and breakfast bacon specials operated by the railroads and conducted by the members of the faculty from Ames. You have some idea of the benefits these half hour talks have been to the farmers and of the good that has come from them. What would the results be if these men could come into your county for six to ten days in each year and devote that many days to the educational work instead of thirty or forty minutes? What if early in each spring they sent men into your county to gather samples of your seed and to make records of your feeding and milking results and to conduct an experimental plot on your county farm and used the data of the records and the experiments in each short course held?

December 10, there was held in Des Moines, a meeting that was attended by over 1,000 representatives of the grain trade, the railroads, commercial organizations, agricultural colleges, terminal grain markets, etc., besides several hundred of the best farmers in Iowa. At this meeting Henry Wallace, Professor Curtis, Professor Holden, the grain tradesmen, farmers and others were a unit in their advocacy of a greatly increased appropriation for this kind of work to be expended through the extension department of the agricultural college. They are men who have studied and looked for results, many of them men who are securing results, and all are interested in the future of Iowa to the extent of millions invested in the state. They want Iowa's resources advertised not only to the outsider, but to our own people.

The slogan of the meeting was "The State Government is a Business Organization. Give us less Politics and a Lot More Business."

The good business man spends 2 per cent of his income for publicity. If the state will spend much less than one-tenth of one per cent of its assessed valuation on extension work, it can put an experimental plot and a fully equipped short course into every county in the state and do it every year. Is it worth while? If you think it is, it is up to you to talk the matter over with your representative and your senator and make it your business to see that it is done.

The man who owns Iowa land should be interested. It means a bigger production, a higher rental and a better price for the land. The farmer who rents should be interested. It means a bigger crop from a smaller tract with less outlay for labor and rent money. The country merchant should be interested. It means more farms and more crop money and more bodies to cloth and mouths to feed. The owner of town business properties should be interested. The rental value of his property depends upon its capacity to earn money for the tennant. The city jobber and the city manufacturer should be interested.

HIRAM CARPENTER'S WONDERFUL CURE OF PSORIASIS.

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. D.'s. psoriasis, and others leprosy, commencing on my scalp; and in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skilful doctors, it slowly but surely extended until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in the form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there would be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet on my bed, some of them half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything, almost, that could be thought of, without any relief. The 12th of June I started West, in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One Dr. —— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs; feet badly swollen; toe-nails came off; finger-nails dead and hard as a bone; hair dead, dry and lifeless as old straw. O my God! how I did suffer.

"My sister wouldn't give up; said, 'We will try Cuticura.' Some was applied to one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got Cuticura Resolvent, Ointment and Soap. I commenced by taking Cuticura Resolvent three time a day after meals; had a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. Result: returned to my home in just six weeks from the time I left, and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper. Hiram E. Carpenter, Henderson, N. Y."

The above remarkable testimonial was written January 19, 1880, and is republished because of the permanency of the cure. Under date of April 22, 1910, Mr. Carpenter wrote from his present home, 610 Walnut St. So., Lansing, Mich.: "I have never suffered a return of the psoriasis and although many years have passed I have not forgotten the terrible suffering I endured before using the Cuticura Remedies."

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.
